SPECIAL POWER OF PROFESSORS STIRS CAPITAL

'Brain Trust' Called Above Cabinet.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—Everywhere you go in Washington people are discussing the Roosevelt "brain trust" headed by Prof. Raymond Moley, nominally assistant secretary of state.

Everybody wants to know what the brain trust is doing, what it is going to do next, whether it is true that the brain trust is ruling the country behind the White House throne, whether it really has changed our form of government to a constitutional dictatorship, whether it is actually establishing a new economic order, whether the professoriat's objective is Fascism, communism or what?

Opinion Sharply Divided.

Official Washington has been rent asunder by the advent of the professoriat. Sides have been taken and disputation has become feverish in capitol cloakrooms, in locker rooms, at teas and other cocktail parties. Either you are for the brain trust or against it. Either you point with pride to the new deal that has sprung full panoplied from the brain of the professoriat or you view with alarm the dictatorship, the farm commodity allotment, the inflation of the currency, the devaluation of the dollar, the minimum wage, the maximum price, the shorter work day, planned economic controlled capitalism and other features of the new dispensation from on high.

The "brain trust" completely overshadows the cabinet. It is reputed to have more influence with the President, to know what he is thinking, if not inspiring the thought, to be able to swing appointments to fat jobs and to be "in the know" generally of what is going on beneath the surface of official life. It has taken the professors from various salt water and fresh water colleges to put the cabinet members in their places at last—merely department heads, glorified chief clerks. On a routine administration matter you go to a cabinet member, but on matters of policy and the higher statesmanship you consult the professoriat.

Carefully Study Professors.

Everybody wants to know the professors who are guiding our destinies. Office seekers snuggle up to them in the belief that one word from them whispered into the presidential ear will be more potent than the combined indorsements of Postmaster General Jim Farley, chief patronage dispenser, and Secretary Louis Howe, the renowned President maker.

Newspaper reporters cultivate them, knowing that each one of them has on the hip today the draft of a bill that will become the administration measure of tomorrow.

Hostesses vie for them as guests of honor. Once the palm of social entertaining went to the hostess who could muster the largest number of cabinet members at one time. Now cabinet members are a drug on the prandial market. Professors are the fed. Postprandially the professors draw the crowd in the drawing room, leaving the cabinet members to entertain each other.

Not yet completely repealed by the brain trust, the law of supply and demand is operating impressively in the social market for pedagogues. Though numerous, there are not enough professors to go round. They are being rationed to the hostesses. And as for each professor, his dining out average already equals that of former Vice President Curtis, which was 1,000.

Going Back to School.

All Washington is going to school to the professors, learning all about political science and economics. Debutantes hang on their exposition of the quantitative theory of money, the law of diminishing returns and the intricacies of foreign exchange. Book stores are selling their books like hot cakes. Their works are not available at the library of congress, the volumes having been withdrawn by senators and congressmen for perusal in an effort to plumb this new force in the scheme of government which has put congress also in its place.

Chief of the brain trust, Prof. Moley, a square shouldered, pinkish cheeked man, just turned 46, with graying brown hair lightly thatching a high domed head, occupies a suite of offices at the state department surrounded by a bevy of attractive young women secretaries, including an honor student of one of his political science classes at Barnard college. He still

COVE CREEK IS WAITIN' FOR A DAM AND A LAKE

Just Waitin' for U.S. Millions to Roll In.

[The Tennessee river basin is about to become the laboratory of a vast federal experiment in social and economic planning. This project touches seven states, running from West Virginia southwest to Mississippi, embracing 640,000 square miles, including much of the hill country of Kentucky and Tennessee. It has been estimated that it is a 25 year program and will cost a billion dollars. The start is to be made at Cove Creek dam on the Clinch river in eastern Tennessee. Here is to be found new power to turn the idle wheels at Muscle Shoals all the year. The following article is the result of three days of observation by Mr. Kinsley in that district, tramping through the hills and stopping at wayside stores.]

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Knoxville, Tenn., May 13.—[Special.]—"What you been doin' today, Willie?" asked Grandpa Morgan.

"About as near nothin' as I ever done in my life," said Willie, a middle aged man with motheaten cap, faded overalls, mud caked shoes and mild blue eyes.

Grandpa spat carefully at a crack in front of the grocery and shied a pebble at a baby chick that had adventured up the rocky hill to the pike where the terrible juggernauts roll.

"Well, I guess money be growin' on bushes when they get the dam at Cove Creek goin'," said Grandpa.

"Dunno," said Willie without enthusiasm. "Hern they had a hitch on that. Don't think it'll ever get through."

Willie gazed at the evening hills and the old graveyard under the dark cedars across the road. A cow bawled for her calf from a nearby hill. The mother hen called for her chickens and ruffled her brown wings. The birds sang their sundown melodies. The creek made its minor song in the hollow. Tow headed grandsons dug their toes in the dust. Smoke arose from a cabin across the gulch and Willie after a glance at a woman and a brood of children outlined there untangled his legs from the worn bench and said he would go home.

Barters Hen for Flour.

"Don't hurry, Willie," said Grandpa, but Willie said he guessed they would be wanting him and shouldered a bag of flour, for which he had deposited in part payment a disconsolate hen. After much figuring it was found that he owed 54 cents and he promised that his "woman" would pay it next Wednesday.

For years Willie and Grandpa have had a dream tantilizingly held before them. It was the government coming along and lifting them up to affluence by the building of Cove Creek dam. At intervals for thirteen years the moribund chambers of commerce in all the little towns of the valley have been stirred into spasmodic hope and activity, only to see a stern Republican government turn down the project or something else of more immediate importance would happen, such as a drought, or a flood, or a mine disaster.

There was always a "depression" of some kind, it seemed. The farmers never had money enough to speculate with and so the last few years have been about as usual. Willie and grandpa and their kind never heard of the Chicago exposition or the farmers' holiday movement. A black cloud over the hills was of more importance.

Shore Line of 800 Miles.

Now the dam was coming, but they did not believe it. They did not realize that in a few months the federal armies of reconstruction would be in here, that in a few years all this pike and these valley farms would be at the bottom of a lake 53,000 acres in extent with a shore line of more than 800 miles.

It was up this valley that Daniel Boone and his coonskin capped pioneers made their way against the Indians to Cumberland Gap and the west. It was down this road that Gen. Bragg and the bedraggled confederates retreated. Now a new turn had come in history.

A giant hand had reached out from Washington to take this entire people up and give them new lives to rebuild this straggling backwash of civilization into a new "rural industrial" grouping, cut down these old forests, move towns and railroads and highways, and build new ones and a new people.

They will never do anything with grandpa. He will simply move over

ALL EXCEPT 3 HELD FOR ATTACK ON IOWA JUDGE ARE RELEASED

Le Mars, Ia., May 13.—(AP)—All except three of the persons arrested by the Iowa National Guard in connection with the abduction and maltreatment of Judge C. C. Bradley several weeks ago were released today.

The three, Richard Popken, Martin Rosburg, and John Sokolovsky, appeared before Judge Earl Peters and waived arraignment. They were given until 9 a. m. next Wednesday to enter pleas.

Sokolovsky was charged with conspiracy to assault and was held under $2,000 bonds. The others face charges of conspiracy and assault with intent to do great bodily harm. They were held under bonds totaling $3,000.

Officials are still searching for three other alleged participants to the abduction.

Teachers Get Assurance of Pay This Week

Assured of three months' back pay by the end of the week, 7,000 school teachers and their friends who had gathered yesterday in Grant park at Congress street called off plans for a loop parade and demonstration which was to have been held during the late afternoon.

By Saturday at the latest, it was estimated last night, the city's 14,000 teachers and 4,000 other school employés should have checks totaling $12,627,000 in their hands. This will be the largest single cash pay day since the school system began to fall behind in the payment of salaries and probably the largest in the history of the schools. Before the system fell into financial difficulties the teachers were paid every month.

Banks to Buy Warrants.

The pay day was assured through the promise given yesterday by Mayor Kelly and Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, that Chicago's five large downtown banks would buy $12,627,000 in 1932 warrants not later than Wednesday or Thursday. The salaries will be for October, November, and December, 1932.

When these back salaries are paid the teachers and other educational employés will still have owing them salaries dating from Jan. 1, 1933, to the present. James B. McCahey, a new school trustee, has suggested that they be paid for this period in 1933 school board warrants. This proposition has been put up to the teachers for consideration.

By calling off yesterday's parade the teachers heeded friendly warnings given the night before by Mayor Kelly, School Superintendent Bogan and several bankers that a demonstration such as planned would endanger their chances of getting any cash.

Committee Visits Mayor.

Before the order to disperse was given Mayor Kelly and Mr. Traylor were visited by a teachers' committee comprised of John M. Fewkes, Milton Raymer, and Earl Solem. The conference with Mr. Traylor ended happily for the teachers when he gave out a written statement, reading in part as follows:

"I am happy to tell you that five principal loop banks have completed negotiations with the school board for the purchase of 1932 school warrants in amount of approximately $13,000,000. The detailed work of the preparation for the completion of the transaction will require two or three days, but so far as the banks are concerned they will be ready by not later than Wednesday or Thursday, May 17 or 18, to take up the warrants."

Similar assurances were given the committee when they called on the mayor. In a formal statement Mr. Kelly recalled that in a radio talk Friday night he had mentioned it would be bad form to hold a protest demonstration at this time. He again requested that no demonstration be held.

Read Two Messages.

The committee hurried to Grant park where they found the teachers and others assembled. Four high school bands were playing. Mr. Traylor's message and the mayor's statement were read. Both were greeted with cheers. A few minutes later the park was cleared of teachers.

Mr. Fewkes asserted later that the warnings had not caused cancellation of the loop parade. This was done out of respect for Mayor Kelly, he said. The new mayor is helping the teachers and it was thought only fair to give him as much time as he needs, Fewkes said. Other teacher leaders said that new demonstrations will be held unless the 1933 salary situation is remedied.

"We'll redouble the pressure," threatened Fewkes.

Purchase of the 1932 warrants by the banks will involve complicated turnovers. It will also mean rush business for the board of education paymaster. Harry H. Brackett, auditor, said last night that he expects to have the checks in the teachers' hands by Friday or Saturday.

TRIBUNE INAUGURATES A PAGE OF PICTURES IN SUNDAY EDITIONS

Monumental carved stairways upon which the kings of Persia trod twenty-five centuries ago are reproduced in pictures today upon the back page of the second section of THE TRIBUNE.

These stairways were uncovered at Persepolis, ancient capital of the Persian empire, by an expedition from the Oriental institute of the University of Chicago, of which Dr. James H. Breasted is director. Further details of the discovery and history of the stairways will be found on page 7. Permission to use the pictures was granted by the Oriental institute and by Charles Breasted, the doctor's son.

A full page of pictures, illustrating events of importance, will be used in THE TRIBUNE each Sunday hereafter.

Blackmailer Shot as He Gets $25,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., May 13.—[Special.]—A blackmailer who sought to extort $25,000 from Lloyd R. Smith, millionaire president of the A. O. Smith corporation, makers of welded pipes and automobile parts, tonight was shot in the back and captured by a police squad as he was just within reach of his goal—the $25,000.

He was taken to the General hospital where physicians said he probably would die. He identified himself as Frank H. Jess, 2238 South 57th avenue, Milwaukee.

The shooting and capture of the extortionist ended a five weeks scare during which Mr. Smith had received five threatening letters, each warning him that he would be kidnaped or killed if he did not comply with the writer's demands. Good police work brought the blackmailer to time.

Gives Letter to Police.

When Mr. Smith received the first letter he turned it over to police. There was nothing in it to indicate where he was to leave the $25,000 demanded. Each of the next three letters, received a week apart, equally was uninformative. Finally, on Friday, Mr. Smith received the fifth and last note.

This contained specific instructions—that he should leave the money in bills of $5, $10 and $20 denominations under a signpost in Sunnyslope road, 200 feet south of Bluemound road. At that point, the letter stated, would be found a can, and the money was to be put inside the can. The time was specified at 10 o'clock Saturday night, which was tonight.

Accordingly preparations were made to carry out the instructions, but not by Mr. Smith.

Dresses in Smith's Clothes.

For this purpose the policeman dressed in Mr. Smith's clothes and drove the latter's sixteen cylinder car. Also the policeman received from Mr. Smith a package containing $25,000 in real money, in bills of the denominations designated. All were marked. It was decided to use money, instead of bogus bills, in case police fell down in getting the man. Should he get the money, the marked bills might trap him later.

Three hours before Riley started out other policemen concealed themselves near Bluemound and Sunnyslope roads. These men were Lawrence Bailey, John Zilazy, Martin Fallon, John Niederporn, Paul Heinrich, and Charles Nowalsowski.

Arriving at the crossroads, the policemen came upon an ingenious scheme arranged by the blackmailer. This was in connection with the tin can which his letter stated would be found and into which the money should be put.

Wire Attached to Can.

Attached to the can was a wire which extended 75 feet into the field. It was the plan of the extortionist to conceal himself deep in the field, out of sight, and after the money was placed in the can to draw the prize to him.

At 9:15 a man—later identified as Jess—walked over to the can and inspected it. Then he walked into the field, about 20 feet from the road, and waited. At 10 promptly Sergt. Riley drove up in Mr. Smith's car. He put the $25,000 into the can, then drove off.

Nothing happened immediately. Ten minutes passed, and then, like a mysterious creature, the can began moving slowly across the road. Police swung into action. Sergt. Bailey arose from his hiding place and announced himself. Jess leaped up and started running. Bailey fired one charge from his shotgun, bringing him down.

The other policemen, two carrying submachine guns, surrounded the fallen blackmailer. Shortly afterward he was taken to the hospital. In a moment of consciousness he identified himself. When asked why he had tried to blackmail Mr. Smith he replied: "Wait. If I get better I'll tell you."

HONOR DESIGNER OF VALLEY FORGE FORTIFICATIONS

Valley Forge, Pa., May 13.—(AP)—France and America joined hands today to pay homage to Gen. Louis Lebegue du Portail, French engineer who designed the Valley Forge fortifications for the American revolutionary army.

GANG LEADERS AND ALLIES IN COURTNEY NET

Secret Inquiry Nears Grand Jury.

Clean Up! Union Told

State's Attorney Courtney appeals to rank and file of Chicago Teamsters' union to oust their racketeer leaders and announces he will supervise a fair union election to enable the members to do this. Details on page 2.

Five managers of the Capone syndicate, three of their lawyers and four or five business men have been caught in a net which State's Attorney Courtney has been weaving quietly in the last few weeks to entrap Chicago's master racketeers. It is reported that a majority and perhaps all of these individuals will be indicted within the next three weeks. The charge will be conspiracy to commit extortion and malicious mischief.

To carry out the job of breaking up the rackets, Mr. Courtney has retained Edwin J. Raber as special assistant state's attorney. Mr. Courtney is represented as having no illusions that the recent clamor about "reform" of the racket infested trade unions and associations will reflect any permanent benefit. He is said to be convinced that the only way to break up the rackets is by conviction and imprisonment not only of the gangsters, who usually "stand the rap," but the lawyers and business men who split the proceeds of extortion.

Inquiry Moves Quietly.

To this end Mr. Raber has been boring for four weeks toward the inner citadel of the big rackets—the Capone syndicate. His operations have been unknown until the last few days, even to the racketeers themselves. In Mr. Raber the state's attorney has the services of a prosecutor reputed to be the most relentless in Cook county and the most taciturn. Even now, for publication, Mr. Raber professes "not to know a thing about the current racket situation."

But without the uproar of spectacular raids, without publicity of any kind, it became known last night, Mr. Raber has been getting most of the evidence considered necessary to put the rulers of racketdom behind the bars. Among these rulers, it may be said, are Murray Humphries, William [Three Fingered Jack] White, Marcus [Studdy] Looney, William [Klondike] O'Donnell, and James [Fur] Sammons.

From Higher Walks in Life.

Lined up with these terrorists when they are arraigned is expected to be the most remarkable assortment of defendants ever called before the bar in Criminal court—unless Raber's plans go awry. There will be not only the shady business men, whose big profits have caused them to be suspected by their competitors, but several persons from the so-called higher walks of life.

Among the prospective defendants, it is learned, will be a supposedly reputable business man, who has shared the throne with Humphries in the trucking and transportation agency, a vertical trust of unions and trade associations, which the pair are reported to have used to control the trucking of most of the city's commodities from their unloading at the freight yard to delivery at the consumer's home.

The indictment of this business man cannot be forecast positively, it is said, but his name is sure to be involved in the grand jury chamber and at the trial.

Another in the Net.

An individual more certain to be indicted, it is learned, will be one long known as counsellor to Chicago labor unions. Mr. Raber is reported to have proof that this person wrung an income of $25,000 from a short term in a collusive racket between a union and an industrial association, and spent other thousands enforcing discipline by illegal means.

Mr. Raber is represented as only slightly interested in the legion of small fry bombers, acid tossers and sluggers who police the racket ridden industries. Except for a chosen few of these hirelings, who may be indicted to club them into turning state's evidence, Raber's big stick will be laid on the gang syndicate's "Big Five," identified above, and on their intimate allies in business and the legal profession.

In weaving his mesh about the racketeers Mr. Raber has had help from two powerful agencies—the federal government and the organized employers. Federal agents have procured him records which he could not get himself and the employers have supplied him with plentiful clews. So complex have been the ramifications of the rackets as exposed that the principal difficulty has been to sift the wheat from the chaff.

To a loop office, apparently bustling with an ordinary commercial law business, the racket victims have gone to tell their stories, secure in the knowledge that their visits would not be revealed to police, press, or racketeers. They have told when they were bombed, why intimidated, and to whom their tribute was paid. They have told who called strikes at their plants and why.

Police Kept Out of View.

Not all the victims have appeared with clean hands. It is said that had a police detail been stationed outside the conference chambers, a few of the choicest extortionists in the rackets might have been tossed into jail. Notwithstanding this, there has been no lack of coöperation by the police. Raber is understood to have insisted, however, that no policeman be seen around him.

At the detective bureau showup last night Chief of Detectives Schoemaker again called attention to the list of thirty-nine public enemies posted on the bulletin board and informed his force that if these men appeared on the streets without being arrested there would be fifty detective transferred out of the bureau.

A picked squad has visited the half dozen haunts of Murray Humphries nightly for the last three nights in search of this public enemy No. 1. The search has been so diligent and so unavailing that Chief Schoemaker is reported convinced of the truth of the story that Humphries is lying low at Hot Springs, Ark.

"Cleanups" Don't Convince.

Neither Mr. Raber, State's Attorney Courtney nor Mayor Kelly has been much impressed by the "cleansing" of the unions and associations known to have been run by racketeers.

Latest of the "cleanup" manifestations was the announcement by the Chicago Laundry Owners' association that it had desisted from its campaign to organize the independent hand laundry trade through the Laundry and Dyehouse Drivers' union. It was learned that Mr. Raber's office has been directing some uncomfortable pressure on the laundry owners' association and its rulers.

In the laundry owners' setup is a directorate composed of T. Henry Klein, George Fisher, Sam Futransky, Lou Koterski, John Ortlund, Morrie Heichman, Jacob Arkiss, Arthur Brunell, and H. Mulder. Working with them are Jim Gorman of the Tailors' union; George Bendel, ostensible head of the Laundry and Dyehouse Drivers' union, and Ben Alberts, alias Abrams, of the inside workers' union.

The labor chiefs, whose organizations are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, are also in the picture in the cleaning and dyeing industry, where Municipal Judge Francis Borrelli is now reported to be trying to restore order out of a chaos of price slashing, bombing, and acid tossing.

Sheridan Union Under Scrutiny.

Mr. Raber has been studying the laundry and dye industry setups for some weeks, it is known. He has also been examining the situation between the Chicago Coal Merchants' association and the outlaw Chicago Teamsters' union, where John Sheridan runs the coal teamsters, coal hikers, ash wagon drivers, building material drivers, and others.

Mr. Raber has been prosecuting labor rackets at intervals for twenty years and his only conclusion is that they all run on the same pattern. The "heavy men" from the gangs, he says, first step into the union, push aside the authorized leaders, and take command. Their next step is to establish relations with one or more of the important leaders in the bi-lateral trade association and bore in until they have control there also.

Then, Mr. Raber says, comes the extortion in both the union and the trade association, with strikes, boycotts, bombings, sluggings, and sometimes murder as the instruments of discipline. The forthcoming indictments and trials, it was indicated, will follow the course he pursued when he sent Frenchy Mader and eight co-defendants to the penitentiary in 1916 in the conspiracy of the painters' joint council.

Recalls Painters' Council Case.

"We had as tough a crew to deal with in that case as we have today," Mr. Raber said. "They, too, knew how to intimidate the witnesses they had shaken down. The need was to conduct the investigation quietly, go to trial before an honest judge, and brace up the witnesses in court.

"We were on the investigation three months before a word of it was published. Then, with the first news stories, we impaneled a special grand jury on a Friday afternoon and had most of the witnesses sworn and before the jury Monday morning before the public or the gang knew anything about it. When the case came to trial before Judge Kickham Scanlan, the eight defendants were in court, scowling like gorillas. But the judge ordered a partition put up beside the jury box so the juries could see only one corner of the courtroom. The scowls were wasted.

Café of Witness Bombed.

"I remember one restaurant keeper whom the Mader gang had repeatedly shaken down, then beaten up. He was terribly afraid. But we got him on the stand and nursed him along in his pitiful story until in sheer wrath he forgot his fright, stood up on the stand and yelled out an identification of Mader. That night his restaurant was reduced to ruins by a bomb.

"But Judge Scanlan was equal to the situation. Next morning he established that the reported bombing had occurred. Addressing the defendants direct he told them if another act of intimidation occurred he would cancel their bonds and lock them all up for the six weeks' duration of the trial.

The Gang Goes to Prison.

"That day, there was no court. Before the opening next morning, we got all our witnesses together and asked if they were men. There is strength in numbers and we whipped up their flagging courage until they were more wrathful than intimidated. From that day on there was no more hesitancy by witnesses. Mader and his co-defendants went to the penitentiary."

If Mr. Raber has his way, the forthcoming trials will be conducted the same way. There will be no ballyhoo, no revelations of what witnesses told the grand jury, no raids without warrants and no arrests until indictments have been voted. Thereafter, it is indicated, the racketeers had best beware.

Confer on Ways to End Labor Union Racketeering

Chicago Racketeers Preying on Trade as Did Robber Barons of the Middle Ages

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.

From the robber barons of the middle ages to Chicago's racketeers the story of extortion is the same. The robber baron had his friend at court to curry favor with the king. The racketeer has lawyers to plead his cause before the bar and buy him favors from the political powers and police.

The baron had pikemen and arquebusiers patroling the king's highway to levy tribute on the passing merchant but, if the throne were threatened, the baron and his men were at their monarch's service. The racketeer has sluggers, bombers, and machine gunners enforcing discipline among the labor unions and trade associations. And when the power of the political boss is threatened his men can marshal votes and steal the ballot boxes.

145 Million Dollar Racket Bill.

Just as the robber baron controlled commerce in his domain, the racketeer today has a grip on trade in Chicago. Gordon L. Hostetter, executive secretary of the Employers' association, estimates that the city pays 145 million dollars yearly to racketeers. Walter G. Walker, attorney for the association, has charts revealing a racketeers' interlocking directorate among unions and trade associations, by which he says they control the transport of nearly all commodities in the city.

The 145 million tribute estimated by Mr. Hostetter is no wild guess. The estimate was prepared in 1928 by a University of Chicago research worker, who spent many weeks computing the levies the racketeers imposed on union workers, employers, and their equipment.

Gangster influence now predominates in two classes of trade, according to Attorney Walker. A huge chart, prepared by a member of his staff, shows the interlocking connections of such underworld characters as Murray Humphries, William [Three Fingered Jack] White, William [Klondike] O'Donnell, and Marcus [Studdy] Looney.

The chart shows the connections of these gangsters with some of the Republican and Democratic ward committeemen, who dispense the political patronage of the city. It also shows their influence over certain police captains.

The business lines in which gangster influence now predominates, according to Attorney Walker, are the transportation trade and the service trades—the last including such industries as cleaning and dyeing, laundries, amusements, and building construction. Looming over all, he says, is the Truck and Transport agency, known as the "T-N-T," which exacts monthly tribute on each of his drivers and each of his trucks.

If the contractor refuses to pay the union agent calls a strike. If the men should refuse to strike they are slugged. If they do strike and the contractor hires other men the strike breakers may be slugged, the garages fired, and the trucks destroyed. These are routine tactics to discipline a rebel contractor, and the contractors have no desire to incur such strenuous discipline. They pay and smother their complaints.

Murray Humphries, a young man with marcelled hair, rules the "T-N-T," according to Mr. Walker. Self-appointed successor to Al Capone, Humphries proved his mettle as a machine gunner before ascending the throne vacated by Capone when the government sent that gangster to Atlanta prison for income tax fraud.

Humphries looms also as the principal power in the cleaning and dyeing industry, the linen supply business, and the laundry trade, Mr. Walker says. His dominance there comes through his control of the truck drivers' and inside workers' unions in these industries, as well as his influence over the trade associations supposed to guard the interests of the employers in these industries.

Find the Price Too High.

Some of the employers, according to Attorney Walker, are pleased to submit to the Humphries rule. He maintains discipline, prevents strikes and price cutting. But here, as in other industries ruled by the racketeers, Attorney Walker says the depression has proved the price of racketeering to be too great.

Employers who could tolerate the racketeering influence in good times, he says, now find it too costly to be borne.

Humphries, of course, cannot maintain his power single handed. In alliance with him for mutual interest, according to Attorney Walker, are White, O'Donnell and Looney, the undisputed bosses until last week of the Chicago Teamsters' union. This is the so called outlaw group of teamster locals, unaffiliated with the Chicago Federation of Labor or with the international brotherhood of teamsters.

Bluff is the essence of racketeering, Mr. Walker says. If a rebel raises his hand, he must be terrorized into silence or be shot. If a teaming contractor refuses to pay tribute, a dynamite or incendiary bomb is the mild admonition that he had better go along.

Informed observers say that while the federal prosecution of racketeers for income tax fraud may curb them for a time, it cannot strike them out. Inevitably, they predict, a new crop of desperadoes will rise up to seize the available loot if Humphries and his allies are sent to prison.

COURTNEY CALLS ON UNION TO OUST RACKET ELEMENT

Promises to Supervise a Fair Election.

An appeal to the 8,000 members of the Chicago Coal Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers and the Yardmen and Hikers' unions to elect new officers under his personal supervision and under police protection was issued last night by State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney following a meeting in Mayor Kelly's office.

The appeal, urging the election of honest union officers, was given out on the eve of the outlaw organizations' scheduled meeting for this afternoon in the hall at 814 West Harrison street. Large details of police were assigned early today to attend the meeting.

Among those present with the mayor and the prosecutor at the conference were Frank Morrison of Washington, D. C., secretary of the American Federation of Labor; John Fitzpatrick, president the Chicago Federation of Labor; Edward N. Nockels, secretary of the same organization; Leslie G. Goudie, president of International Teamsters and Chauffeurs' Joint Council, No. 25, and Victor A. Olander, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Federation of Labor.

The Prosecutor's Appeal.

In his appeal, State's Attorney Courtney said:

"It becomes my duty as state's attorney to cleanse labor organizations and so-called business men's associations of criminal leadership, both from the standpoint of the laboring man and the citizenry of Chicago, as well as to promote law and order in our community. While your organization is composed of hard-working, honest laboring men, your particular leadership in the past, by its actions, has not merited the confidence of the people of Chicago, the representatives of the American Federation of Labor, or my office.

"In order to enhance your interests, in my opinion, you should select from your ranks men who will have the confidence and respect of organized labor and the community at large. This can only be done by an honest ballot of your own membership, free from dictation by outside influence and musclemen, and by affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, which is the recognized voice of labor all over the United States. It follows that your working card will then be recognized by other organizations in all other cities, and this would guarantee and insure coöperation between labor and honest business.

"It is my purpose to call a meeting in the very near future, confined to members of record on your books, where you can elect from your membership those who will be recognized as fit representatives by the American Federation of Labor. I will personally supervise this election and will guarantee that it will be held in a most orderly manner and that honesty will prevail. I realize that the meeting on Sunday will be attended by many others than members of your local, making it absolutely impossible to hold even a semblance of an honest election."

Labor Leaders' Appeal.

In a joint statement, the labor leaders warned the members of the outlaw union against the perils of racketeer leaders, and appealed to them to cast aside the hoodlum influence and join with the recognized labor unions. The labor officials commended Mayor Kelly and Mr. Courtney for their stand against the hoodlums. Their statement follows:

"We are sure that the legitimate trade union movement of the state and city, as represented by the Illinois State Federation of Labor and the Chicago Federation of Labor, which are the official state and city branches of the American Federation of Labor, can rely upon both the mayor and the state's attorney for effective support in meeting any gangster or racketeer onslaught which may be directed against any of the unions affiliated with our movement and to eliminate any racketeers or gangsters that may have forced their way into any local organizations.

"Our attention has been directed to the meeting of coal drivers scheduled to be held tomorrow [Sunday]. We have no part in that meeting. Neither the American Federation of Labor, the Illinois State Federation of Labor, the Chicago Federation of Labor, nor the Teamsters' Joint Council of Chicago are in any way involved either directly or indirectly in the controversy affecting the coal business of the city.

Not Members of Federation.

"The organizations operating under the names of 'Chicago Coal Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers' union' and 'Yardmen and Hikers' union' are not now and never have been a part of the American Federation of Labor, the Illinois State Federation of Labor, the Chicago Federation of Labor, nor the Teamsters' Joint Council of Chicago. That is also true of certain other organizations connected with the so-called teamsters' union regarding which so much has appeared in the public press in recent days. These represent isolated groups which some years ago separated themselves from the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America [the American Federation of Labor organization] and have since established themselves separate from the general trade union movement of the state, city and nation.

"Having neither city, state or national connections to which they may appeal when things go wrong within their local organizations, the membership of these organizations have little or no recourse when affairs of their unions fall into the hands of undesirable and dangerous leadership. They are thus easily victimized. This is also true of the honest business interests who come in contact with labor in making working agreements and filing just complaints.

Must Cure Evils.

"This is a situation which ought to be remedied and which indeed must be remedied before the labor situation in Chicago can be put on the high level where it properly belongs. Every effort should be made in that direction. In the meantime, however, it should be made clear to every one affected that the leadership of this group against which public accusation of a very grave nature is being made have no connection whatsoever with the regular trade union movement of the city, state, and nation.

"The working membership of these isolated organizations ought to be enrolled in the American Federation of Labor through the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America. They will be welcome within our ranks providing they will first rid themselves of all racketeer and gangster connection of every sort."

It was announced after the parley that another one would be held on Tuesday, and that William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Dan Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, have been invited to attend.

JUDGES SEEKING RE-ELECTION

(Election June 5)

JUDGE P. L. SULLIVAN

Judge Philip L. Sullivan, Democrat, 43 years old, has been on the Circuit bench for 12 years. When elected in 1921 he was the youngest man ever elected to that court. He was born in Marengo, Ill., in 1889, attended high school in Woodstock and was graduated from Loyola university law school in 1911. For a time he taught school in Buena Vista, Ill. He was admitted to the bar in 1911.

He was made a master in chancery in 1916, and served in this capacity until he enlisted as a private in the artillery in 1917. He was discharged as a lieutenant in 1919, became a master in chancery again and served until his election to the bench. He is active in Legion affairs.

Judge Sullivan is now sitting in the Criminal court. He has presided over some of the most important criminal trials. He is well versed in civil law as well. He has presided in the chancery division. At all times he insists on preserving the dignity and decorum of his court. Also he has shown an antipathy against red tape when it holds back the orderly dispensation of justice. Some years back when the picking of juries in criminal cases was a scandal, Judge Sullivan decided to shorten the process.

He took over the job of questioning the veniremen and only allowed the attorneys to ask a few perfunctory questions. The Supreme court upheld him, and this went a long way towards stopping the practice of the lawyers in staking weeks to select a jury.

He ran in sixth place in the bar primaries and the report of the Bar association says: "He has shown judicial capacity, has conducted his court with dignity and dispatch and has rendered satisfactory service. He should be reëlected.

WISCONSIN MILK STRIKE ON UNDER STATE CONTROL

Supplies for Milwaukee Are Tied Up.

Madison, Wis., May 13.—[Special.]—Wisconsin's state controlled milk strike went into effect today. Of the 71 counties in the state, 19 were designated as strike territory, but one—Calumet—was reopened for milk trade this afternoon. Those still on strike have tied up the supplies of the large cities along Lake Michigan, although no shortage was felt in Milwaukee yesterday.

Pickets were active in all the affected counties and near Salem, in Kenosha county, a group seized and dumped the contents of a truck. The milk was to have been bottled at Salem and forwarded to Chicago.

Strikers Destroy Milk.

This truck had first been attacked by striking producers at Union Grove, Racine county, but forty deputy sheriffs went to the aid of the driver and escorted him to the Kenosha county line. There was no Kenosha county escort, however, and the strikers who had followed were not molested as they destroyed the milk.

Pickets near Burlington turned back three trucks containing 39,000 pounds of milk consigned to Chicago late this afternoon. The milk belonged to members of the Pure Milk association of Chicago. This organization called the sheriff of Racine county, who furnished a detail to convoy the trucks to the Illinois line, where Lake county deputies were waiting to guard it on its way.

Threaten to Burn Barns.

Threats were made against a farmer by pickets who caught him trying to deliver milk in Oshkosh. He was warned his barns would be burned if he did not return home with his cargo. No physical violence was attempted at the time, however, and the farmer took his truck into Oshkosh.

In Outagamie county, 200 pickets were patrolling the roads and all dairy plants in Appleton were closed. At the same time and in the same county petitions were being circulated among farmers who desire to have Gov. Schmedeman reopen the plants.

Under his regulations all plants in the eighteen counties were closed. Reopening is up to the farmers in these counties. When 60 per cent of the producers in any county appeal for an opening it will be permitted. In cases where the majority favor the strike the opposing minority will be forced to withhold their own supplies.

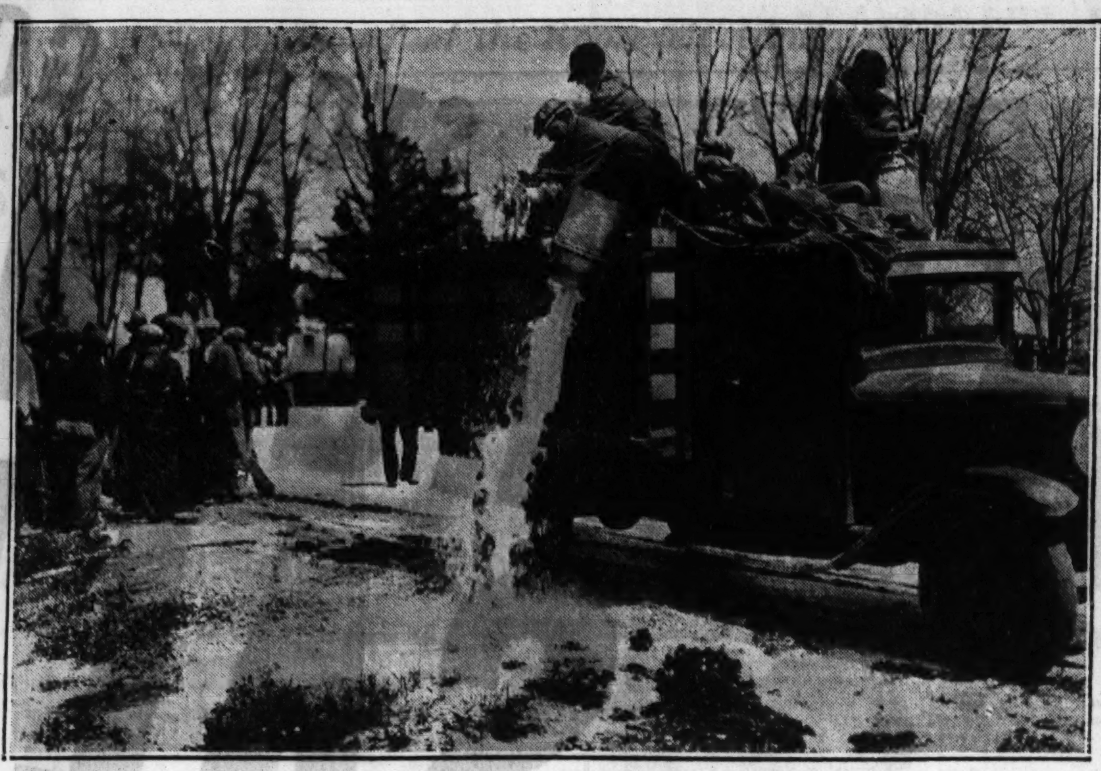
Calumet County Reopened.

Calumet county placed itself on the reopened list after the majority of the producers there had signed documents stating they were against the strike. Indications were that four other counties—Fond du Lac, Washington, Dodge, and Green Lake—would retire from the strike Monday or Tuesday by the same procedure.

Walter Singler of Shiocton, head of the Wisconsin Coöperative Milk pool, asserted that the strike had the support of Illinois and Iowa producers as well as those in the northwest. Advices from Milo Reno, head of the National Farmers Holiday association, indicated that Singler was mistaken in this. Reno said it was up to local associations to withhold milk if they wished to, but that the national holiday, as announced yesterday, was indefinitely postponed.

The strike area is mostly in the Fox river valley. Counties recognized as strike territory by Gov. Schmedeman are Wood, Portage, Waupaca, Outagamie, Milwaukee, Brown, Kewaunee, Waushara, Winnebago, Manitowoc, Green Lake, Fond du Lac, Sheboygan, Dodge, Washington, Ozaukee, Jefferson, and Waukesha. Strips of Racine and Kenosha counties are also designated as affected areas. It was on this borderline that trouble occurred.

Milk Dumped on Road by Pickets in Wisconsin Strike



Farm strike pickets dumping milk from truck of Frank E. Welsch of Kansasville, Wis., on highway 75 in Kenosha county yesterday as Racine county deputy sheriffs looked on. The deputies had escorted the truck through Racine county. There were no Kenosha county deputies present and the farmers seized the truck as it crossed the county line. The milk was destined for bottling plant in Salem, Wis.

ILLINOIS MILK STRIKE FAILS TO CURB SUPPLIES

Nonshippers to Lose Chicago Market.

A strike of Illinois milk producers, which had been threatened on Friday against the Chicago market, appeared yesterday to have fallen flat.

The city health department and the Pure Milk association reported that supplies slightly in excess of those usually received were sent in. Peaceful picketing was started at four plants in McHenry county, which has been the hotbed of agitation for an Illinois strike, but it was unsuccessful.

Strikers Punished.

At Crystal Lake, Woodstock, Harvard, and Big Foot, all in that county, farmers continued to deliver milk. At Harvard, it was said, 250 of a total of 257 producers made deliveries in the morning. This was regarded as significant in view of the fact that several leaders of the prostrike element live there.

Three of these leaders, E. L. Bost, George Whipple, and John Donovan, delivered no milk and the Pure Milk association offices in Chicago canceled their contracts and announced they would be assigned to other farmers in the same vicinity. The Pure Milk association's 18,000 members furnish the preponderance of the local supply. These members have been granted a 30 per cent increase, bringing their milk price to $1.75 a hundred pounds, effective tomorrow, and the association has steadfastly opposed all strike agitation.

Wisconsin Ships Milk.

Even in Wisconsin, where a milk holiday was in force in nineteen counties, interference with the Chicago supply was forbidden by the state administration. Health department records showed that shipments from that state were slightly larger than usual yesterday. Wisconsin officials and producers fear to lose the local sales permanently if there is any temporary cessation of deliveries.

Following an all day conference in Racine between the sheriffs of Racine and Kenosha counties with state militia officers, it was announced that all Chicago permit milk from those counties would receive safe through passage. This means that supplies from the Pure Milk association plants at Burlington in Racine county, and Bristol in Kenosha county, will arrive in Chicago as scheduled. The combined daily output of these plants is 120,000 pounds.

The strike favoring element in McHenry county, said to number not more than 200 or 300 producers, was planning a demonstration near the receiving plant at Woodstock this morning. Although they denied any intention of using violence, deputy sheriffs were ready to protect those desiring to deliver.

In Lake county Sheriff Lester Tiffany had fifty deputies patrolling the roads, but asserted there had been no instance of attempted disorder.

POLICE SEIZE SUSPECT FOR QUESTIONING IN 5 MAY DAY BOMBINGS

James Catuara, 27 years old, 2540 Emerald avenue, reputed henchman of James Belcastro, known as the "king of bombers," was arrested last night by Sergt. Arthur Katt and his detective bureau squad for questioning about the five bombings May 1 in the loop and on the near north side. Catuara, who was seized in his automobile at 23d street and Wentworth avenue, denied knowledge of the bombings. Catuara is under bond of $50,000 on a charge of possessing dynamite with intent to do injury. He was arrested April 19 with William Palermo, 2817 Arthington street, when police found a dynamite bomb in their automobile.

Mrs. Denenberg lost two rings, one valued at $1,700 and the other $200. Her husband lost $10. They live at 5110 Kenwood avenue.

TWO CANADIAN MOUNTIES AGAIN GET THEIR MEN

Two Canadian Northwest Mounted Policemen, Corporal Francis Russell and Constable Fred Olson of Edmonton, Alberta, reached Chicago yesterday with two prisoners, Kenneth McLean, 55 years old, and his son, William, 25 years old. The McLeans, accused of slaying Walter J. Parcille of Manville, Alberta, were traced to the Tennessee mountains and arrested.

As the Canadian policemen took their prisoners to the detective bureau for safe keeping, preparatory to a resumption of their journey to Canada, Sergt. Joseph Haksa of the Chicago force, asked:

"How come you Canadian mounties are dressed in civilian clothes instead of those nice red uniforms we see in the movies"?

"That's easy," replied Corporal Russell, smiling. "We only wear our dress uniforms during the tourist season. When that's over we get into rough working clothes, despite what you see in the movies."

Wounded Mine Worker Killed in Auto Accident

Taylorville, Ill., May 13.—(AP)—Robert Green, 32, of Kincaid, a miner, was fatally injured tonight when an automobile he was driving skidded off highway No. 104 and plunged over the culvert near Tovey. A United Mine worker, Green was shot in the knee last Nov. 27 by a sniper during picketing of the mines at Pawnee.

Debate Making Business a Public Utility.

An increase of a cent a quart raise in the retail price of milk in Chicago is in immediate prospect, but will not be put into effect until Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in Washington, approves and permits it. The present price is 9 cents a quart.

The imminence of the increase was made known yesterday by Loy McIntosh, attorney for the Chicago milk council, at a hearing before the Lyons committee of the legislature, held in the county building.

The legislators are seeking information on whether they should recommend passage of the bill of State Representative Frank McCarthy [Rep., Elgin], which would make the milk business a public utility and place its control in the hands of the Illinois commerce commission.

U. S. Holds Price Power.

Farm producers are to receive an increase of 30 cents a hundred pounds for their milk, effective tomorrow, making their return $1.75 a hundred. Distributors claim this must be passed on to the consumer. The new farm law provides that when 75 per cent of the milk dealers and 75 per cent of the farm producers in a given market agree on a proper price the secretary of agriculture may establish that price for the whole market and revoke licenses ' price cutting dealers.

A committee of distributors and farm producers conferred with department of agriculture officials yesterday. On this committee are Frank Kullman of the Bowman Dairy company; Dr. F. D. Walmsley of the Borden company; H. A. Pfister, president, and Don Geyer, general manager of the Pure Milk association.

The Chicagoans received assurances that some definite answer would be given them tomorrow or Tuesday. The secretary of agriculture is proceeding cautiously, as this is the first case of the kind yet presented. He is, in effect, being asked to eliminate cut price milk dealers by exercise of the licensing power.

Buy Cream Outside Illinois.

At the legislative hearing charges were made by farmers that certain local milk companies were sending far into Wisconsin for cream supplies and thus depriving Illinois farmers of a logical market. One company named as doing this is the Meadowmoor Dairies, which inaugurated a cut price campaign some months ago.

Arthur Hartman of Hampshire, a director of the Pure Milk association, referred to the price lowering as "cut throat competition." He also declared some large companies were paying more for cream in Wisconsin than they pay Illinois farmers.

Representative McCarthy said the milk producers in the northern Illinois area were near the stage of riots because they had been barred from their own market.

Attorney McIntosh opposed the McCarthy bill on the ground that it was unworkable.

NO MORE RAIN IN SIGHT, SAYS U. S. FORECASTER

Longest Precipitation Period Since '06.

The longest period of continued precipitation since 1906 was believed at an end by W. P. Day, government forecaster, as the clouds dispersed and the sun shone brightly yesterday afternoon. The forecaster said he expected today to be fair, with not much change in temperature. Mr. Day said there is no more rain in sight.

Showers at 2:15 a. m. yesterday brought the total precipitation since May 1 to 3.70 inches, .16 of an inch above the normal for the entire month. It was the ninth consecutive day on which rain had fallen. There has been a measurable precipitation on 34 of the 43 days since April 1, Mr. Day said.

Lake Michigan Rises.

The prolonged rainfall has sent rivers and streams on the rampage and swollen the level of Lake Michigan. The May 1 reading of the lake was 1.51 feet below low water datum, which represented a rise of .59 of a foot since February. A greater rise is expected to be shown at the next recording. The lake on May 1 was .39 of a foot below the level of May 1, 1932.

With the exception of May 4, rain has fallen on every day this month, but the total precipitation of 3.70 inches was not unusually heavy, the weather bureau records show. The rainfall recorded for a 24 hour period was 6.19 inches, which fell on Aug. 2 and 3, 1885. The record rainfall for a month occurred in the same August when 11.28 inches fell. The record fall for the month of May was 7.32 inches, in 1883.

Record Set in 1904.

The longest period of precipitation on consecutive days was in 1904, when rain or snow fell every day from Jan. 17 to Feb. 3, inclusive, a total of 18 days. There was precipitation on 16 consecutive days in February and March, 1906.

The abnormal rainfall for the first thirteen days of May brought the total since Jan. 1, 1933, to 13.90 inches, which is 2.94 inches above the normal of 10.96 inches for the period.

Floods continued downstate. At Watseka five feet of water was reported on route 1. Between Danville and Rossville water was six inches deep and between Jonesboro and Cape Girardeau it reached a level of four feet. At Peoria the river gage showed twenty-two feet, or four feet above the danger line.

Storm Sweeps Central Indiana.

N. Y. State Milk Control Board Raises Farm Price

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Albany, N. Y., May 13.—[Special.]—The New York state milk control board, which was established in April, today ordered milk dealers to pay farmers a minimum of 4 cents a quart for all milk purchased within 200 miles of New York city and sold in bottles. The raise is equivalent to about 60 cents a hundred pounds, or slightly more than a cent a quart. It takes effect on Tuesday, as does a 1 cent a quart raise in retail milk prices.

STEDMAN AND 4 AIDS LOSE PLEA FOR NEW TRIAL

Judge Francis B. Allegretti of the Superior court yesterday denied Seymour Stedman and four other officials of the defunct City State bank a new trial on charges of receiving deposits while the bank was insolvent. The five defendants were found guilty by a jury three weeks ago. Stedman and Alexander Jarema, vice presidents of the bank were sentenced from one to three years in the penitentiary and fined $210. The others were only fined.

Arguments on Stedman's motion consumed nearly four hours. Attorneys for the other defendants also made lengthy pleas, basing their motion on alleged errors in the trial record. The arguments were opposed by Assistant State's Attorneys John O'Hora and Earl Hurley. After making his ruling Judge Allegretti announced that he would hear a petition to stay the committment of Stedman and Jarema pending an appeal to the Appellate court.

TOO MANY CAPTAINS 'OUT'; POLICE CHIEF ORDERS THEM 'IN'

Henceforth, police captains will remain in their station houses or districts from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. daily, Commissioner of Police Allman ordered yesterday. The order commands them to remain in their districts the entire day, leaving them only in the discharge of necessary police duties. And permission to leave must be given by supervising captains.

It was reported around the city hall that Commissioner Allman was "a little weary" of calling stations at 9 a. m. daily seeking to talk with the captains, only to be told that the captain was "out touring the district." So often has this happened, it was said, that the commissioner became skeptical and decided to issue an order keeping all his station commanders at their duties all day, each day.

Illinois 3% Sales Tax

This tax unfortunately having been declared unconstitutional, we request that all customers who can present sales checks or other evidences of tax payment, at once secure refund at any of our stores.

Because of the nature of our business, it will in most cases be impossible for customers to reclaim from us the tax which they have paid. There will, therefore, be a substantial amount of tax collections remaining in our hands.

Since this is not our money but is the property of the people who have paid it to us, it is necessary to return it, so far as possible, to those who have paid it.

Obviously we are unable to find these exact persons. It is, however, our belief that generally speaking our customers are the same from month to month.

We shall therefore, commencing Tuesday, May 16, pay out tax refunds upon purchases, using the same schedule as that on which we collected the tax, and we shall continue so to do until the balance of tax moneys remaining in our hands is exhausted.

COVE CREEK JUST WAITIN' FOR A DAM AND A LAKE

Just a Waitin' for U. S. Millions to Roll In.

to another hill. Willie will be an unwilling worker. Between his woman and the Red Cross he gets along fairly well without work. But the tow headed grandchildren may live to see a new world order, a planned world.

Mr. Roosevelt and his professors have selected them as the human material in this laboratory of the Tennessee. The Tennessee valley authority about to be created will be the voice of God to them. They are to be made into subsistence farmers, part time factory workers, in the new order of a decentralized society that is visioned here.

Five miles from the town of Coal Creek, up a winding muddy road that enters deeper and deeper into the green wilderness, the beginning of all this is found. It is a little white flag on a surveyor's marker. That is all. Nearby is a cabin marked "property of the U. S. government." It is empty and there is no one around.

Steep and Rocky Hillsides.

Around the curve of the river Cove creek empties into the yellow flood of the Clinch. Steep and rocky hillsides, covered deep with a tangle of brush and flowers, evergreens and old hickory, maple, oak and chestnut trees. This was a favorite fishing and camping ground of the Indians and the Cherokees made their last stand here against the whites, under Stokeley Donelson.

Just below here the valley widens into a rich bottom, now waving in new wheat. There is a substantial looking white farm house dominating this scene. Here on the Langmire farm the government is to build its first town of 5,000 workers. They are to make here a dam which will rank with Boulder dam and Muscle Shoals, a concrete wall 2,000 feet long, and 250 feet high above bedrock.

The estimated cost of this initial project including dam and spillway, power house, barge lift, reservoir, transmission line to Wilson dam and miscellaneous expenses, is $43,584,040.

32 Parties of Surveyors.

Thirty-two parties of surveyors now are scattered over this territory, marking out the flowage lines of the reservoir for 831 miles. The power mentioned is three billion kilowatts. The lake will go forty-one miles from Coal Creek and Careyville to Tazewell. It will be 12 miles wide from Andersonville to La Follette. It will come almost to the lower gate of Cumberland Gap and the Lincoln memorial university where poor mountain boys and girls go to school. Mountains will become islands. It taxes the imagination of these people to see it.

There is the beginning of a boom in the towns. Several strangers have been reported in these parts, and a "right smart" of trading in land is going on. Several shrewd gentlemen who learned about booms in Florida and at Boulder dam, where land was bought at $1 to $25 an acre and sold for $60 a front foot to school teachers and others thousands of miles away, have been reported in the offing here.

No Speculation in Land.

There can be no speculation in the lands that are to be condemned by the government, only a liberal allowance estimated at $38 an acre on the average. Some of the acres are rich bottom lands where corn grows 100 bushels to the acre, fertilized annually by overflow. Others are scrawny acres on hill tops and slopes where Willie scratches out a little corn every year. And much is second growth timber and old forest. The inundation is to cover, of course, the best land, and grandpa points out that it looks as though there would only be poor farm land left in the two counties and that taxes would go up, and there would always be a big debt.

The Hawkins boys, Claude and his brothers, have a strategic farm near the dam site, bought for $400 with the savings of years. Their dad told them there was mineral wealth in the hills and they took his advice. Now wealth comes through another door. One offer reported is $300 a year for six years' use of a 60 foot lot. There are reports of subdivisions and resort developments around the meandering shores of this lake, and real estate men see the greatest activity since pioneer days.

Bill to Canalize Tennessee River.

There have been many reports made to congress on Cove creek and other dam sites during the last fifty years. One old report gave the opinion that Coulter shoals or White creek or Chickamauga would be better dam sites and that Cove creek would be worth only half of what it costs to build it. In 1922 there was a $200,000 survey. In 1930 a bill was passed to canalize the Tennessee in a nine foot channel from Knoxville to the Ohio at Paducah. This was to cost $74,000,000. Three dams have been built and one is under construction.

The present plan, however, calls for a much wider scope. "The bill authorizes survey and general plans for the Tennessee basin and adjoining territory as may be useful to congress and the states in guiding and controlling the extent, sequence, and nature of the development that may equitably and economically be advanced through expenditure of public funds or through guidance and control of public authority, all for the purpose of fostering an orderly and proper physical, economic, and social development of said areas."

All of which language is Greek to grandpa and Willie who sit by the roadside and spit into the dust and watch for black clouds, and just wait.

TRIBUNE WANT ADS FORECAST TRADE UPSWING

Another barometer, and one of the most reliable, has been discovered showing that the trade weather is getting better fast.

In the last forty-two days "help wanted" ads in the classified columns of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE have been showing an upward trend. Thirty-three of the forty-two days showed a greater lineage of such advertisements than in the corresponding days of 1932.

"To understand what this means," said W. R. Blend, classified advertising manager, "it should be realized that this is the first time since the spring of 1929 that we have shown an increase in help wanted appeals over a period in a previous year."

To support his belief that business is moving to greater activity, Mr. Blend has prepared a chart showing the variations in help wanted ads as compared with a composite index representing pig iron consumption, railroad freight miles, canal freight, cotton consumption, general construction and other usually quoted indices.

The comparison showed that invariably, in recent history, the want ads for workers had forecast coming events in business. There was a low point in business in the middle of 1921. The want ads fell off several months before that. In early 1922 the help wanted ads picked up and a few months later the business boom set in.

A marked increase in this type of advertising in early 1928 again forecast that business would be speeded up. It was several months later before this was actually recognized as having happened. There was a fall of the advertising in the spring of 1929, but it was several months later before other indices showed a decline.

Status of Roosevelt's Program

Washington, D. C., May 13.—(AP)—The great output of congress during the past week advanced the major portion of the Roosevelt emergency legislative program either to the statute books or to final stages of congressional argreement. Here is the record of the special session to date:

LAWS ENACTED.

Emergency bank and gold control.

Farm relief, farm mortgage refinancing, credit and currency inflation.

Half billion allotment of relief grants to states.

Six hundred million reduction of expenditures.

Forest conservation.

Beer legalization.

READY FOR FINAL DISPOSAL.

Muscle Shoals and Tennessee valley. Conference agreement impending.

Federal regulation of security issues. In conference between senate and house.

Gasoline tax extension, with postage reduction and transfer of electric tax off householder, passed by house and senate, conference due.

Reduced appropriation for the District of Columbia, in conference.

TO BE PASSED.

Home mortgage refinancing, passed by house, due early senate consideration.

Half billion dollar independent offices bill, carrying new economy powers for President Roosevelt. Passed by house, due senate action.

OTHER PENDING LEGISLATION.

Authority for President to declare embargo on arms and munitions, passed by house, awaiting expected senate consideration.

Fletcher plan for R. F. C. financing of insurance companies, passed by senate, awaiting house action.

Thirty-hour work week bill, passed by senate, rewritten by house committee, shelved for Roosevelt industrial program.

St. Lawrence waterway treaty. Awaiting senate action, which may not come this session.

St. Lawrence waterway resolution assigning power to New York state, passed by house, not due senate action before treaty.

Gass banking reform bill, redrafted at administration urging, may be taken up before end of session, outcome uncertain.

PRESIDENTIAL PROPOSALS AWAITED.

Three billion public works plan, bond financed and funded by new taxes, yet undetermined, combined with plan for government supervision, industrial control of production, work hours, wages, etc.

Possible federal supervision of petroleum production.

FIREMEN REPAY DEBT.

Springfield, Ill., May 13.—[U. P.]—Firemen at a local engine house wasted no time yesterday in repaying the donor of a fish dinner. Shortly after they had finished their meal an alarm was sounded from the donor's home where a small blaze caused by lightning was extinguished.

A Statement from
MR. NAHIGIAN
I want to thank the public for their quick response to our Emergency Sale. It is another proof of their confidence in us.
We stated our financial position frankly in our first announcement of this great sale. We repeat that statement here. "Creditors are pressing us. Cash must be raised immediately to meet the payments on our 5 story establishment at 169 N. Wabash Ave. We are forced to take a great loss on our enormous stock of Persian and Chinese rugs. Nothing is held back. Three entire floors of Oriental rugs are being sacrificed at ½ and ¼ their regular prices."
If you are considering buying rugs in the future, buy now, as currency inflation and rapidly rising prices in all markets make this Emergency Sale more spectacular. Years from now hundreds of people will point with pride to their Oriental rugs and say, "They are the greatest bargains we've ever bought, during Nahigians' Emergency Sale back in '33."
Sarkis H. Nahigian

For the June Bride and Bridegroom, a gift is the most eloquent expression of good wishes, and an Oriental rug is the ideal means to convey this thought with the happy remembrance of the donor all through their lives.
Purchases made for future use can be stored and insured until delivery at no extra cost.
Special arrangements can be made for extended payments.

TRUCE ON TARIFF DELAYS RAISING FARM PRICES

Wallace Denies Trying to Dictate Methods.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—It seemed today that the farm dictatorship will be delayed in its program of taking dollars from the city folk and putting them in the pockets of the farmers.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace found himself somewhat retarded today, despite the extraordinary powers given him under the farm bill, signed yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Mr. Wallace's plans to raise farm prices may run counter to the spirit of the tariff truce entered into by the principal nations and sponsored by President Roosevelt himself.

The secretary's plan is to levy taxes on the processors of farm commodities and to pay rentals to farmers who agree to take portions of their lands out of production.

Provides Automatic Tax.

The bill provides that whenever a tax is put on any product, an impost will be put automatically on imports of that product, to guard against the influx of foreign productions.

Such a tax generally has been considered equivalent to a tariff boost and an additional barrier against reciprocal trade. President Roosevelt has made it plain that he will not permit a raising of import duties or taxes on farm products during the period of the truce, and today Secretary Wallace admitted that the President had informed him that no processing taxes must be imposed, nor an acreage reduction program put under way without presidential consent.

"The President told me that such a matter would involve foreign policy and that he must be consulted," said Secretary Wallace.

Tugwell Offers His Theory.

Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, who sat in during Secretary Wallace's press conference today, advanced the idea that the proposed taxes on imports would not be in violation of the tariff truce, because competition would be unchanged, the same rate of taxation being applied on domestic production as upon imports.

Even if this hurdle is cleared, Secretary Wallace himself charted a long course to be traveled before the actual leasing of marginal lands is under way and production is curtailed. He pointed out that the administrative work of organizing the program could not be started until the bill was signed. He has only begun to hire his assistants, field agents and a general staff.

Secretary Wallace announced that Charles Brand of Minnesota, who has held many jobs connected with farm organizations and served in the department of agriculture under President Wilson and also when Mr. Wallace's father was secretary, would be co-administrator of the farm bill with George N. Peek of Moline, Ill.

Opposes Title of Dictator.

Expressing distaste for the term dictator applied to himself, Mr. Wallace said:

"The only kind of a dictator I intend to be is to rub the noses of the people in each industry into the facts and to say to them, 'What are you going to do about it?' I want them to be on record so they can't come back and say, 'You didn't do your duty and curtail acreage.'

"We want to clear our skirts on that point."

When it was pointed out to Mr. Wallace that by the time he got his program working, all this year's crops would have been sown, the secretary declared it would be up to the farm councils to determine what shall be done about that.

"Will you destroy crops already planted?" he was asked.

"Now you're talking about the dictatorship again," he replied. He added that he appreciated the psychological effect that would be produced in the United States if such crops were destroyed, but he indicated that such drastic steps would be taken if the representatives of producers of such commodities so decided.

To Plow Cotton Under.

Cotton, now 68 per cent planted, all will be in the ground by the time the new machinery gets into action. Mr. Wallace left little doubt that he would take steps to "reseed" a large portion of the cotton acreage.

The term "reseed" appeared to be a euphemism for plowing up cotton fields, for the "reseeding" would be grass or some other noncompeting cover crop. Mr. Wallace said there seemed to be less psychological opposition to reseeding cotton fields than there would be to plowing up fields of wheat or corn. In the case of wheat and corn, he indicated, people would protest at destroying food products when parts of the populations in cities were going hungry.

In the same connection Secretary Wallace said, "It looks as though the Almighty has been on our side," and pointed out that weather conditions this spring have prevented the sowing of crops in many parts of the country, and that in the long run a lesser amount of planting would be done than in past years.

NEW BOND ISSUE MAY BRING U. S. 32 NAVAL SHIPS

Public Works Bill Is Nearly Ready.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—Department heads and members of congress were already making plans for the spending of the huge new public works bond issue as collaborators on the administration's joint public works-industrial control bill worked today to complete drafting the measure.

Tonight Senator Wagner, Budget Director Douglas, Secretary of War Dern, and Representative Robert L. Doughton [Dem., N. C.], chairman of the house ways and means committee, topped off a White House dinner by going into conference with the President over the final details of the bill. Mr. Douglas announced prior to the meeting that the final details of the measure still had to be adjusted.

A portion of the 3 billion 300 million dollar bond issue is to be used in pushing the navy part way toward treaty strength. Another portion is to be used in advancing an ambitious rivers and harbors program. Still another portion is to be loaned to states and municipalities to further local construction projects. Members of congress from Chicago have already begun a campaign to see that the city is not neglected when the funds are available.

Immediate Start Planned.

The naval construction program to be undertaken under the public works bill contemplates the immediate laying down of thirty-two new ships at a total completion cost of $262,692,850 and a construction cost in the first year of approximately $47,000,000.

The naval building program has virtually been decided upon by Secretary of the Navy Swanson with the approval of the President, it was learned.

Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.], ranking minority member of the house naval affairs committee, discussed the program with Secretary Swanson today. As outlined by the congressman following the meeting, the program fixed by Mr. Swanson would see the following ships laid down during the year in yards throughout the country:

Two 20,000 ton aircraft carriers to cost $29,320,000 each; seventeen 1,500 ton destroyers to cost $4,234,500 each; three 1,850 ton destroyers to cost $5,115,450 each; six 10,000 ton cruisers to cost $16,770,000 each, and four submarines to cost $4,025,000 each.

20 Ships Under Way.

In addition to these thirty-two vessels, Mr. Britten pointed out, 20 ships are now in process of construction under the current naval appropriation bill which carried $43,000,000 for initial ship construction work.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the rivers and harbors program to be initiated under the public works measure is virtually certain to include the $4,540,000 Calumet harbor project included in the omnibus rivers and harbors bill recently introduced by Representative Joseph J. Mansfield [Dem., Tex.], chairman of the house rivers and harbors committee.

And Chicago congressmen began to lay plans to secure further federal funds for the Chicago subway, the sanitary district building program ordered by the Supreme court, and the Chicago elevated highway. Representative Adolph J. Sabath [Dem., Ill.] headed a movement which will attempt to see that a fair portion of the loans to state and municipal construction projects shall go to Chicago.

The question of a new tax to finance the 3 billion 300 million dollar bond issue required for the construction program was still pestering those charged with the drafting of the bill. Latest reports, however, had it that the choice still lay with a general manufacturers' excise, probably at 1½ per cent.

Wagner, Douglas Confer.

Throughout the day conferences were in progress on the bill, the most important being a lengthy meeting at the treasury department between Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.] and Budget Director Lewis Douglas, the two principal authors, with Donald R. Richberg of Chicago, labor lawyer, sitting in as a spokesman for the wage earner.

To meet the interest and sinking fund requirements of the bond issue an annual revenue of some 220 millions must be raised, and a sales tax, it is believed, is the only form of levy that can be counted on to produce that much revenue.

With bonds to the amount of 1 billion 900 million dollars to be issued on account of other measures in the administration's relief program, the addition of the public works bond issues will make an aggregate of 5 billion 200 million of new securities to be floated.

Those drafting the bill are aware that there must be no doubt about the stability of the revenue behind the new securities if they are to attract the banks and investing public.

While conferences over the public works section of the bill were in progress a delegation from the National Association of Manufacturers was in Washington to examine the section relating to government control over—or as the President chooses to term it, government "partnership" with—industry.

Heading the delegation was President Robert L. Lund of St. Louis.

J. P. MORGAN NEPHEW, NIECE BY MARRIAGE LOOKING FOR WORK

New York, May 13.—(AP)—Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, niece by marriage of J. P. Morgan, is looking for a job—because, she says, "we're hard up."

She said today she is trying to get a job in a bank.

"We" includes her husband, young Alexander Hamilton, nephew of Morgan and direct descendent of the Alexander Hamilton who was first secretary of the United States Treasury. She calls him "Sandy."

"We're hard up—honestly," Mrs. Hamilton said today. "I'm looking for a job."

Mrs. Hamilton, a Boston girl, worked for three years as a volunteer in a hospital before she married Hamilton, whose mother, Mrs. Morgan Hamilton, is J. P. Morgan's sister.

"When I married Sandy I had to give it up because he hated the smell of ether," she said today. "But I hated 'hen luncheons,' so I did some Boy Scout work."

4 CONTRIBUTORS SEND $17.50 TO HUNGER FUND

Four contributions added $17.50 to the Hungry School Children's fund yesterday, bringing the grand total to $24,187.06 since last September.

Among yesterday's contributors were the primary department of the Rogers Park Presbyterian Sunday school, which sent $1. The Bookhouse for Children sent $5.30, and "a friend of children" sent $10. Another dollar came from V. H.

More contributions are needed to keep the fund operating so that 10,000 hungry children in 100 public schools may be fed until the school term ends next month. These gifts should be sent to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower.

goes to New York one day a week to instruct these classes. Although he is vested with the title of assistant secretary of state, an administrative office, state department administration is the least of his duties. He is concerned with the whole reach of governmental policies from foreign relations to fiscal affairs, from industrial integration to the incidence of taxation.

Called Closest Adviser.

He is reputed to be the closest adviser of the President. 'Tis gossiped he spiked the ambition of Norman Davis to be secretary of state, thereby condemning that statesman to a roving life as Roosevelt ambassador-at-large in Europe. Some say that he is more the secretary of state than Secretary Hull, more the secretary of the treasury than Secretary Woodin. He is credited with the conception of a constitutional dictatorship whereby congress has delegated vast powers to the executive to make over the administrative branch of government and reorganize the economic order.

To Prof. Moley's influence is ascribed the decision to take the country off the gold standard, the inflation policy and the course the government is pursuing in regard to the war debts, stabilization of currencies and other matters that will come before the world economic conference. Such is the pressure upon him for interviews that it is necessary for callers to make appointments days in advance, if they are lucky enough to be received at all. The schedule of appointments placed on his desk every day is longer than that of the secretary of state.

Tugwell Next to Moley.

Ranking next to Dr. Moley in the brain trust is Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, instructor in economics in Columbia university, who is nominally assistant secretary of agriculture but in reality adviser to the President on economic questions. Tall, slender, looking more youthful even than his 41 years, Dr. Tugwell contributes a distinct flavor of scholarship to the political scene. Although an accomplished expositor of the theory of planned economy as embodied in the industry control bill which the President is about to submit to congress, the young professor is far prouder of his critique of the works of Thomas Hardy.

A liberal but not a radical is the self-classification of Dr. Tugwell. The liberal, he explains, is content to experiment in the reconstruction of economic institutions, while the radical prefers the "revolutionary tactic" with which he says, "I have never found myself greatly in sympathy." Capitalism he regards as in process of evolution into "socialized industry."

Dr. Tugwell also had a hand in the preparation of the farm relief act which has just gone into effect, though the principal authors of that novel plan for boosting farm product prices are two other members of the brain trust—Prof. Milburn L. Wilson of Montana Agricultural college, who is to assist George Peek in administration of the law, and Prof. Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Prof. A. A. Berle is attached to the Reconstruction Finance corporation as an expert on railroads and other corporations. Prof. John Dickinson, serving as assistant secretary of commerce, helped to evolve the industry control bill. Then there is youthful Lewis Douglas, director of the budget, who used to be professor of history at Amherst before he went into politics and got himself elected to congress.

Another member of the brain trust is William C. Bullitt, who was Mr. Roosevelt's scout in Europe before the inauguration and is now special assistant secretary of state with the principal duty of advising the President on foreign affairs.

Then there are brilliant young James P. Warburg, son of Paul Warburg, who mixes finance with the composition of revue lyrics set to music by his wife, and 36 year old Charles W. Taussig, molasses magnate, who dispenses advice on trade and tariff questions. Both Warburg and Taussig are members of the brain trust without portfolio, having as yet not been appointed to office, possibly because they are both wealthy and don't need the pay.

Baby Is Killed in Fall from 3d Floor Window

Ronald Inboden, 18 months old, was killed yesterday when he fell from a third floor window at 357 East 24th street. His mother, Mrs. Marie Inboden, had been preparing a meal for the child in the kitchen, and had seated him in a chair near the window in another room. She entered the room just as the child fell.

BRITAIN ALARMED BY HITLER STAND ON ARMAMENTS

Public Opinion Is Turning Against Germany.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 13.—Despite a slight improvement in the disarmament situation at Geneva, British opinion is becoming more and more antagonistic toward Germany. A grave view is taken in Downing street of Chancellor Hitler's action in summoning the reichstag to meet next Wednesday, when the German dictator plans to voice his country's demand for greater security.

Little hope is held that when the discussions are resumed at Geneva Thursday the Germans will be found to have altered their position. The summons to Count Rudolph Nadolny, chief German representative at the disarmament parley, to visit Berlin is taken to point to further efforts at delay. The discussions were to have been resumed Monday, but were postponed until after Hitler makes his pronouncement.

Await Hitler's Program.

American observers here, however, feel that this gain in time is all to the good and are hopeful that the Germans may be brought to see reason. There is much speculation regarding what program Hitler proposes to put before the reichstag. In some circles it is believed he intends to denounce the Versailles treaty and claim Germany's freedom to rearm, cease all reparations payments and reclaim the territory lost in the war.

Not since 1914 has there been so much talk of war in London, but the difference is that while in 1914 the public favored support of France in a war with Germany, today it is overwhelmingly against war on any pretext and any government would have to justify its war policy up to the hilt to obtain popular support.

Norman H. Davis, American ambassador-at-large, left London this afternoon for Paris, where he will stay two days before going on to Geneva.

France Debates Action to Take.

PARIS, May 13.—(AP)—Fear is growing in France that Chancellor Hitler will announce to the German reichstag next Wednesday Germany's intention to rearm despite the treaty of Versailles, and the question of what to do about it is worrying officials here.

France is relieved to know that England is behind her, but there is little hope in officialdom that effective sanctions are available for dealing with the German issue.

The complicated economic blockade provided under the league of nations is regarded as the sole method of coercion, but this, it is said, would be difficult to enforce.

Thus far, a government spokesman said, there is no question of the government's taking any such action, and there have been no conversations between London and Paris on the subject.

The treaty of Versailles does not provide for sanctions, it was said in government quarters, which might be applied to what the French describe as Germany's intransigeance. The only sanctions provided by the Versailles treaty are in articles 15, 44 and 430, none of which, according to French circles, apply to the present situation.

A resolute intention to provide full security for France in order that the nation never again may have to meet invasion with "the breasts of her soldiers" was expressed today by Premier Daladier in debate on the war budget in the senate.

The senate adopted the war budget of 11,850,000,000 francs [about $539,000,000], a reduction of 15 per cent, with the government's consent.

HERRIOT REVEALS DEBT PROMISE BY ROOSEVELT

PARIS, May 13.—[U. P.]—President Roosevelt promised in his recent debt conversations that if France paid the $19,261,432 war debt installment defaulted on Dec. 15 she would be given credit for the payment in any future debt settlement, according to Eduoard Herriot, who was special French envoy to Washington.

Writing in L'Information today, Herriot said President Roosevelt insisted to him that France pay the defaulted installment before negotiations are opened, but agreed that the payment would be credited toward a possible future debt settlement.

"I do not need to stress the importance of this concession," Herriot said. "I am confident President Roosevelt will go as far as his powers will allow in his benevolence toward us. In any case, France would be ungrateful if she did not show respectful recognition of this great statesman who has not forgotten the world war, who is marvelously familiar with our interests and who sincerely wishes to aid us."

Hitler to Defend German Foreign Policy Before World

BERLIN, May 13.—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler, using the reichstag as an international sounding board, will defend Germany's foreign policy in an address Wednesday and lay the blame for deadlock in the Geneva disarmament conference where the Nazi government thinks it belongs.

Realizing the political isolation into which Germany has drifted, the Nazi chancellor will make a heroic effort to make his country's position clear to the world in a speech which his followers say will be one of his supreme efforts.

A vigorous protest against the failure of other countries to disarm will be uttered by the German chief of state, it was authoritatively disclosed today.

To Defend Political Armies.

Hitler will also defend Germany's uniformed organizations, such as his brown shirted storm troops and the Steel Helmet war veterans, against efforts at Geneva to rate them as part of the reich's armed forces which must be subjected to treaty limitations.

The chancellor will attempt to "correct erroneous views" which he believes are prevalent in foreign countries with regard to the reich's uniformed men and the government's intentions upon armaments policy in general.

The chancellor's address will be designed to clear the air as a preparation for the opening of the world economic conference at London June 12.

Reply to London and Paris.

A reply to recent expressions in official quarters at London and Paris suggesting that Germany's present course may lead to imposition of the penalties provided by the Versailles treaty—such as reoccupation of the west bank of the Rhine by allied armies—is certain to be found in the chancellor's address.

Germany is not to be intimidated by any ultimatums on the arms question and has no anxiety over the French government's secret record of alleged German treaty violations, an authority here declared in commenting upon remarks uttered by Lord Hailsham, British war minister, and Joseph Paul Boncour, French foreign minister.

Hitler Summons Rosenberg.

German withdrawal a second time from the disarmament parley—which has been one of the chief anxieties at Geneva—will not be announced in Hitler's speech, but his pronouncements may prepare the world for any such move, a Nazi spokesman said today.

Meanwhile, Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, special Nazi envoy at London, and Count Rudolf Nadolny, Germany's chief delegate at Geneva, were summoned to return home for immediate conferences with their leader.

Capt. Hermann Goering, premier of Prussia, will appear for the first time before the Prussian diet, now controlled by the Nazis, this week. Premier Goering will announce the names of his cabinet ministers. The Nazis state definitely that the name of Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, nationalist party leader and minister of economics and agriculture, will not be among them.

Supports U. S. Plan

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 13.—The disarmament proposal of the United States calling for the abolition of all offensive weapons will be indorsed formally by Chancellor Hitler in his address to the reichstag on Wednesday, according to drafts of his speech. Hitler is preparing his address over the week-end in the solitude of his retreat in the Bavarian mountains.

"1914 Repeated!" Von Papen.

MUENSTER, Germany, May 13.—(AP)—Franz von Papen, vice chancellor in the Hitler cabinet, tonight compared the present situation in Germany with that of 1914 because "foreign nations are unable to comprehend the enormity of the spiritual evolution."

"We, because we have broken with the ideas of the last 150 years, will not be able to understand those who, with their state forms and sociological ideas, still waddle in the tracks of the French revolution," he said in an address before Steel Helmet war veterans and Nazis.

"Through this misunderstanding and from the inability to comprehend the enormity of the spiritual evolution which has surged through Germany, a foreign political ring has circled us which is identical to that of August, 1914."

NAME OF HOOVER DAM IS CHANGED TO BOULDER DAM

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Interior Ickes has sent a crisp notice to his department heads that henceforth Hoover dam is to be called Boulder dam.

When the dam was first projected, it was called Boulder dam, but the Republican administration, desiring to honor President Hoover, renamed it Hoover dam at a christening ceremony at which former Interior Secretary Wilbur presided.

SEEK TO DRAFT GERMAN GIRLS FOR HOUSEWORK

HILDESHEIM, Germany, May 13.—(AP)—Introduction of one year's compulsory housework service for girls irrespective of social status was advocated today by executives of the Federal Union of Hausfrauen Vereine. All of the organizations making up the union joined the Hitler movement. Under the recommendation the one year of compulsory housework could be served at home.

NAME PITTMAN, COX TO ATTEND LONDON PARLEY

Need Veteran Politicians, Roosevelt Feels.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—So that the Americans who match wits with statesmen of the world at the London economic conference next month may not be outdone in political strategy, President Roosevelt has decided, it was learned today, to include several practical and veteran politicians on the American delegation.

At first glance it had appeared to the President and his advisers that the major requirements of his delegation would be learning in economic subjects, the tariff, monetary problems, industrial and agricultural production, and the like.

But, with the somewhat narrow squeeze encountered by the administration in its presentation of the first step in effecting a world accord—the tariff truce, which only went over through persistent efforts by the United States ambassador at large, Norman Davis—Mr. Roosevelt is said to feel that politics will play an unusually large part in the conference.

Regarded as Able Pair.

Two of the practical politicians reported to have been tendered places on the American delegation, and to have accepted, are United States Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the foreign relations committee, and former Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio. Senator Pittman is regarded one of the shrewdest political heads of the Democratic party, and his western forthrightness is counted on by the President to be a good enough match for the suave political intrigues of European statesmen.

Mr. Cox was the Democratic presidential candidate in 1920, when Mr. Roosevelt was the nominee for Vice President. In addition to these two it is believed the President will select one more political expert, and it is regarded quite likely this will be a Republican leader in the senate.

The President is known to be desirous of winning at least a portion of the Republican minority in the senate to a point of view under which they will vote with the Democrats to ratify whatever agreements may be reached in London.

Wants Voters to Approve.

In weighing decisions at the world conference the delegation, under instructions from the President, will not be guided entirely by theoretical motives for the welfare of the world, but will be influenced to a great extent, it is asserted, by the political strategists among them. Before an agreement is reached, it is declared, it must be one which will be satisfactory to the voters of the American nation. The mistakes of Wilson at Versailles have not been overlooked by President Roosevelt, his advisers declare.

The delegation will sail on May 31 on a ship whose very name is regarded as token of good omen—the President Roosevelt. At present it is expected that Secretary of State Hull will lead the delegation as chairman, but if he does go—and he expressed doubt today as to whether he would—it is believed he will return to the United States almost immediately after presenting America's formal greeting to the conference.

Pittman May Be Leader.

It has been suggested that Senator Pittman be appointed as vice chairman of the delegation, in which event he would serve as its leader in the absence of Secretary Hull. The secretary of state, although a clear thinker and one of the highest rated experts on foreign affairs in the Roosevelt councils, has difficulty expressing himself publicly, and it is believed by many close to the President that the delegation would be better served by a chairman who is able to express himself forcibly, directly and more or less eloquently. Either Cox or Senator Pittman would serve well in such a capacity, it is declared.

FRANCE IMPOSES A SPECIAL TAX ON U. S. PRODUCTS

Chicago Packers Hit Hard by Decree.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 13.—The tariff truce to which France agreed to adhere yesterday with seven other leading nations of the world, was not able to save American business interests in France, already crippled by customs and quotas, from a new blow.

The Official Journal today published notice of the extension of the recently decreed special tax on import licenses to 33 new products, including a number of important imports from the United States. Authoritative American spokesmen said the new measure strikes "a terrible blow at American business in France."

Seen as Bargaining Maneuver.

In American commercial circles the French action is interpreted as a move to strengthen France's bargaining position at the economic conference. It clearly illustrates the meaning of one of the principal French reservations to the tariff truce—that the truce shall not prevent the application of laws passed or bills already filed and awaiting passage.

The decree establishing the special import license was passed on April 9, before the Washington conversations between President Roosevelt and former Premier Herriot began. At first it was applied only to coffee and a few other products not directly interesting to the United States.

Chicago Packing Industry Hit.

The Chicago packing industry is probably the heaviest single victim of the extension of import taxes, as most of the 33 items on the list are foodstuffs, meats, and preserved eggs. Woods and essence of turpentine also are included. Representatives of the American packing industries here say the tax on corned beef, which has been fixed at 200 francs per 100 kilograms—about $10 per 200 pounds—is practically prohibitive.

Exports from the United States to France now are burdended by four cumulative taxes—ordinary duty, turnover import tax, the quota system and the tax on import licenses.

On top of the new application of the import license tax, the government yesterday published special accords with Belgium and Italy wiping out the turnover tax for these two countries, which America still has to pay.

Nations Threaten Reprisals.

All nations affected have complained bitterly against this form of double taxation, but the Belgians and Italians by threatening reprisals were able to make their complaints effective while the American government was unable to do so.

In connection with the new tax measures, great interest prevails in commercial quarters here over the intention of the government to withdraw the special exchange depreciation surtax on British goods. This step will be taken very shortly.

When a prominent French politician was reminded recently that news of this plan had aroused suspicion in the United States of a secret Franco-British economic accord detrimental to American interests, he agreed that it made a very unfortunate impression and promised to try to obtain full elucidation of the deal. Up to the present, however, officials are unwilling to let in any light on this transaction.

WOMAN ROUTS WINDOW SMASHERS.

Window smashers who attempted to loot a florist shop at 4843 South Ashland avenue yesterday, were frightened away by the appearance of Mrs. Catherine Callahan, the owner, at a window in her upstairs apartment.

How I Lost 62 Pounds Ugly Fat Without Harmful Dieting or Drugs
By MARGARET GEORGE

218 Lbs. 148 Lbs.

Above are my photographs taken before and after I drank Germania Herb Tea. I used to be so tired and weak I could hardly stand on my feet. I am now giving free demonstrations in the leading department stores of America. I am 50 years old, work 14 hours a day, am on my feet all the time and never felt so good before in my life. I would love to have you come and meet me.

Simply Drank Delicious Germania Herb Tea—

SIXTY-TWO pounds of fat in three months was the welcome loss in weight I registered without taking any harmful drugs or salts—without violent exercising and without going hungry for a single minute. Drinking three cupfuls a day of delicious Germania Herb Tea, obtainable at food, department and drug stores, I hold entirely responsible for the loss of all my ugly fat and the return to me of a youthlike strength and energy I had not possessed in years. To obtain a trial package free, note coupon below.

Just What Germania Tea Is and How Fat Drops Off Like Magic

Made of herbs grown on the sunny slopes of hills and mountains in Germany, Germania Herb Tea is strictly a vegetable product containing no harmful drugs. It tastes just like ordinary orange pekoe tea. It is made the same way and you can drink it, either hot or served as iced tea, with lemon, cream or sugar.

Delicious, I found it and many women I know who drink it say the same. But getting rid of 62 pounds of fat cannot be accomplished by drinking any ordinary tea. Remember, you must drink Germania Herb Tea—and the remarkable thing about it is you lose weight without going on a freak starvation diet that runs you down and makes you weak and strengthless. I lost weight every day and each day I ate what I wanted, except much fatty meats and starches, felt better, and grew stronger. The body simply must have plenty of good, wholesome food, and of the right kind, containing vitamins and other necessary substances to sustain life and build strength and energy. ART TREASURES SHOWN ON NEW PICTURE PAGE

Daily Feature Introduced Into Sunday Tribune.

Today THE TRIBUNE introduces into its Sunday editions the celebrated "back page" of news photographs which has so long been prominent in THE DAILY TRIBUNE. These pictures will be found on the back page of the second section.

By way of emphasizing the new Sunday back page today's news pictures are exclusive showings of treasures of antiquity dug up at Persepolis, one time capital of the great Persian empire, by the expedition sent out by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago under the direction of Prof. James H. Breasted.

Conquering Greeks Come.

At Persepolis, in the fifth and sixth centuries before the Christian era, reigned the great kings Darius, Xerxes, and Artaxerxes. Huge were the palaces they built, magnificent the skill of the architects and artists who decorated them. Conquering Greeks destroyed the empire and Alexander the Great, mad with power, burned the palace of Darius.

But not even an Alexander could burn the massive stone stairways with their monumental sculptures, among the grandest works of the ancient world. Down upon these stairways tumbled the charcoal from the cedar roofs that the great kings had erected, and down upon the charcoal tumbled the walls of sun-dried brick.

A Perfect Preservative.

In the course of more than twenty centuries the bricks disintegrated, went back to earth. They lay nearly twenty-five feet deep over the stairways, a perfect preservative for the treasures in imperishable stone below. When the University of Chicago expedition had stripped away this protective covering the sculptures were revealed, just as the great kings had looked upon them.

Prof. Ernest Herzfeld, field director of the expedition, who first took out these carved reliefs, later found in the ruins of Persepolis a vast quantity of written records in the language of the Elamites, a people who antedated and were conquered by the Persians.

"The best of the new relief sculptures," said Prof. Breasted, "will rank among the greatest works of art that have survived from the ancient world."

On an Elevated Terrace.

The palaces of the Persian monarchs were built on an elevated terrace, a third of a mile long and a thousand feet wide. One of the palaces, a comparatively small one, was the harem of Xerxes. It contained separate apartments for each of the king's six wives. This building has been restored to its original form by the Chicago scientists.

Of the two principal staircases which furnished the material for today's pictures, the first is one that led up to the Apadana, or great audience hall, of Persia. The second is known as the tripylon staircase and led from the level of the audience hall to the residential palaces above.

Columns 65 Feet High.

By the Apadana stair stood columns 65 feet high. Friezes along the sides show representations of tribute bearers from the twenty-eight subject nations of Persia with gifts for the king.

Charles Breasted, son of the director and his assistant at the institute, said yesterday that Dr. Breasted visited the excavations in March. He is on his way to Chicago now and will arrive about June 1 with other photographs of the Persepolis ruins. The ones published today, Mr. Breasted said, cover the most important finds.

THIRD REFORESTING COMPANY DEPARTS FOR WISCONSIN JOB

A third company of 172 Wisconsin men, trained in the civilian conservation army camp at Fort Sheridan, departed last night for reforestation work at Riley, Wis. Two companies, totaling 396 men, are now at work in Wisconsin. Two more companies of Wisconsin men will leave this week, one Tuesday and the other Thursday. The first company of Illinois men is expected to leave the camp for Sparta, Wis., on Friday or Saturday.

So far 4,912 men have been received at the camp, Lieut. Col. Scott Wood said. Sixty-five have deserted and 85 have been discharged, largely because they were able to find work elsewhere. The majority of the deserters have been Illinois men, who left the camp because no Illinois companies have been sent out, Lieut Col. Wood said.

The heavy rains and the change in surroundings have resulted in a high percentage of men on the sick roll at the camp, according to Lieut. Col. Wood. Of the 4,912 men, 2,719 have been on the sick roll one or more times. Only one death has occurred. This was a pneumonia case. There are now 4,134 men in the camp and 3,769 of these are from Illinois.

"The spirit of the men is excellent, except that the Illinois men are disgruntled," Lieut. Col. Wood said. "Morale will improve considerably when the first Illinois company leaves."

169 Navy Medical Officers Shifted to Forest Camps

Washington, D. C., May 13.—(AP)—The navy announced today that President Roosevelt, through executive order, has directed the transfer of 169 naval medical officers to the civilian conservation corps. In their new sphere the 169 officers will be engaged on hospitalization and medical treatment of those working in the forests.

Mrs. H. H. Rogers Still Ill in Reno; to Ask Divorce

Reno, Nev., May 13.—(AP)—Mrs. Henry Huddleston Rogers will be eligible to file suit here Monday for a divorce from the Standard Oil magnate, it was learned today, and she probably will do so. Mrs. Rogers, whose marriage in 1929 followed her divorce from Basil Miles of Philadelphia, arrived here about April 1, and has been ill since.

U.S. FOREST ARMY SLATED TO WORK ON ILLINOIS JOBS

Expected to Develop Eight State Projects.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—Eight state reforestation projects within Illinois are expected to be approved by President Roosevelt on Monday as sites for work camps in which nearly all of Chicago's quota of 4,000 in the federal conservation army will find employment.

The projects have already been approved by Robert Fechner, director of the emergency conservation work, and by officials of the forestry and national park service, it was learned today, and are awaiting only final sanction by the President. Officials of the conservation corps expressed the belief today that Mr. Roosevelt will approve the plans.

The projects, as outlined today, are as follows:

Development of the Skokie marshes north of Chicago into a state park. One thousand men would be encamped in this area.

Illinois-Michigan Canal.

Development of the Illinois-Michigan canal between Chicago and La Salle into a lengthy parkway. This proposal, it is said, does not contemplate filling in the canal and turning it into a roadway, as has been frequently suggested. The plan is merely to landscape and grade the canal ditch into a park. Approximately 1,400 men would be put to work on this project.

One thousand men would be encamped in the Fox river district, under the proposals now before the President, for the purpose of developing the scenic and recreational facilities of that area.

State May Reimburse U. S.

Four state park projects are also included in the plans, with 200 men to be camped in the Starved Rock state park, a state park near Zion City, and the state parks near Rock Island and near East St. Louis. Two hundred men also would be encamped in the state forest near Zion City, according to the plans.

Under requirements for use of the federal conservation corps on state projects, recently laid down by Mr. Fechner, Gov. Horner has advised the President that Illinois will reimburse the government at the rate of $3 an acre for any of the developed land which shows a profit from the sale of trees or other activities.

TAKEN ON RIDE; ROBBED.

Dennis Lindenbaum, 27 years old, 4658 West End avenue, was robbed of $9 early yesterday by a bandit who stopped him in front of his home and drove him around the block before releasing him.

STRIKE IN DANZIG TO PROTEST NAZI UNION SEIZURE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, May 13.—Strikes broke out in Danzig's shipyards, docks, and newspaper offices today to protest Nazi seizure of trade union headquarters. Socialists called a general strike, but workers generally disregarded the appeal.

The Danzig trade unions are part of the German trade unions which are now under Nazi control. The Nazis petitioned a Danzig court for an order for possession of the Danzig union headquarters. The petition was granted. The Hitlerite swastika flag was raised over the headquarters building, but later was removed after a conference between the president of the senate, the commissioner for the league of nations, and Nazi officials.

Political tension is increasing with the approach of the election of members to the Danzig diet on May 28. The Nazis now hold 12 of 72 seats and hope to obtain a clear majority.

"WELL, THAT'S OVER"

A NEW customer told us, "I've tried all the stores in the neighborhood, and now I know that A & P suits me best. When we first moved here, I didn't know where I wanted to trade, and so I just shopped around for a while. Now, I buy everything we eat at A & P. John and the children are A & P fans too. The children like to run errands to A & P, and John says our meals have never been so good or cost so little. And we're through with bills forever."

Her enthusiasm is shared by millions of housewives, many of whom have been A & P regular customers for the last three generations. And when millions of women choose A & P as their food merchant, their combined judgment means something. In fact, it's the best advertising we have.

FIND PLAY TIME FOR CHILDREN, PARENTS URGED

Study Groups Confer on Family Life.

"Parents don't allow enough margin in their lives to have fun with their children." This admonition, sounded by Mrs. Rose Alschuler, director of the Winnetka school nursery unit, was the keynote of the conference on "the family and its leisure," yesterday at the Palmer house. The sponsoring organizations were the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, and the Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education.

"Beware this summer in going to the Century of Progress, lest we give our children 'museum indigestion,'" said Mrs. Alschuler. "Let's not wear out the boys and girls trying to see everything in a single visit. Let them take it slowly and come back again, and yet again. Do not expect the children to talk about what they have seen.

Who Should be Grateful?

"And do not expect the children to be grateful because you have taken a day off to spend with them. It is rather the parents who should be grateful to the children for the experience of hearing their involuntary comments and noting their reactions."

Mrs. Walter T. Fisher of Winnetka, mother of six children, introduced the phrase "family festival" into her brief exposition of the effect of informal activities in creating social values. Each family group, she declared, gains from the celebration of anniversaries or special holidays of their own.

Prescribes Family Ritual.

"There ought to be a cumulative family ritual," she asserted, "by which certain family customs grow up year by year. Things repeated annually are not monotonous—that's the way customs grow. Even though it's only the one of marching into the dining room single file each Christmas eve, the biggest in front and the littlest last, with the same record on the phonograph. Or taking the children out into the country for a fall festival, a country supper; or carving pumpkins for decorations for a dinner at home, with a griffin made out of a crook neck squash, or a pumpkin coach and little chocolate mice to draw it."

Philip Seaman, director of the Jewish People's institute, discussed the children of the tenements. He urged the use of school buildings after hours as receration centers.

16 Agitators Arrested for Causing California Strike

Watsonville, Cal., May 13.—(AP)—Sixteen men were arrested here today in what Sheriff A. T. Dresser described as a general roundup of agitators, who, he said, have incited foreign workers in the lettuce field to go on strike. The strike of some 200 workers, members of the Canners' and Field Workers' Industrial union, began Monday.

BANDITS DANCE AT ROAD HOUSE, THEN HOLD IT UP

Four gay dancers changed swiftly into rôles of bandits early this morning in the Crystal Inn, a roadhouse at 7800 Irving Park boulevard, on the outskirts of the city, and after holding up fifty men and women, escaped with approximately $800 in cash and some jewelry. They were aided by a fifth robber.

The gunmen were thorough workers. They severed telephone wires in the roadhouse to prevent any summons to police for help, and tore out distributor wires in a dozen parked automobiles to halt possible pursuit.

Just about 1:30 o'clock the four bandits entered. They sat at tables and ordered sandwiches and beer. During the next 15 minutes they danced a few waltzes with two women. They appeared to be four boys out for a good time. At 2 o'clock a fifth man appeared at the door. Masked and armed, he ordered every one to put hands up. With this the four gay dancers slipped masks over their faces, drew guns and joined in the robbery.

The patrons and Matt Brandle, the owner, were lined up against a wall and searched. From the men the robbers took cash and the women gave up jewelry of an undetermined value.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

AKRON VICTIMS' KIN ASK RESTORATION OF OLD PENSION RATE

Washington, D. C., May 13.—(AP)—Widows of twenty-four officers and enlisted men who lost their lives in the Akron and J-3 airship disasters petitioned the senate today to restore the double pension which widows of flight officers and men were entitled to prior to passage of the economy act.

The petition, which was referred to the naval committee, declared:

"That our husbands lost their lives in the line of duty.

"That there are many cases of great distress among us, involving not only us, but our children.

"That, because of the hazardous character of their duty, it was impossible for our husbands to carry adequate insurance on account of the high premiums charged, and, therefore, they relied for our protection, in the event they lost their lives in the flying service, upon the provision of law awarding double pensions to their widows and dependents."

The pension rate under the economy act would be $22 a month, they say.

Brother and Sister Die When Train Strikes Auto

Kewanee, Ill., May 13.—[Special.]—Miss Lola Huffer, 16, and her brother, Martin Huffer, 20, children of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Huffer, Tampico, Ill., were killed this afternoon. Their car was struck by a Rock Island fast mail train at route 78 crossing in Annawan.

Actress Seeks Divorce from Stage Comedian

Mrs. Eva Kessler White, 1220 North State parkway, filed suit for divorce in the Superior court yesterday against Samuel H. White, stage comedian. The bill, which was drawn by Attorney Benjamin H. Ehrlich, charged that White left his wife in February, 1932. The couple formerly were a Follies comedy team, Mrs. White being known professionally as Eva Puck. They married on Dec. 23, 1922.

VIENNA REBUKES HITLER'S AIDS FOR 'INVASION'

But Crowds of Nazis Cheer Germans.

VIENNA, May 13.—(AP)—The first German dignitaries to visit Vienna since Adolf Hitler became chancellor met a mixed reception today when they arrived at Aspern airport from Berlin.

The Austrian government sent a police official to meet the plane carrying Prussian Minister of Justice Kerrl and Bavarian Minister of Justice Frank. The official had a message reading: "Your visit in Austria is not very desirable."

Nazis Cheer Visitors.

But a crowd of several thousand Austrian Nazis cheered and sang German songs. Thousands of persons stood along the route taken by the visitors' automobiles from the airport and they waved swastika flags, shouting, "Hail, Hitler!"

Frank was scheduled to deliver a "lecture" before a Nazi audience tonight.

Tomorrow the Fascist heimwehr troops will arrive in twenty-four special trains from all parts of Austria to celebrate the 250th anniversary of Vienna's victory over the Turks. The entire police force and the Vienna garrison of the army will be mobilized to prevent clashes.

Nazis Gain Strength.

The present Austrian government, which assumed dictatorial powers recently when parliament was shelved, is headed by Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, a member of the Christian Social party.

The Austrian Nazi movement has been gaining strength lately, particularly since the Nazi victory in Germany.

CHICAGO WAR VET PROTESTS HITLER TRIBUTE TO HERO

Kin of Rabbi Revealed as Author of 'Lily Note.'

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 13.—The anonymous "S. M. M.," who yesterday placed on the cenotaph, British memorial to the war dead, a single lily and card denouncing Chancellor Hitler of Germany, was revealed today as Dr. Samuel M. Marcus, a native of Chicago. His present home is in Los Angeles.

Dr. Marcus is a grandson of the late Chicago rabbi, Kalman Kleinowitz, who at one time was connected with the Congregation Anshe Kanesses Israel at 3411 Douglas boulevard. He held the rank of captain in the U. S. army medical corps at Chicago early in the war and later was chief of the medical staff of a United States government hospital in Pennsylvania. He is a graduate of the Medill High school at Chicago and the University of Illinois. He was associated as a practicing physician in Chicago with Dr. Dalvator M. Monaco.

FOE OF HITLER

CAPT. S. M. MARCUS.

Explains Reason for Protest.

Dr. Marcus today explained that he placed the lily and card on the cenotaph as a protest against the swastika wreath which Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, adviser to Chancellor Hitler, had placed on the cenotaph Wednesday. This wreath later was stolen and thrown into the Thames by a British anti-Fascist. The card which Dr. Marcus left read:

"If the unknown soldier could speak to this unknown American he might voice a preference for this single flower to the wreath of the murderous dictator which now desecrates this memorial."

Dr. Marus said that he had been the victim of Nazi attacks while engaged in research work at the University of Vienna two years ago. With other Americans who had been assaulted, he organized the League for the Protection of Foreign Students and was active in bringing the first campaign of oppression and abuse to an end.

Britain Plans No Action.

Endeavors today to ascertain what happened to Dr. Marcus' card were futile. Police yesterday removed it from the cenotaph, leaving the lily, but today Scotland Yard denied any official cognizance of the incident. Both the office of worfls, which has charge of the cenotaph, and the home office said they had neither a record of the card's removal nor any intention of taking any sort of action.

Dr. Marcus was appointed chief of the examining board for the army in Chicago a few days after the United States entered the war. Among the notables whom he passed into service were Milton J. Foreman, now retired with rank of lieutenant general of militia; Marshall Field III., who enlisted as a private, and Col. Henry J. Reilly of the 149th field artillery or "Reilly's Bucks." The cost of examinations were defrayed in part by a donation of Samuel Insull.

Dr. Marcus is a neurologist and psychoanalyst who has been pursuing his researches in Europe for three years. He was made an officer of the French academy two years ago.

Hitler Recalls Envoy.

Dr. Rosenberg today called off his weekend at Leeds castle, in Kent, on orders from Hitler to return home to participate in the chancellor's speech to the reichstag Wednesday. He is leaving for Germany tomorrow.

The eve of Rosenberg's departure was marked by one of the most stirring scenes the austere courts of London have ever seen. Six policemen engaged in a wrestling bout on the floor of the Marylebone police court before they subdued three men charged with splashing red ink on a statue of Hitler in Mme. Tussaud's wax works museum.

After ruining the statue the demonstrators hung a sign reading: "Hitler, Mass Murderer," around the figure's neck. Arrested with them was a woman, who later was released.

The hearing was finally adjourned for a week when the magistrate found it impossible to conduct the case without the accused turning the prisoners' dock into a soap box rostrum to denounce "the murderous Hitler government."

Colombia to Vote Today; Acts to Prevent Rioting

BOGOTA, Columbia, May 13.—[U. P.]—Preparations were completed today for tomorrow's election in which 118 members will be elected to the chamber of deputies for a two year term beginning July 20. Liberal [government] and Conservative party candidates were about evenly divided in strength. The Government held a slight majority in the outgoing chamber. Measures to prevent fighting at the polls—two years ago 50 persons were killed in election riots—included closing of all saloons.

ALL DAY BATTLE RAGES; CHINESE BLOCK JAPANESE

Tokio Armies Push Drive Against Tientsin.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, May 13.—Fierce fighting between Chinese and Japanese armies continued in the Lwan river area northeast of Tientsin today. Japanese troops crossed the river shortly after dawn, took Tsienan and then continued south toward Tientsin, according to dispatches from the front. The Nipponese, according to Japanese reports, thus far have lost 60 killed and 200 wounded.

Units under Maj. Gen. Suzuki and Maj. Gen. Kawahara, which captured Hsinkailing yesterday, launched another offensive against Shihsiachen this morning. The fighting was still going on this evening. Fierce hand to hand encounters were reported. The Japanese claimed to have routed part of the Chinese left wing.

Report Chinese in Mutiny.

A contingent under Maj. Gen. Matsuda passed Hsinchwang at 10 a. m. today and Yenkow at 1 p. m. Maj. Gen. Hattori's unit defeated the Chinese north of Sahochao and pursued the enemy to Tsunhua. Japanese aviators report that the Chinese are retreating to Fenjun and Yutien.

Reports from Tientsin said Gen. Yu Sueh-chun is disarming his troops and that 5,000 of them have already entered that city disarmed. The 116th Chinese division at Tangshan is reported to have mutinied and plundered Yutien. The 107th and 117th divisions, defeated at Wuning, Yungping and Tsienan, are reported to have lost two-thirds of their strength.

Aliens Prepare for Emergency.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

TIENTSIN, May 13.—"Anything may happen and therefore we are prepared, in the event of necessity, to declare an emergency legation quarter effective within a few minutes," officers of the United States legation guard at Peiping said tonight.

Directors of the Chinese base hospitals at Peiping have ordered the immediate classification of thousands of wounded to prepare for evacuation southward. Authorities declined to comment on the significance of the order, but indicated that fears that Peiping would be occupied by the Japanese had not abated. Foreign diplomatic officials frankly said they are nonplussed.

Neutral observers believe the stubborn Chinese resistance to the Japanese invasion will only serve to strengthen the determination of the Japanese army to deliver a crushing blow.

Boys' Section in Juvenile Home Under Quarantine

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, last night quarantined the boys' section of the juvenile home after cases of measles and smallpox had been discovered. For the last week five sections of the boys' quarters have been under quarantine. The quarantine was extended when boys in the free sections contracted the diseases. Police Commissioner Allman sent a bulletin to all police stations stating no boys can be sent to the home until further notice.

Girl Wins Speaking Contest for Catholic High Schools

Seven girls and one boy participated yesterday in the finals of the state speaking contest for Catholic high schools in the Loyola university community theater. The state championship was won by Miss Ever Louise Conner, a student at Aquinas High school of Chicago. Second and third places went respectively to Miss Rita Weiland of Madonna High school, Aurora, and William D. Slanagan of Spalding institute, Peoria. The finalists were chosen in district contests.

FLOSSMOOR GIRL AND A FARM BOY HEALTH WINNERS

Name Them Champions of County Schools.

Betsy Dell, 12 years old, of Flossmoor, and Robert Holtman, 13 years old, whose home is a farm on Touhy avenue, Niles Center, were adjudged the healthiest girl and boy in the rural schools of Cook county yesterday. The health contest, an annual affair, was conducted by Otto F. Aken, county superintendent of schools, in his office.

Betsy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale H. Dell. Her father is a real estate man. Betsy is five feet one inch tall and weighs 110 pounds. Her gray eyes sparkled and her rosy cheeks grew rosier as she recited enthusiastically the requirements she believes essential to glowing health.

Betsy's Rules for Health.

Flashing a set of even white teeth and tossing back her brown hair, thick and wavy, she confided:

"Of course I get lots of sleep. I go to bed early, at 8:30 every night, and I get up early, too, about 7:30. I'm outdoor a great deal, riding horseback, swimming, playing golf and hiking. We do quite a bit of hiking in the Girl Scout troop. I eat plenty of vegetables and fruits, and I like candy, though not too much. In fact, I like everything."

She was asked what she intends to do when she grows up. A reporter suggested Hollywood.

"Hollywood!" Betsy replied scornfully. "I wouldn't like to go to Hollywood. I want to be a lawyer. I've always wanted to be a lawyer."

Robert Would Be a Farmer.

But Robert thinks the farm is good enough for him when he grows up. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Holtman.

A twinkle appeared in his blue eyes when he was asked why he wants to be a farmer when prices are so low.

"I want to be a farmer because I like it," he replied. Then with the air of one who has studied the situation thoroughly, he added: "Prices are going to be better. I think we have a very good President."

Robert is five feet three inches tall and weighs 117 pounds. In the district health contest he was rated 100 per cent perfect by physicians. He was second in the county championship contest last year. He is a seventh grade pupil at Fairview school, Niles Center.

Has His Own Garden.

Like Betsy, Robert was certain that a minimum of eleven hours of sleep every night and plenty of fresh vegetables are essential to good health. He raises his own vegetables in his own garden. In his spare time he cares for several pets, including a wildcat, two foxes and some wild geese.

Among the girls in the health contest Betsy Smith, 12 years old, of Calumet City, was second; and Frances Storner, 12 years old, of Glenview, was third. Among the boys George Hering, 13 years old, of Thornton, was second; and James Johnson, 12 years old, of Riverside, placed third. The winners were awarded gold medals. Twelve children competed in the finals, two for each of the six districts in the county.

Asks $50,000 Heart Balm in Suing Blake McVeigh

Los Angeles, Cal., May 13.—(AP)—Suit for $50,000 alleging breach of promise to marry was filed today by Muriel Vernon against Blake McVeigh, to whom she said she became engaged in New York City, March 15, 1932. McVeigh was described as wealthy. Miss Vernon stated in her complaint that McVeigh jilted her for another woman.

HEADS GEORGIA UNIVERSITY; ONCE ON CHAIN GANG

Atlanta, Ga., May 13.—(AP)—A man who once went to a chain gang to see if it afforded an opportunity of reforming prisoners was elected today as chancellor of the far flung university system of Georgia.

He is Philip Weltner, 45 years old, resident of Atlanta, who practices law to make a living and who finds his fun in studying governmental and sociological problems and in playing tennis.

Weltner was one of the first members of the board of regents which took over control of the University of Georgia and other state institutions of higher learning.

In 1912 he went into the chain gang of Campbell county to study the prospects for its prisoners. He says he went into the chain gang under an assumed name as a forger. He spent two days and one night on the gang.

The new chancellor, the ranking official of the state's educational system, founded the Juvenile court of Atlanta and was its first judge. In political circles he is recognized as the author of the state reorganization bill which revised the governmental set up of Georgia.

Weltner succeeds the veteran Georgia educator, Charles M. Snelling, who asked that he be relieved of the heavy duties of the chancellorship.

FIVE PHYSICIANS EXAMINE GANDHI; 'CONDITION GOOD'

POONA, India, May 13.—[U. P.]—Five physicians examined Mahatma Gandhi today and found his physical condition comparatively good. They issued the following bulletin:

"Gandhi slept 11 hours during the last 24. Nausea is still present but is not troublesome. Gandhi is weak but there are no complications. His blood pressure is inclined to rise and he was advised to avoid exertion."

The doctors examined the little independence leader in the marble palace of a disciple where he entered the fifth day of his projected 21 day fast in behalf of India's untouchables. The examining physicians were Drs. Ansari, Gilder, Deshmukh, Purushottam, and Patel.

SANITARY CHIEF URGES SALE OF CANAL TO U. S.

Bowler Will Offer Plan to Trustees May 23.

Thomas J. Bowler, president of the sanitary district, decided yesterday to present a resolution to the trustees at their next meeting on May 23 proposing the sale of the drainage canal to the federal government. This plan, he said, seemed the best yet suggested to get money for building the sewage disposal works ordered by the United States Supreme court.

"Since the canal is to be used as part of the waterway," said Mr. Bowler, "and the waterway is of national benefit, who, rather than the government, should own and operate it?

"The Supreme court has ordered the sanitary district to build these vast disposal works, which would cost us about 100 million dollars. Behind the suit that resulted in this decision were five states and Canada. We took our bonds to Washington and asked the Reconstruction Finance corporation to lend us the money, with the bonds as security. The R. F. C. refused.

A Unique Situation.

"Thus was created a unique situation. The highest court of the land ordered us to build the works, yet the government loan agency refused us the funds to do so. But the solution under the new plan is simple.

"Our drainage canal was built over 30 years ago. The move to dispose of the sewage otherwise was undertaken under order of the U. S. Supreme court. All expenses have been borne by Chicago taxpayers.

"Since it was dug it has more than doubled in value. It is now an important section of the waterway. Moreover, docks and warehouses situated along it are indispensable to its new purpose. What could be fairer than its purchase by the government?

"Since five states and a foreign nation complain of Chicago's water diversion the waterway must be of national importance. If it is the government should operate it. We are told by the Supreme court that we cannot use the canal any longer for sewage. That ends its use for us and it becomes only a waterway.

Sees a Profit in Stone.

"Most of the canal is lined with tons of stone. The federal government could make a profit if it would crush this stone, take it out on barges and sell it. That's a business project we haven't been able to engage in.

"I believe the other trustees will have a similar feeling about the sale. We would want only a fair price—enough to build the works we have been ordered to build."

There is a precedent for such a sale. In 1928 the federal government purchased the Cape Cod canal from a private company, assuming an indebtedness of six million dollars in addition to the purchase price of 5½ million dollars. The canal is now being operated on a toll system.

TROLLEY OWNERS USE SNOWPLOW TO WRECK BARRICADE OF POLICE

Rochester, Pa., May 13.—(AP)—Trolley service stopped by a policeman's threat to shoot a motorman was resumed late today.

Judge Frank E. Reeder granted a preliminary injunction restraining the borough from placing barricades in the path of cars operated by the Beaver Valley Railways company.

He also released Ray Garen, operator of a snow plow that pushed over the obstructions placed on the track by the borough, and James Humes, dispatcher, who were charged with interfering with an officer.

Council ordered the traction company to repair paving on its right of way or cease operating. The company said revenues were dwindling and declined to make the repairs.

At midnight—the expiration of time granted by council—police drove great spikes between the tracks at intervals of 50 feet and hung red lanters on them.

Ahead of the first car out today the company sent a snow plow to clear the way.

Assistant Police Chief Frank Craig, mounted on a motorcycle, rode between the vehicles and was pushed several hundred yards along the track. A patrolman with drawn pistol threatened to shoot Garen.

Claim County Funds Used Profitably in Speculation

Mount Clemens, Mich., May 13.—(AP)—Wilfred Myll, 26 year old treasurer of Macomb county, today stood accused of using $36,000 of county funds in stock market operations that were so successful they showed a profit of $1,400 in 12 days. Prosecutor R. W. McKinstry said Myll, a school teacher for five years, campaigned for the treasurership last fall on the slogan "Elect Myll to guard the till."

FILIPINOS DRAFT BILL TO REJECT INDEPENDENCE

MANILA, P. I., May 13.—(AP)—A resolution rejecting the Philippine independence act was drafted today by the house metropolitan committee for presentation to the insular legislature, which will convene July 17. Proponents of the act are urging the calling of a convention to pass upon the proposals. Either the legislature or a convention called by that body may make the decision.

Elpido Quirino, acting majority floor leader in the senate, said 35 of the 50 provinces favor rejection of the independence proposals, but champions of the act retorted that a popular majority favors acceptance of the congressional offer. The majority of the legislators are apparently awaiting the return of Manuel Quezon, president of the senate, and other leaders from Washington, D. C., before definitely taking a stand.

The resolution of rejection suggests as a solution establishment of a republic of the Philippines within a year and continuation of free trade with the United States for five years.

MAYOR MURPHY, BROKE, LEAVES FOR PHILIPPINES

Detroit, Mich., May 13.—(AP)—Former Mayor Frank Murphy, who left tonight, expecting to reach Manila, to take up his new duties as governor general of the Philippine islands, said today that he was leaving "broke."

"If the government was not paying my expenses, I wouldn't have enough money to get to Manila," he said.

The former mayor has made no secret of the fact he lost heavily in the stock market crash in 1929.

"When I took office as mayor, I owed some notes and my salary has gone for living expenses and to pay those notes. My financial condition is like that of an old fashioned New Englander in hard times—no money, but no bills," he explained.

The new governor general will be accompanied to Manila by his secretary, Norman H. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. William Teahan, his sister and brother-in-law, Edward G. Kemp, attorney, and Miss Eleanor Baumgartner, his stenographer.

Four Robbers Get $1,000 in Holdup on Auto Row

Four robbers yesterday took $1,000 and an undetermined amount in checks in a holdup of the Chrysler Motors Sales corporation, 2036 South Michigan avenue. Two employés and four customers were herded into an office while the manager, G. C. Beasley, 6250 Harper avenue, was forced to turn over the money.

FEDERAL JUDGE STOPS 3.2 BEER FOR KANSAS

Cites Bone Dry Law and State Control.

Topeka, Kas., May 13.—(AP)—Judge Richard J. Hopkins of the United States District court ruled today the sale of 3.2 per cent beer in Kansas would be in violation of the federal statute authorizing manufacture and sale of the brew, because of existing Kansas law.

The judge denies the application of Ernest Chapman, of Wichita, for an order restraining Roland Boynton, attorney general, and other officials from enforcing Kansas' intoxicating liquor laws insofar as the sale of 3.2 per cent beer is concerned

Leaves Power to States.

"While it may not be necessary to give a decision in this case," Judge Hopkins ruled in a memorandum opinion, "it may be observed in passing that the federal act allowing the manufacture of 3.2 per cent beer prohibits its sale in states or territories where the manufacture, sale or transportation of fermented malt or vinous liquor containing 3.2 per cent alcohol is prohibited by law. In which, it would appear, that the sale of 3.2 per cent beer in Kansas would be a violation of the federal statute."

Judge Hopkins pointed out both the United States and the Kansas Supreme court had upheld the constitutionality of the Kansas liquor laws, which declare to be unlawful the manufacture, sale and possession of "any spirituous, malt, vinous, fermented or other intoxicating liquors."

"Malt and fermented liquors being specifically mentioned in the section," Judge Hopkins ruled, "beer containing 3.2 per cent alcohol must necessarily fall within the statutory definition of intoxicating liquors."

Fight in South Dakota.

Webster, S. D., May 13.—(AP)—The constitutionaliy of Dakota's prohibition law and the question of 3.2 per cent beer as an intoxicant appeared headed for the state Supreme court today.

Counsel for Carl Anderson of Groton announced an appeal would be taken from Anderson's conviction of transporting intoxicating liquor—14 cases of 3.2 beer seized while he was en route to his home from Minnesota.

At Anderson's trial, defense counsel argued that the state legislature exceeded its constitutional authority in passing a law which prohibits any alcoholic content in beverages, and argued that 3.2 beer is not intoxicating.

BLACKSTONE WILL OPEN TOMORROW WITH BEER BAR

The Blackstone hotel will reopen tomorrow with the installation of a carved wanut beer bar the only notable change. There will be no opening ceremonies.

The hotel, which has occupied a prominent place in the social history of Chicago, has been closed since Jan. 7, as a result of foreclosure proceedings brought by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, holders of the mortgage. The company has entered into a contract with the National Realty and Investment company of which Benjamin Marshall, the architect who originally designed the hotel, is president, to operate the hotel.

While closed the hotel has been completely redecorated. The decorators, however, have merely refurnished the original Louis XVI. interior. Even the original wall paper in the corridors has been retained.

Practically the entire staff of the old hotel has been retained. The new manager is George W. Lindholm. Mr. Marshall will take an active part in the operation of the hotel.

3d State to Ratify Repeal of Dry Law Is Recorded

MEANS' RANSOM STORY BRANDED FALSE BY U. S.

Gangster's Safety Box Fails to Yield Cash.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—One phase of Gaston B. Means' sensational testimony of personal contacts with the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby was declared by department of justice operatives today to be as fictitious as it was fantastic.

On the witness stand in the District Supreme court yesterday, Means testified that the $50,000 ransom money paid over by Dr. John [Jafsie] Condon, and the $100,000 delivered to Means by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean for the ransom of the Lindbergh child could be found in the safe deposit box of Max Hassel, recently murdered New Jersey beer baron.

Check Serial Numbers.

Department of justice agents stated, however, that they opened Hassel's safe deposit box shortly after his death and found only $214,000 and a note for $50,000.

"The money found in the box," they informed District Attorney Leo A. Rover today, "did not have a dollar of Lindbergh ransom money in it." Federal agents, it is said, checked the bills found in Hassel's bax carefully with the serial numbers on the $50,000 handed over to the supposed kidnapers by Dr. Condon.

Hunt Two Named by Means.

Nor had the only two living persons named by Means as kidnapers of the Lindbergh child been located today by the department of justice, although a determined search is being conducted for them. Federal agents are reported to believe that "Wellington Henderson" and "Irving Fenton," whom Means declared to be the brains of the kidnaping plot, are purely fictitious characters. A visit by department agents to the Detroit addresses furnished yesterday by Means proved fruitless.

According to information furnished by the justice department to District Attorney Rover, the lowest denomination currency found in the Hassel safe deposit box was $50, whereas the largest bill in the $50,000 ransom money turned over by Jafsie was $20.

The Jafsie package, it was said, contained fives, tens and twenties, while the money in Hassel's box was in notes of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, and $5,000. The $50,000 note found in the safe deposit box was signed by two prominent New Jersey bankers, it was said.

CALL FOR BOOKS OF BREWERS IN BEER COST QUIZ

Legislative Group Votes to Subpoena Records.

In the interests of nickel-a-glass beer, a committee of the Illinois house of representatives decided yesterday to subpoena books and records of breweries to learn the actual cost of manufacturing and distributing the new 3.2 beverage. The decision came after an open hearing in the city hall at which the state representatives sought to determine why much of the beer costs retailers about $17 per barrel.

How soon the books and records will be brought in for study was left undecided at the close of the meeting of seven members of the house under the chairmanship of Representative George Garry Noonan [Dem., Chicago]. Reconvening of the committee is subject to call of the chairman but Mr. Noonan did not have a date in mind, he said.

Subpoena Plan Stirs Brewers.

Brewers and their representatives who testified at the hearing seemed a little amazed when the subpoena motion was made by Representative Albert J. Mancin [Rep., Chicago].

"You'll get a roomful of records and you'll leave us without any," protested H. F. Ernst, president of the Prima company and also of the Illinois State Brewers' association.

"We can subpoena only those records which will tell us how much beer really costs," said Representative I. H. Streeper III. [Rep., Alton].

"But it would take six months for auditors to decide the price," declared J. Arthur Miller, attorney for the receiver of the Schoenhofen Brewing company.

"And in the meantime you brewers fixed the price high enough so as to be sure you wouldn't lose money," remarked Representative William V. Connors [Dem., Chicago].

Following this interchange, Streeper seconded Mancin's motion and it was unanimously carried.

Ernst Gives Testimony.

About as close as the committee got to the real cost of manufacturing and distributing beer was a statement from Ernst, who said he thought the Prima company would not profit more than $2 a barrel.

"But we have only been in operation one month," explained the brewer, "and we cannot estimate just how much beer will cost a barrel. The price of raw materials and of labor is very much higher than before prohibition. Grain is 50 per cent higher, malt 75 per cent, and labor 20 or 30 per cent higher. We cannot base the price on the first month's operation. If we were assured of constant production the year round we'd have a better idea."

"How did all the brewers in Chicago, or most of them, arrive at the price of $17 a barrel?" demanded Representative Connors. "Does it cost the same in all breweries, large and small?"

"I imagine so," replied Ernst.

Committee Seeks Overhead.

"Well, I believe you fellows ought to sit down and think it over," Connors told him. "This committee is going to learn the overhead, even if we have to take the records."

Other questions drew statements from Ernst that his company's brew is "at least 60 days old" and averages from 3.1 to 3.15 per cent in alcoholic content.

Several other brewers were present but had little to add to the information given by Ernst. Among them were Frank Schroeder, president of the Monarch Brewing company, and Joseph Hein, secretary; Paul Moore, attorney, for the United States Brewing company, and John C. Hart of Aurora, attorney for the Illinois State Brewers' association.

In addition to Representatives Noonon, Streeper, Mancin and Connors, the following legislators are on the committee: Mason S. Sullivan [Dem.], Michael Ruddy [Rep.], and Peter P. Jezierny [Dem.], all of Chicago.

LEGALIZED BEER KNOCKS 46% OFF DRY LAW CASES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—Prohibition arrests have dropped off more than 46 per cent. The illicit beer business, biggest of prohibition rackets, almost has disappeared since the legalization of 3.2 per cent beer, A. V. Dalrymple, director of prohibition, so announced today.

Meanwhile beer taxes, hitting something like a normal stride, have gradually pushed federal revenues up to the level of those of last year, according to the treasury department. It is unofficially estimated that ten million dollars or more in beer taxes have been collected.

Prohibition arrests during April, the first month during which beer was legal and the first month of Director Dalrymple's régime, dropped to 3,440, compared with 7,410 in the same month a year ago, a decline of 46 per cent. In the northern Illinois district, including Chicago, arrests dropped to 64.

A part of this decline was due to reorientation of the prohibition bureau's policy. Speakeasies are no longer a major point of attack since congress failed to provide funds for the purchase of evidence and frowned on such practices.

Bomb Destroys Spanish Viaduct; 2 Men Arrested

SORIA, Spain, May 13.—(AP)—The viaduct of the Castejon railway, carrying electric power lines, was destroyed by a bomb explosion today. Two extremists were arrested and the Syndicalist headquarters was closed and its directorate arrested.

You'll choose the new GRUNOW electric refrigerator because it's the only domestic refrigerator that uses . . .
Carrene

Carrene is a harmless, colorless liquid. It is non-explosive, non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-inflammable and non-corrosive!

SAFE—Because of Carrene, the ideal refrigerant! Carrene is non-poisonous, non-explosive—for ten years it has been used in large commercial installations such as fine passenger ships, the Chicago Stadium, the Shedd Aquarium and the U.S. Capitol at Washington, where safety to thousands of human lives is a vital essential. This amazing liquid used only in the new Grunow is SAFE—you can smell it, see it, feel it—it won't hurt you, can't hurt you!

ECONOMY—The New Grunow is economical because of Carrene! This amazing refrigerant does not require pressure with the result that the task of keeping the box at the proper temperature is an easy, almost effortless, operation. If an ordinary light bulb in your home burned 24 hours, it would consume more current than your new Grunow refrigerator during this period.

PERFORMANCE—The New Grunow freezes ice cubes faster and keeps temperatures more uniform throughout the box because of Carrene! This safe refrigerant makes possible quicker operation with a simple mechanism—no belt, pulleys, etc. That's why the New Grunow gives performance that's second to none—performance that's trouble-free, service-free and free from any danger!

Mrs. America:* May We Suggest a Test?

To be absolutely certain you are selecting a safe, efficient, money-saving refrigerator, visit your nearest Grunow dealer (listed below) have him show you the liquid, Carrene, which freezes the ice cubes and keeps the interior of the refrigerator at the proper temperature. Tell him to let you see it, smell it, hold it in your hand and light a match to it. He will gladly open the refrigerating system for you and make these tests. Prove to yourself that you are getting the utmost in safety and efficiency!

BATTLES FOUR GUNMEN; WINS TRIBUNE AWARD

$100 for March Goes to Policeman Majeski.

HERO

POLICEMAN ALBERT MAJESKI

While engaged in a series of robberies, four gunmen committed a tactical error one night in March in attempting to rob the drug store of Peter Jumbalo at 4460 South Kedzie avenue. Unknown to them, Policeman Albert Majeski of the New City police station was sitting in the rear room while off duty.

Majeski gave battle against the odds. At the conclusion of the gun play, the bandits had been routed with one of their number mortally and another seriously, wounded. Later, two were captured when they appeared at a hospital for medical treatment, and information was obtained from them that led to the arrest of their companions. All confessed to 26 robberies.

Wins Monthly Award.

Commissioner of Police Allman has given Majeski creditable mention for his courage in giving fight although he was outnumbered. THE TRIBUNE has awarded him its hero prize of $100 for March, enrolling him on the roster of Chicago policemen and firemen who have braved death in the performance of their duty.

After going off duty at 8 p. m. on March 3, Majeski went into the drug store to see Jumbalo, whom he had known for a number of years. As was his custom, he entered the rear door and was sitting on a desk chatting with his friend when a woman customer came into the store.

The druggist went forward to serve the customer, and while he was there the four gunmen entered. Two of them, armed with shotguns, covered the woman and the proprietor. The other two, with their revolvers drawn and ready for action, went toward the rear.

Have Drop on Policeman.

Seeing the policeman, the latter two covered him with their guns and while walking up to close range ordered him to hold up his hands. In the face of almost certain death, Majeski reached for his holster. The bandits fired, but missed, and the policeman's gun began to bark as bullets continued to shower around him.

A shout of "He got me" from one of the bandits and then both turned on their heels and fled toward the front of the store. Majeski pursued them, firing at a third bandit who held the door open for the escape of the two who had gone into the back room. He continued to fire as the bandits drove away in an automobile that had been parked at the curb.

Just before driving away, a shotgun muzzle was shoved over the side of the car. Heeding a cry from the druggist, Majeski crouched. There was a blast from the gun, breaking a plate glass window and the glass in the showcase at the spot where the policeman had been standing. Majeski ran outside, but the bandits had driven away.

A few hours later Majeski went to the Mother Cambrini hospital, where he identified two wounded men as the ones who had shot at him. A squad, acting on information obtained from the wounded men, rounded up the other two members of the bandit gang. Ten days later one of the wounded men died. The other is still in the hospital.

Majeski has been on the force for nine years, and has had two creditable mentions for courageous police work. He is 39 years old and lives with his wife at 4522 South Troy street.

Another act of heroism was reported by Chief of Detectives William H. Schoemaker. While watching an automobile, supposedly being driven by bandits, Policeman Charles Cohan of the detective bureau accosted two men who came up to the car. As he was searching them, one drew a revolver. Cohan grabbed the muzzle and thrust it down, at the same time bringing his own gun into play. He succeeded in keeping both men in custody until other members of the squad appeared. He had mortally wounded the one who had attempted to shoot him.

BANDITS HOLD UP GERMANIA CLUB; SEIZE STRONGBOX

The Germania club, at 108 Germania place, was robbed of $750 in cash and an unestimated amount of checks by four bandits yesterday. A steel box containing the money and checks was taken from Walter Morris, 7044 South Union avenue, an assistant to a certified public accountant, who was auditing the club books.

While a fourth man waited in an automobile in the alley in the rear of the building three bandits entered through the kitchen. One guarded the engineer and cook's helper in the kitchen. The other two went to the second floor offices, where Morris and Ferdinand Walthier, 10335 South California avenue, the bookkeeper, and Benjamin Bruggen, 3201 South Harlem avenue, the accountant, were working. After seizing the strongbox the bandits fled.

University Graduate Gets Sixty Days for Larceny

Judge Joseph H. McGarry, in the South State street court, yesterday sentenced Edward Lewis, 22 years old, 825 Edgecomb place, to sixty days in the House of Correction for larceny. Lewis pleaded guilty to stealing a suitcase from the Hotel Sherman checkroom. He said that he was a former University of Southern California student and the son of an engineer of the Wagner Electrical Manufacturing company of St. Louis, but that he had been unable to find work.

BRITAIN TO SET UP POLICE COLLEGE IN WAR ON CRIME

Plan to Train Officers in Modern Methods.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 13.—The modern criminal faces war in Great Britain. To meet ever growing skill in criminal methods, the metropolitan police force is to be made a "far more scientific and elaborate police machine."

A new type of officer is to be trained for the higher posts and commands on the police force. These higher educated men will be specially selected and trained in a new "police college" to be established in the outskirts of London.

Plan Special Crime Experts.

Special crime experts will be allocated to every police division of the metropolitan area and will be specially trained to deal with modern crimes. One-quarter of the force—5,000 men—is to be recruited for 10 years only in what is termed "short service engagements."

These are among the main proposals for reforms in the metropolitan police force as issued by the government in a white paper. They follow the suggestions of Chief Commissioner Lord Trenchard. A bill amending the police act of 1919 will be introduced in parliament next week.

The number of higher posts is to be greatly increased. The chief inspectors are to be almost doubled and new grades will be created. Private employment when off duty will be restricted and regulated.

Hope for Economy.

The training course at the new police college is to be about two years long, with two or three examinations and a short period of work as uniformed constables as tests. These new police college men will be appointed on probation to the new rank of "junior station inspector."

These revolutionary changes the government believes will result not only in greater efficiency, but in substantial economy. It is claimed that the increase in the number of higher posts will provide more scope for promotion and compulsory retirement of senior officers will give new men a chance to reach the higher commands while they are still young.

CHICAGO FLYER KILLED STUNTING TO AID CHARITY

ART KILLIPS.

Oklahoma City, Okla., May 13.—(AP)—Art Killips, Chicago pilot, was injured fatally at the Municipal airport here today when his airplane crashed into the ground while he was stunting at the charity benefit air races here. Taken unconscious from his plane, he died ten minutes after reaching a hospital.

The accident occurred when Killips' plane failed to come out of a "snap roll." Flying at an altitude of about 50 feet above the main runway, he did two "snap rolls." He apparently lost air speed as he came out of the last one and the plane fell.

Killips was holder of the Niagara Falls precision acrobatics trophy.

CAPONE GUARD'S SISTER FINED FOR FAKE AUTO TAGS

Mrs. Mary D'Andrea Ryan, 30 years old, 8100 Paxton avenue, a sister of Philip D'Andrea, former bodyguard of Al Capone, was fined $25 and costs by Judge Thomas A. Green yesterday on a charge of using fictitious automobile license plates.

While Judge Green was considering charging her with receiving stolen property, Mrs. Ryan tried to pay the fine to Lawrence Valenzio, the court clerk. Valenzio refused to take the money until Judge Green had concluded the case, and Mrs. Ryan was overheard telling her attorney, Charles Burke, concerning Valenzio: "Well, he'll get his." She told photographers: "I'm a member of a big family. I am one of the D'Andreas."

Judge Green later decided against placing the stolen property charge against Mrs. Ryan.

Mrs. Ryan was arrested Friday at 127 West Madison street. The license plates had been stolen two months ago from the automobile of Sherman Powell, 3709 Addison street, a motorman for the surface lines. In court yesterday she said that she had given $12 to a friend three weeks ago to buy license plates for her.

U. S. WILL HELP YOU IF VIOLENCE ENDS, CUBA TOLD

Welles Opens Series of Talks with Machado.

BY GUSTAVO RENO.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, May 13.—President Machado and Ambassador Sumner Welles of the United States today held the first of a series of informal conferences designed to solve Cuba's political and economic troubles. The conference took place at the president's country residence at Santiago de Las Vegas, 16 miles southeast of Havana.

Orestes Ferrara, Cuban secretary of state; Ramiro Guerra, secretary to Machado, and Edward L. Reed, first secretary of the American embassy, also took part in the 2½ hour conversations.

Demands End of Violence.

Although reporters were barred from the conference, government authorities revealed that the plan for rehabilitation now being evolved includes not only measures calculated to improve the economic status of the island but also to bring about an immediate rapprochement of the political situation.

Mr. Welles is understood to have made it clear to Machado that an economic solution is impossible without an immediate liquidation of the tactics of violence being employed by the government and its opponents. The ambassador indicated that Machado might be required to sacrifice some of his own principles "for the preservation of his country's independence and the welfare of his people."

The economic phase of the plan, it is reported, has three features: First, a general reduction of the Cuban tariff on imports from the United States; second, negotiations of a new reciprocity treaty substantially reducing duties on tobacco, citrus fruits and vegtables imported into the United States from Cuba; third, admittance into the United States duty free of a fixed quantity of sugar, probably 2,000,000 tons annually, or an increase to 40 per cent of the existing 20 per cent preferential.

May Reduce Tariff.

Should the provisions affecting Cuban sugar imports be considered impracticable, President Roosevelt, it is understood, is ready to reduce the 2 cent a pound duty to one and one-half cents. In this case importation would not be restricted. This reduction would be made by Mr. Roosevelt by using authority to negotiate commercial treaties with other nations which Mr. Welles is reported to have assured Machado would be forthcoming from congress.

The fourth provision of the plan deals with the consolidation of Cuba's foreign indebtedness of about $200,000,000 and extension of the short time amortizations of separate loans, averaging two years to 60 years, with interest at about 5 per cent.

The political phase of the plan is still in the formative stage and depends on developments. Another conference will be held Monday.

200 Reds Demonstrate.

Two hundred communists tonight demonstrated against Machado, Welles and the United States government. They shouted "Down with Machado! Down with Yankee imperialism! Beware of President Roosevelt's representative and his new deal!"

They were dispersed by police. Sixteen leaders were arrested.

Soldiers today killed two students, Jacinto Perez Diaz and Manuel Suarez, on a farm 19 miles south of Havana. The students were alleged to have been members of the A. B. C. terrorist organization. Two other students were seriously wounded by troops last night when they refused to halt on their command. The students carried a paper bag, which the soldiers suspected contained a bomb. Old newspapers were found in the bag.

CATHOLIC BISHOP SENT TO PRISON IN SERBIA FOR ATTACK ON SOKOL

SUBOTICA, Jugo-Slavia, May 13.—(AP)—Bishop Budanovic of the Catholic church was sentenced to ten days in prison and fined $80 today for reading from his pulpit a pastoral letter issued by the Jugo-Slav episcopate denouncing the Sokol organization as Godless.

The manifesto, issued in January, demanded that all Catholics withdraw from the Sokols, which have a political and sports program, since they must be regarded as Godless.

If he does not pay the fine Bishop Budanovic's prison term will be increased to 90 days. He was not present when the sentence was pronounced. His defense counsel argued that, according to a concordant, the bishop could not be tried in a civil court in matters of ecclesiastical law.

STOP PROBATION IN AUTO THEFTS, LOESCH DEMANDS

Asks Judges to Help End Growing Evil.

The Chicago Crime commission through its president, Frank J. Loesch, urged all judges yesterday to stop granting probation to automobile thieves, regardless of age, and to give immediate notice to that effect.

Administration of the present automobile theft laws is a failure, the commission reported to Mr. Loesch, the octogenarian crusader against crime and criminals. The penalty of 1 to 20 years in prison for auto theft is seldom imposed, it was stated.

Advocacy of a branch of the municipal court to hear only automobile theft cases is contained in the report. Now many of these cases are heard in the boys' court. With the judge of this court hearing from 90 to 100 cases a day, about 30 of which involve automobile larcenies, he cannot give the time needed to handle such cases, President Loesch was advised.

How Culprits Escape.

"A survey of criminal court dispositions in automobile larceny cases for January, February, and March discloses," says the report, "that in one instance only was a defendent sentenced to the penitenlary and only 17 to the reformatory, for the full term provided by statute."

"The record further discloses that in 47 of 203 cases in the criminal court the accused persons [if the finding of the court is correct] stole automobiles valued at less than $15, despite the fact statistics show the average value per stolen car to be $485. In 34 cases the accused persons were given punishment because they failed to obtain the consent of the owner to drive away his automobile. In 81 cases the defendants were convicted of misdemeanors and given light sentences that could have been imposed originally in the lower court.

"In addition to this 49 defendants were released on probation, probably on the theory that every person should be given the right to steal at least one motor vehicle before punishment is administered.

"From a tabulation for the last five months of 1932 it appears there were 1,245 defendants charged with automobile larceny and related offenses appearing in the Municipal court. Of these 703 were 17 to 20 years old.

"It appears that because the pastime of stealing automobiles is largely engaged in by youths between the ages of 17 and 20 that judges and prosecutors are reluctant to administer the law as the statutes provide and seek ways and means whereby they may turn automobile theft into a misdemeanor.

"It must be admitted that youthful defendants, accompanied by sobbing parents [most of them probably upright citizens], cause a tendency to lessen judicial sternness. It is no easy task to sentence a youth of 17 to the penitentiary or reformatory. It is much easier to give him another chance with the hope that he may not steal any more automobiles.

Merely a Pleasure Ride.

"The prosecuting official dislikes to incarcerate a youth. The defense attorney speaks of the boy who merely took a pleasure ride. The owner has recovered his car, even though smashed up pretty badly or stripped, and has suffered only a monetary loss, while the youth is about to suffer the loss of his liberty.

"The boy promises never to steal again and blames bad companions for his downfall. In most instances the defendant will not tell to whom he sold parts stripped from the car. Very little thought is given to the feelings of the citizen who suffered at the hands of the accused or to the policeman who risks his life chasing thieves in stolen automobiles and sees probation given to a youth he knows to be a menace to society. He knows he will have the same defendant on his hands sooner or later.

2,451 Thefts in Month.

"There were 2,451 automobiles stolen during January this year. The value of the stolen cars was $1,185,288. The police department has performed creditably in the recovery of stolen automobiles.

"The one remedy for the situation is strict adherence to the law as written. Once the lawbreaker learns that speedy and sure punishment will follow any transgression and that no pleas for leniency will be of avail improvement in the criminal situation will follow."

Mr. Loesch said he concurred in every finding of the survey. This city owes it to its residents, its youth, and to the Century of Progress visitors to make automobile theft a crime certain of punishment.

DE LUXE 4-DOOR SEDAN, $575 F. O. B.

H. CURTIS ELLIOTT, 11 LOCUST AVE., NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

CURTIS ELLIOTT wanted a new car! He had been looking around for months . . . had actually driven all three low-priced cars.

He's the retail sales manager of an oil burner company . . . and in his job he has to drive about 75 miles a day.

"Economy is important to me," said Elliott. "I couldn't afford to spend a lot of money.

"Then along came that Plymouth announcement of the new Standard Six. A 4-door Six-Cylinder Sedan for $510. That sounded good to me. That clicked with my pocketbook. Today I'm driving the first Standard Plymouth delivered in Westchester County and getting a big kick out of it."

Thanks, Mr. Elliott. We appreciate your making such a frank statement . . . and giving us permission to print it.

We think there are a lot of people like yourself who are looking for just this kind of a car.

The Standard has all the features that made Plymouth famous. It's a 70 horse-powered six on a 108-inch wheelbase. With Floating Power engine mountings . . . hydraulic brakes . . . safety-steel bodies . . . Rigid-X, double-drop frame.

It's a big, beautiful automobile . . . with plenty of room for a full-sized family of five. It's good-looking, too, with a smart new radiator and handsome interior.

And what a big thrill these new Standard Plymouth Six prices are! People used to think that Plymouth was just a little higher than the very lowest-priced cars. But that day is passed.

Today . . . Plymouth prices are as low as the lowest. And the Plymouth 4-door sedan is the lowest-priced 6-cylinder 4-door you can buy.

Go see how Plymouth has again set a new pace in giving the public more for their money.

STANDARD PLYMOUTH SIX

$445 AND UP F. O. B. DETROIT

with Floating Power engine mountings, hydraulic brakes, safety-steel body. 4-door sedan, (shown), $510; 2-door sedan, $465; rumble seat coupe, $485; business coupe, $445. Duplate Safety Plate Glass optional at slight extra cost.

W. W. MAJOR, 2281 W. GRAND AVE., DETROIT, MICHIGAN

IN DETROIT people know automobiles! It's the industry's "home town." Where everybody has the latest facts about cars...even before they happen.

Several weeks before the new De Luxe Plymouth was announced . . . Detroit had the news.

Mr. Major heard the story. Plymouth was going to bring out a new long wheelbase car . . . and that sounded like just what he wanted.

"I'd been driving one of the other low-priced cars," said Mr. Major. "But there's been so much Plymouth talk in Detroit lately . . . I decided to wait and look at the new De Luxe before buying.

"And when Mrs. Major saw that car . . . it was all over but signing the order. The De Luxe Plymouth was bigger and smarter-looking than other low-priced cars . . . and that's why we bought it."

And we're glad to publish it. For we think it will probably make a lot of people who want a smart low-priced car go see the new De Luxe Plymouth.

The De Luxe is longer . . . 112-inch wheelbase. With Free Wheeling . . . all-silent transmission . . . Duplate Safety Plate Glass windshield . . . automatic clutch at slight extra cost.

You'll like the new smart radiator . . . with its gleaming chromium grille. You'll like the beautifully styled interior . . . with its deep wide seats . . . handsome paneling . . . even a glove box in the dash to delight the feminine driver.

Everything you could ask for in a car is in the De Luxe Plymouth. There's speed, there's comfort, there's safety, there are thrills.

Won't you go see the De Luxe Plymouth before you buy any car? It's the world's biggest low-priced Six today . . . in inches and in value.

DE LUXE PLYMOUTH SIX

$495 AND UP F. O. B. DETROIT

with 30 quality advantages over other sixes at its price. The 4-door sedan (shown), $575; 2-door sedan, $525; convertible coupe, $595; rumble seat coupe; $545; business coupe, $495. Safety Glass windows optional; at nominal extra cost.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE JAPANESE CONQUESTS OF RECENT TIMES.

The Japanese are inside the Great Wall of China and no one knows where they are going to stop. They say that when their movements have insured the territory north of the wall, Manchukuo and Jehol, from incursions of Chinese war lords and bandits, their purpose is achieved. A new state, protected from disorders, will be given the best administration which Japan can achieve, and that at its best rates very high, and thereafter a rich country will realize its destiny and in peace will contribute to the greater welfare of humanity.

It is an old adage that the conqueror penetrating into China will find himself conquered and absorbed by the passive but mighty traditionalism of the Chinese. The conqueror can come in, but if he remains it's at his own peril. The ancient life takes him over. Japanese spokesmen say Japan has no intention of committing such a folly and that their plan is to produce a tolerable situation, permitting Chinese and Japanese relations to take peaceful shape and promote an understanding beneficial to all this part of Asia.

Meanwhile the occidental world, in spite of its protests, must observe the fact that another of the great conquests of history is virtually accomplished. The protesting statesmen have had a great deal to say about it, both through their respective governments and through the league of nations, and what they have had to say has been about as obstructive as the old Chinese wall itself. Japan has gone about its business with the occidental powers clamoring at it and, although apparently isolated, has had little diplomatic and no military trouble in taking over nearly four hundred thousand square miles of new territory and adding it as a subsidiary state to the domain of the Japanese empire. This has been done by brisk military movements and world opinion hasn't stopped it.

Japanese expansion, in results at least, is of its modern historical period, but within that period it presents the same persistence, if not irresistibility, which marked the expansion of the American people. The fact that the Japanese had to jump more water does not make a real distinction. Japan's feudal history is mostly one of exclusion of foreigners and inclusion of the Japanese, but the war with China in '94 not only marked the emergence of a modernized nation but it brought Formosa into Japanese territory, and in obtaining the independence of Corea prepared the way for the later absorption of that kingdom.

It was Corea which precipitated the war with Russia, and this war gave definite direction to the subsequent Japanese program in Manchuria. The world war found the Japanese extending their jurisdiction over Shantung, but in the end their territorial expansion was limited to the German islands north of the equator. The Russian war had yielded southern Sakhalin, of 13,000 square miles.

At nearly every step in expansion Japan has found a powerful European nation in the doorway. Once it was Russia and again it was Germany. The occidental powers either by force or diplomacy have endeavored to block the Japanese advance on the mainland, but the Japanese purpose has been persistent and the Japanese sense of opportunism is keen. There is resolution in Japanese diplomacy and power in the Japanese army. Since the final decade of the last century Japan has been the one definitely expanding and conquering nation.

World opinion when directed against the Japanese gets befogged by other policies of the nations which do protest so much. The new Manchurian territory of Japan is about two-thirds the extent of the territory the United States acquired by invading Mexico. It is much less than the area of British India, where the British, in spite of Indian revolutions, still are. The German colonies, which the allies took as spoils of war, somewhat challenge European criticism of the Japanese on the Asiatic mainland. Is it more reprehensible to take from China than from Germany? Does Mr. Kellogg's pact smile upon the Pacific islands which Japan took from Germany and shudder at what Japan takes from China on the mainland? Or is Mr. Kellogg's pact a small child lost in a blizzard of realities?

ALL HONORABLE MEN.

If there is a congressional district without its scores of cleaned out investors of the boom days, that district has not been heard from. Accordingly, it was inevitable that congress should attempt some regulation of the sale of securities with a view to placating an outraged public.

The competence of congress for the job of devising proper safeguards is not open to question. It takes a thief to catch a thief. It takes a confidence man to catch a confidence man. It takes a defaulter to catch a defaulter. The policies pursued by congress in recent years have given all the evidence required of congressional competence in the present field of endeavor.

The congress which is now solemnly legislating investment safeguards is the successor of congresses whose profligacy forced the treasury to borrow stupendous sums on short term notes which were thrust upon the federal reserve system. The present congress is apparently about to carry on the tradition by forcing the lending of even more staggering sums. The inevitable result has been the repudiation of its obligations by the United States government. The government which solemnly pledged itself to pay off its maturing notes in gold has invited its creditors to try and get gold. The government which during and after the war used every trick of the high pressure salesman to sell its bonds to the forgotten men and women of the country has been forced by a profligate congress to repudiate its solemn obligations to the holders of its Liberty bonds. Let these investors try to get their interest in gold or even in the going rate for gold.

The gentlemen in congress who are loudest in their condemnation of investment frauds are saying nothing about the fraud they have perpetrated on the investment public. They offer no safeguards for past or future investors in securities of the federal government or of the lesser governments, all of which are to be exempt from the operation of the proposed securities law. Congress behaves as if a widow who bought a west park bond were any less in need of protection than a widow who bought a real estate bond.

If hypocrisy is ever funny, the spectacle now afforded by congress is enough to make the world shake with laughter.

REFORM THE SENATE.

Congressman Beck of Pennsylvania, the great constitutionalist of the house of representatives, has been diverting himself intellectually for some time with the idea that the American Union under the constitution faces so many economic incongruities and doctrinal inconsistencies that its continuance cannot be justified in logic. The congressman's moral is intended to be rather indirect than direct. It is to be found in reverse rather than obverse.

When the congressman seems to accept the revolutionary conclusion that the states must dissolve their present association and seek other associations which will concede realities and serve their interests he is actually calling attention to the fact that inconsistencies and incongruities must be recognized and taken out of the Union because the Union must continue and its defects should not.

The incongruities have resulted from determination of politically powerful but economically weak states to divide the spoils they unjustly take from states of greater consequence. This exploitation of the economically strong by the politically powerful is nothing new in history. Most evolutions of political rights present the struggle of masses to escape from the inequities of special group dominance. The encouraging figure in the picture is that of success. Nations do rid themselves of such injustices.

Mr. Beck presents a possibility of the most radical solution, which would be a rearrangement of American states according to natural position and economic interests. He merely dramatizes the necessity of making the changes within the Union which will restore the old concepts of its founders and permit the execution of its real purposes.

NOTE ON ACADEMIC FREEDOM.

The discharge of scores of university professors in Germany because of their political views or racial origin was made easy because virtually all of the institutions of higher learning in Germany are state supported and state controlled. The theory on the continent has been that only by means of state control can academic freedom be maintained. When higher learning is intrusted to private organizations, it was believed, the professors have to take orders from those who pay the bills. The state was therefore made the guardian of freedom of thought in the universities because the state was believed to have no economic or social bias.

How preposterous this notion was can now be plainly seen. In most of the endowed universities in this country substantial sections of the faculties of political science, political economy and sociology are out of sympathy with the views which presumably are held by the trustees. Nevertheless, these professors continue to speak and write with little interference and less censorship. A good many of them even resent the suggestion that they are not justified in imposing their views as dogmas upon impressionable students. A professor in this country is free to advocate the aggrandizement of the state to his heart's content and not even his colleagues who may have some notion of what a government does to professors when it can coerce them dare to interfere.

The most shocking invasions of academic freedom in this country have not come in the endowed universities but in the state universities, like Mississippi. There the governor fired professors with a view to giving their jobs to some of his political followers in the barber shops. Something like that is happening in Germany today. Something not very different happened in Tennessee a few years ago when the monkey law was enacted.

Academic freedom will be preserved where men in a position to discipline professors for their views deliberately refrain from doing so in the belief that the search for truth should be unhampered. By and large, this tolerant spirit will be found far more generally among self-perpetuating and nonpolitical boards of trustees whose members have been indoctrinated with the university ideal than among demagogues to whom the only truth is their own ambitions. Our state universities today are as free as they are in large part because university standards of freedom have been set at such endowed institutions as Harvard. The natural tendency of a government controlled institution is to be seen today at Heidelberg, Jena, and Moscow, and was seen a few years ago in Mississippi.

THOUGHTS AT 65

BY WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE.

[Editor Emporia Gazette, Emporia, Kas.]

My sixty-fifth birthday passed yesterday.

Today I seem to be well planted in my middle sixties. I have definitely left the early sixties and in a few months will be well into the borderland of the late sixties. I used to be afraid of the sixties. Indeed, I was afraid of the fifties. On my fiftieth birthday, coming down to the party which Mrs. White gave for me, I was so overcome by fear of impending senility that I sat on the stair steps and wept. But I am not afraid now. The middle sixties are good. So far as I can tell, though the seeds of death may be in my body, I have never seemed so well in my life, never could do a better day's work than I have done yesterday and today; never had higher hopes for usefulness and happiness; never had better friends; never had so long a lever and so solid a fulcrum with which to make myself felt in my little world.

In his middle sixties a man has a right to be a Narcissus and to look down into his life and preen himself a bit. Probably in the mirror of his past a man will mistake his vices for his virtues. I seem to be proud today of my constancy. I was born in the town where I live. I work day after day about 500 feet from my birthplace. I have lived all my life in one state, except a three year detour in Kansas City, Mo. I have lived only in five towns, Emporia, El Dorado, Lawrence, Topeka, and Kansas City. And nearly 40 of my 65 years have been spent in this town. I have lived in one ward for 38 years, in one house for nearly 34 years. I have had one political party, barring the Bull Moose detour, and have lived in one church, with one wife. And so far as I know every friend of my childhood who is living is my friend today. I have never had a major quarrel with any one, and I am not conscious of having an enemy. No one ever tried to do me wrong. No one ever betrayed me, nor so far as I know ever tried to hurt me or swindle me. I have found humanity good, with much more that was fine than was false. We all have weaknesses. But I have figured that others have put up with mine so tolerantly that I would be less than fair not to make a reasonable discount for theirs.

The thing I cannot understand about life is that I am old, or that those whom I have known all these 65 years are old. They all seem young to me, and I seem young. I must know a score of people whom I see every year and hear from frequently whom I knew in my childhood. I cannot see that they have changed except externally. They have the same strength and the same weaknesses they had in childhood and youth. Out of each friend's eyes I see looking the same essential individuals that I saw in childhood, and I am sure they all see the same in me. The years have done nothing to that deep final something that is personality. It is changeless. It has resisted the years and the tortures of the flesh, so why may it not be immortal—that mysterious spiritual essence that we call personality, for short the soul?

I do not know, and it will do me no good to care. Being 65, I shall probably know quicker than most people, and that does not disturb me. I fear vastly more a futile, incompetent old age than I do any form of death. As one grows into one's middle sixties death seems more reasonable than it does in childhood and youth. The thought of death used to terrify me. Now it seems a natural thing, a part of life, just another experience, whatever it is. So many of my friends have faced it, why not I? In the meantime, why fret about it?

I have been shaving this funny old face every Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday for years and years. I have come to look on it as a mask behind which the reality that is I has to hide. It is getting a bit battered and shopworn. Perhaps it would not be such a bad idea to cast it off and let dust return to dust, and if there is any salvage "with God be the rest."

In the meantime life has been good, a tremendously interesting adventure. I have never had a bored hour in my life. I get up every morning now wondering what new strange, gorgeous thing is going to happen, and it always happens at fairly reasonable intervals. And generally, and this is a part of the unbending curve of my life, adventure comes from afar, from the outside, from things over which I have no control. Lady Luck has been good to me. I fancy she is good to every one, only some people are dour, and when she gives them the come-hither with her eyes they look down or turn away and lift an eyebrow. But me, I give her the wink and away we go.

Many years ago at Coney Island one night I saw stretched across the street a great carnival banner on which was written, "Ain't It Grand to Be Bughouse." It has been my life motto since. There is no insanity so devastating in man's life as utter sanity. It will get him quicker than whisky. Logic is an addiction that drives men into acute melancholia and makes dumb bunnies of its devotees. So here I stand in my middle sixties thumbing my nose at the future and throwing kisses at the past. I challenge Fate to do her worst, for I have beaten her at her own game. I have come through threescore years and five and —being naturally lucky—have taken more than my share of the tricks.

Editorial of the Day

PARLEZ VOUS!

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

Mr. Roosevelt waved the interpreter away when former Premier Herriot called. The President speaks French. We needn't throw our hats in the air about that, but it is a graceful accomplishment which, we feel sure, pleases us all. It certainly pleased Mr. Herriot.

The episode directs attention to the fact that few men in our public life speak any language other than their own. The limitation, if such it be, has not noticeably cramped their style. But the equipment that was adequate yesterday may no longer be so rated. Other times, other manners—and other requirements. The circumference of public life, once national, is now almost terrestrial. It may not be necessary for the statesman of the future to be a linguist, but the wider and more varied his attainments the larger his potential sphere of usefulness. Is not this a reality for our educational directors to recognize and undertake to meet?

Americans, Englishmen, Frenchmen, Germans, Italians, Spaniards, or what you will, we must all, in an economic sense, be citizens of the world. Shall we, in the new state, speak all the languages of all the nations? That is a pretty large order. It may be ventured, however, that the competent citizen of the finer, bigger, more sumptuous tomorrow will be quite at home in many tongues.

GARDEN SASS.

SINCE the earliest days mankind has had a way of eating early "spring stuff" as soon as it becomes available. It probably was experience, but it may have been some sort of biologic urge that caused him to go to so much trouble to find it. Something told him to get the earliest fruits and vegetables that could be found, and to accomplish this often required effort and caused inconvenience.

The earlier scientists, knowing no more than half the facts, scoffed at times. They said early stuff was mostly water—flavored—but water nevertheless. It has almost no calories. Nature required time to build substantial food values, as time was required for all other solid building, and this quick growing spring stuff was, therefore, of small food value.

Or perhaps the tendency to scoff took another form. There were many and efficient methods of preserving foods, and that carried over from the preceding season in storage or in cans and jars was a better product. They proved their point by showing analyses and reports on calories.

The later words of science support the views of the man who followed folk custom and confounded the earlier scientists. Very fresh and even immature vegetables and fruits have advantages that can be proved by the laboratory. We may not be able to prove that a fish personally caught and cooked in a short while on the bank of the stream is the best of all fish. Perhaps the effort of fishing and the pride of success whet the appetite. But when it comes to early spring vegetables the issue is not befogged by outside factors.

Early spring vegetables eaten near the place in which they grow have provable advantages. One of the most necessary vitamins is that designated as A. This one is made from chemicals known to be present in vegetables. The best source is carotin, so named because it can be extracted from carrots. The chemist can make these substances artificially or he can extract them from carrots, and he can prove that one is made from another. Carotin abounds especially in the colored vegetables. Several of those are used habitually on the table. The young, tender, early spring garden vegetables are good sources for this group of food elements. The rich yellow of spring milk and of spring butter is, in great part, due to them.

Another vitamin especially needed in the spring is C. Of all the vitamins this one is the least stable. It disappears from foods that have been kept, or exposed to light and drying, or have taken the weather. It does not stand heating. Aging of the vegetables as they grow in the ground is destructive to it. Therefore the foods richest in vitamin C are those that are quickly grown in the sunlight and open air, gathered when unfaded and tender, and eaten fresh. Those that can be eaten raw are best when consumed in that state.

HAY FEVER.

H. H. M. writes: My wife has a chronic case of hay fever which makes its appearance every summer. Could you not use your good offices to influence some of the vast amount of unemployed which are available to make a thorough cleanup of the properties where the various weeds which cause this disease grow, eradicating them before they can do the damage? This would also make the city a more pleasant place for such visitors as are similarly afflicted.

REPLY.

In this city some of those who are being given relief have been employed in weed eradication for the last two summers. The movement should be greatly extended.

In some communities there are pretty well enforced weed laws. Some have ordinances which permit the authorities to cut the weeds on private property and collect from the farmers.

The state pays large sums of money for the eradication of weeds harmful to crops. No state pays a cent for the eradication of weeds harmful to people.

BURNING FEET.

W. F. C. writes: What is good for burning feet? They burn so bad I can hardly stand it.

REPLY.

Get a good foot powder. Use plenty of it on your feet and socks and within your shoes.

CORRECTING ERROR.

S. A. A. writes: Just a word in correction of a mistake in your column. You gave a formula for an amalgam as 67 per cent mercury. This should have been 67 per cent silver.

REPLY.

The mistake was mine. The quotation should have read:

67.0 per cent silver
29.0 per cent tin
3.5 per cent copper
.5 per cent zinc

to which is added mercury to produce the amalgamation.

DIVIDING PROPERTY.

Chicago, April 26.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. After a will has been probated and the year is up, is the executor's work finished or [2] is she still executor until the property is finally disposed of? 3. Property was willed to father and then to three heirs after his death. Can one heir who has one-quarter interest of property coming to her refuse to sign for necessary straight mortgage loan which seems necessary to take up, to be used to cancel monthly part payment loan? 4. Is there some way by which we could make this loan without her consent to protect the father and two other heirs' interests? B. W.

1. Yes, except that distribution and accounting would be necessary.
2. Yes.
3. Yes.
4. Where the owners of undivided interests in real estate cannot agree, any one of them is entitled to force public sale by partition proceedings. The costs of such proceedings, including the complainant's solicitor's fees, are chargeable against the proceeds of sale.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PERSONAL PROPERTY TAX.

De Kalb, Ill., May 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My sister and I recently received our personal property tax bills which were so large that we could not account for them. We were told it was because we had owned bank stock. We did own stock in two banks, both of which have been in the hands of receivers for over a year. In the case of one bank we have paid our stockholders' liability in full. In the other case, settlement is still pending. The point is that both banks are closed and the stock is not worth the paper on which it is written. Certainly no law can be sufficiently unjust to compel payment on such worthless paper. E. M.

If the banks were closed before April 1 of the year covered by the tax bill, then you should not have been taxed on the stock, since, presumably, the stock was valueless at that time, but the time to have objected to your assessment figures was when those figures were first published. It is too late when you get your tax bills. If the amount is substantial, however, you can wait for suit to be brought and then try to compromise the amount.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

40 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 14, 1893.

CHICAGO.—For the second time the World's Fair blossomed last night like a rose of fire in the darkness. To see it bloom 75,000 people left the smoke and bricks of the town and gathered about the Grand Basin, whose burnished waters lapped against walls of marble strung with beads of gold. For the first time under the glamour of electricity the MacMonnies fountain was in full play. Its dolphins were afloat in their native element and from 140 jets a million gallons of water an hour fell in spray on the dripping water nymphs.

Although but partially illuminated last night, the Midway Plaisance was full of people—and contrasts. It appeared to draw better than any other section of the fair, as a matter of fact, in the early part of the evening. The Midway seemed to be particularly popular with young people, who lingered along the boulevard and gawked and stared at the strange inhabitants of the queerest street on earth.

Unless something goes amiss in the plans of the navy department the visitors to the World's Fair will have an opportunity to see the Columbian caravels floating in the lagoon about July 1.

Whether or not the gates of the World's Fair will be opened to the public Sundays is a question that will now have to be determined by the courts. One action calling in question the powers of the commission, the rights of the people, and asking for a construction of the laws bearing upon the whole subject matter has been begun in the Superior court of Cook county.

Dr. Pell of the medical department was pleased to find benches scattered around the grounds at the fair yesterday. In all, 20,000 lineal feet of seats will be put on the grounds for the accommodation of tired visitors.

The total number of tickets sold yesterday was 49,455. In addition it was estimated that 5,000 souvenir tickets were taken in.

Mount Vernon at the exposition has received its first installment of furniture and paintings, but the greater portion of the cargo is still en route.

The German village was deserted last night—no lights. It had been a brisk day, however, in the village, for in addition to the music, beer, etc., the moated castle had been opened with its magnificent ancient and medieval museum, which contains what is said to be the finest collection of old armor, arms, and warlike and domestic utensils in Europe.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 14, 1917.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Moved by the pleas of Marshal Joffre and other members of the French and British war missions, President Wilson has decided to send American troops to the European firing line as soon as it is possible. The war department has been instructed to rush all plans, and army officers predicted that American troops will be on French soil before the end of July. The President is giving his attention to the selection of a general to command the first contingent. The present plan is to send from two to four divisions of troops, numbering from 56,000 to 112,000 men. It is probable that about one-third will be seasoned regular army men and the remainder National Guardsmen and volunteers.

PETROGRAD.—The Russkaia Volia says that three German officers, a colonel, a captain, and a lieutenant, recently approached the Russian lines in the Dvinsk region with a white flag and asked for an interview with the commanding general for the purpose of opening pourparlers. The Germans suggested that a neutral point be decided upon for the opening of negotiations. Gen. Dragomiroff bluntly rejected their proposals, declaring that they involved treachery to Russia's allies, and sent the envoys back to their own line.

WAR SUMMARY.—London reports the greater part of Bullecourt is now in British hands. Advance of lines south of Scarpe river and improved positions north of the stream are claimed. Berlin says all attacks except in the Roeux sector broke down. The British claim a better foothold in this village. Paris reports the repulse of vicious German counterattacks on the plateau of Craonne. Berlin reports French attempts to advance fail. Amsterdam reports 63 dead and 100 injured in British sea raid on Zeebrugge.

[PORT CENSORED.]—The American steamship Mongolia, from which the country's first shot in the war with Germany was fired, arrived at an American port today from Europe, bringing a report by the officers of another apparent encounter with a U-boat. The second adventure was on May 4, according to Lieut. Bruce M. Ware, the man who commanded the naval gun crew which disposed of the submarine on April 19, the anniversary of the battle of Lexington.

MILWAUKEE.—Apropos of the senate's action yesterday in amending the espionage bill to prohibit the use of cereals or grains in the manufacture of liquors, statistics gathered in the local breweries show that for the year 1916 the nine Milwaukee breweries employed 6,670 persons and paid out in wages $5,195,000.

TRIBUTE TO THE PRESIDENT.

Dowagiac, Mich., May 8.—After twelve years of Republican misrule, which ended in chaos, the country is to be congratulated on having at its head the brainiest man in all history, notwithstanding pinheaded folks' and crooked politicans' opinions to the contrary. Not only have we the greatest President but we have the greatest leader, the smoothest politician, and the greatest statesman this country has ever produced, bar none. Let's give him flowers, encouragement, and praise now rather than withhold that honor and credit which all future generations are sure to bestow on Franklin D. Roosevelt. OLIVER M. COTTEN.

PEDESTRIAN'S RIGHTS.

Chicago, May 9.—I note with interest Mary Elgan's letter regarding pedestrian regulation in Los Angeles, advocating the same for Chicago's loop. Miss Elgan has overlooked several important facts, viz.:

Pedestrian regulation was attempted in Chicago several years ago and abandoned, as it was found to be unpopular and impracticable. As was well expressed in an excellent editorial in THE TRIBUNE at the time advocating a repeal of the ordinance, the turning movement of street traffic held up pedestrians when they had the green light, forcing them to cross against the red light. Any attempt to give the pedestrians proper passage by prohibiting all turns of vehicles would tie up street traffic.

Courts have repeatedly ruled against pedestrian regulation. Los Angeles citizens, unlike Chicagoans, evidently are ignorant of their legal rights.

Statistics show Chicago's loop district to be practically free of accidents, while about a year ago the National Safety council announced that Los Angeles had the highest motor vehicle death rate among the large cities of the United States. Chicago police, experts in handling traffic, need no instructions from the jay cops of Los Angeles. F. R.

IOWA AND CHICAGO.

Fort Dodge, Ia., May 9.—After reading your May 9 edition in regard to the T. N. T. action of tying up your drivers' union and recalling recent articles on bombings and other disturbances I am moved to compare these conditions in Chicago with the recent outbreak which occurred here in Iowa.

A small band of stricken farmers, not on $5 to $8 per day wages, revolted against a farm foreclosure. They did act out of reason in attacking a district judge, and I am not upholding their actions, but, in heaven's name, if what they did caused our governor to declare martial law and call out the militia, why doesn't the governor of your state declare martial law in Cook county and put a couple of National Guardsmen on each truck and clean out that condition?

With the World's Fair about to open in Chicago, I would think drastic action necessary to show prospective customers for the Fair that you people mean business in cleaning up Chicago.

DR. H. B. FRAMPTON.

DEFENSE OF THE FARMER.

Chicago, May 9.—C. H. P. was uncomplaining when he lost money in the stock market, which he admits he never earned. I wonder how uncomplaining he would be if he put in about 13 hours of hard labor in all kinds of weather. I would like to see him trudge behind a drag on plowed ground for about 20 miles a day and about 13 hours per day and add about two more hours on that for chores or else husk corn in zero weather for almost no profit, if not a loss, and do this for about 40 years and find out he has less now then when he started.

I wonder how he would like to eat pork about 365 days in a year because he can't afford juicy steaks, salads, and iced tea.

Farmers work in dirt and not dirty politics so you can be a dude in an easy chair so he can produce food to give you strength to push a pen. He is honest, God-fearing, and all he asks for is justice. A renter hasn't been able to purchase land for at least 20 years and the only ones that own any farms nowadays are those who inherited or bankers that foreclosed.

Most farmers cannot even afford a newspaper. They are taxpayers and entitled as much to demonstrations for rights and help as city people are entitled to charity and demonstrations. They want fair prices so they can live and work. They ask for nothing gratis. Chicago's unemployed live better than farmers ever lived. Farmers are intelligent, but we can't all live in cities. Thank God, some one toils and tills the soil so we city people can exist.

GRATEFUL CITIZEN.

AMEN, BROTHER.

Chicago, May 9.—In a previous administration we common people were forced, day after day, to stuff our ears to keep out the deafening shrieks of police sirens, day in and day out, dashing dangerously through traffic escorting the assistant chairman of the committee on rooms to the current convention and the secretary of the executive committee and the girl friend to their favorite "speak."

Came a more peaceful time when one's ears had only the crash of freight trains, the roar of hundreds of "L" cars, the horns of a few thousand cars, and the myriad other frightful noises of a great city to contend with.

Now suddenly, under the new dynasty of King Kelly the First, again the shrieking screech of screaming sirens is heard day and night. Thousands of cars are delayed while a car or two, preceded by two and frequently more motorcycle cops, sweeps by to get the clerk of the Knights of the Great Outdoors to the entrance of the Fair three minutes sooner. When the procession finally turns off the main stem usually a dozen cars keep straight on. Their alert drivers took advantage of the escort to run a few red lights themselves.

Won't somebody tell the administration that such shrieking, ear splitting exhibitions of boot licking are very unbecoming in a real American city?

FOREIGN QUEENS SAIL FOR THE U. S. NEXT THURSDAY

Race to City to Compete for Crown.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Beyond the Atlantic this morning a petite English miss and a slim French mademoiselle, wild with excitement, are packing their bags for as thrilling a journey as either have conjured in their dreams. They'll be the foreign representatives in the queen's court at the Century of Progress. And in cities and hamlets throughout the United States girls are searching the rotogravure section of The Sunday Tribune to discover whether they have been included in the second group of ten winners, reproduced there.

Fifty-one girls in all are in the process of selection for the galaxy from which the sovereign will be chosen. Last Sunday's editions identified the first group of ten, joined now by this morning's bevy, including two Chicagoans. All will gather in the World's Fair city on May 25.

Sail on Thursday.

Thursday of this week the Empress of Britain, Canadian Pacific liner, will slide from the pier at Southampton with an auburn haired little Londoner as one passenger, and at Cherbourg will pick up the Parisienne. Then the swanky ocean greyhound will put on full speed ahead for the westward passage, in an attempt to make the run into Quebec a record one, and deliver its two pretty celebrities at the Canadian port at the earliest possible moment.

Contest officials had made arrangements for the two Europeans to embark on the 19th, before President Roosevelt advised A Century of Progress executives that he would be unable to come to Chicago on June 1, and it thus became necessary to hold the [illegible] on May 27, instead. So the transportation line was appealed to [illegible] possible haste in reaching this country, to permit the English and French girls to compete in the selection May 26 of the Queen of the Fair. And the pledge was made.

Girl Asks Questions.

When the Empress of Britain arrives at Quebec the two girls will be rushed to a train waiting to steam out of the station toward Chicago, and will be started on the last lap of their journey with the greatest dispatch.

In The Tribune's offices in London a few days ago, the fortunate girl whose photograph was selected for the final competition hung over a map of Chicago and shot questions by the score at the local representatives, about the city she knows only from newspaper reports and American films.

5 Feet 2; 108 Pounds.

"I hadn't the slightest idea I could win," she told the interviewers. "I cannot believe it even now. I'm still pinching myself. But I'm looking forward just the same, to seeing America and Chicago."

Little Miss London's father is retired and lives in a home on the western outskirts of the city. In the summer she swims daily at the baths near by and has devoted much time to the study of music and dancing. She is 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 108 pounds.

The photograph she entered in the contest to find a Queen of the Fair, she added, was submitted first to the Paris edition of The Theune and was forwarded from there to the local headquarters in Tribune Tower. It arrived in Chicago on the last possible date for entry, the deadline having been reached on April 15.

A French Stenog.

Mlle. Paris comes from the grand army of working girls, being employed as a stenographer in the French capital. She is taller and more slender than her English rival, being five feet five inches tall and weighing 103 pounds. Her softly waved hair is smooth and blonde, and her eyes are hazel.

In this morning's group of ten girls only nine are eligible. According to an announcement by the contest executives, V. F., a candidate from Little Rock, Ark., has been disqualified because she was married after her picture had been submitted. The fact did not become known until the picture was in print. Under the rules of the competition she is automatically eliminated and the judges must select another girl to substitute for her in the court.

Of the other nine, two are from Chicago, the home city of the Fair, and both are employed in a secretarial capacity. One has an excellent position in a law office, and the other is the capable assistant to an official of a major insurance concern. Both are brunettes.

The remainder of the nine come from widely scattered localities. Portland, the city of roses, sends a piquant schoolgirl. The east claims representatives from Dorchester, Mass., and Philadelphia. Berea, Ky., will have a popular home town girl in the court. San Francisco's current delegate is a blonde, and North Holston, Va., lines up with another. The first girl named from Kansas City is pleasantly neutral, but sparkling with vitality and interest.

New Yorkers Inspect "Fastest Train in World"

CHICAGO PAYS TRIBUTE TODAY TO ITS MOTHERS

With flowers, telegrams and greeting cards Chicago observes Mothers' day today. The day will be noted in many churches. At the Ogden Park Methodist Episcopal church, 68th street and Loomis boulevard, Judge John F. Haas will be the speaker at the 11 o'clock service. His topic will be "Loyalty of Children to Mother."

Miss Helen Cirese, president of the Women's Bar association, will address the members of the Deborah Boys' club at their annual dinner for their mothers in their building at 2541 Division street. Mrs. Burt Marx of 1357 Madison Park will head a group of women who will take the place of mothers of the orphan boys in the group.

Garfield park conservatory has issued a special invitation to mothers to view the arrangements of their favorite flowers there. Color effects of the massed blooms were planned for the occasion and include most of the old fashioned varieties, as well as the showier flowers. A total of 4,500 species of plants will be on view.

HORNER ISSUES PROCLAMATION ON MOTHER'S DAY

Springfield, Ill., May 13.—[U. P.]—Paying tribute to "the nobility of motherhood" and appealing for assistance to mothers who may be in adverse circumstances, Gov. Henry Horner, in a proclamation made public today, urged statewide observance of Mother's day tomorrow.

"In recognation of motherhood and the affection of the nation for mothers, congress has designated the second Sunday in May as Mother's day, thus establishing the beautiful custom of public acknowledgment of our devotion and our love for our mothers," said the proclamation.

"I hereby request that the national flag be displayed generally on our public today, urged state-wide observance appropriate exercises be held in the churches, Sunday schools, and in other suitable places, and that all of us on this day renew our pledge to do our utmost to assist all mothers who are in any way the victims of adversity."

Minnesota Blue Sky Law Expert Dies of HeartAttack

Minneapolis, Minn., May 13.—(AP)—Charles W. Gillam, 72, Minnesota state securities commissioner from 1927 until last February, and recognized as a national authority on administration of blue sky laws, died at his home here today from a heart attack. He formerly was a state senator from Jackson and Cottonwood counties for 12 years. A widow, two sons, and a daughter survive.

Ernest Torrence, Actor, Ill; Condition Called 'Critical'

New York, May 13.—(AP)—The condition of Ernest Torrence, actor, is described as "very critical" at the Lenox Hill hospital, where he underwent a major operation.

ARCHIE COHEN DENIES CHARGES IN BAR REPORT

Archie H. Cohen, master in chancery, sent a flat denial yesterday to the Chicago Bar association that he had been appointed by Judge Michael Feinberg as "receiver in a number of important matters," as stated in the report of the association's committee on receiverships and mortgage foreclosures which was given wide publicity yesterday. In a letter to Charles P. Megan president of the bar association, Mr. Cohen, after dwelling upon the committee's accusation that he was one of the recipients of receiverships, said:

"Please be advised that I have never been a receiver in any case in Cook county or any other place at any time upon the appointment of Judge Feinberg or any other judge.

"I feel that your desire is to adhere to the truth and therefore call your attention to the absolute falsity of the statements."

ITALIAN PLANES TO CARRY MAIL TO CHICAGO FAIR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, May 13.—Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian air minister, who will lead the mass formation flight of 24 planes from Orbetello, Italy, to Chicago for A Century of Progress exhibition at the close of this month or the first week in June today announced that 20 of the 24 planes will carry mail. It will be the most expensive mail ever carried. A rayal tariff has been ordered.

For carrying a letter anywhere along the route between Italy and Reykjavik, Iceland, $1.50 in stamps will be required. A letter posted in Italy destined for Chicago will cost $3.12 in stamps. Special stamps commemorative of the flight will be issued in 50 Italian lire and 25 Italian lire denominations. [A lira is now worth about six cents]. The stamps will be in three parts and will indicate on which one of the 20 planes the letter is being carried.

Plans for refueling and making repairs along the Italy, England, Ireland, Iceland and Labrador route have been practically completed, Gen. Balbo said today.

TRAFFIC FROM PORTS IN U. S. TO EUROPE DROPS

New York, May 13.—[Special.]—The figures of the north Atlantic conference on passenger traffic to and from all ports of the United States and Europe, including the Mediterranean, for this year up to May 6, show a drop of about 30 per cent compared with the same period in 1932, which itself was not a good year for travel.

Eastbound passengers of all classes numbered 72,685 and westbound 51,899, a total of 124,585. For the same period last year the totals were: Eastbound traffic, 93,934; westbound, 60,942; total, 154,876, which was 30,292 above the number for this year.

The total for first class travel eastbound for the period in 1932 was 18,966 and westbound 11,693, against 15,104 eastbound and 10,217 westbound this year.

HEIR TO THRONE OF NORWAY MAY SEE CHICAGO FAIR

OSLO, May 13.—[U. P.]—Crown Prince Olav and Princess Martha of Norway may visit A Chicago Century of Progress exposition this fall unless something unforeseen intervenes, it was learned today.

They plan to leave Oslo late in August, accepting invitations tendered by Oskar W. Hansen, Chicago sculptor, as spokesman for Scandinavians in Minnesota, Illinois, North and South Dakota, and other midwestern states.

NOTES OF THE WORLD'S FAIR

Next Tuesday will be the last opportunity to visit the World's Fair grounds before the exposition is formally opened by President Roosevelt on May 27. Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, general manager, announced last night that the gates would be closed Tuesday evening because the prolonged rain had so impeded construction that crowds must be excluded to give workmen a free hand. Automobile traffic will be barred from the grounds today, but adequate bus service has been arranged.

King Gustav V. of Sweden will send his nephew, Count Folke Bernadotte, as his personal representative for Swedish-American day at the Fair, June 19, C. Lundquist, Swedish consul, was officially notified yesterday.

A jade temple, 14 feet high, which required 18 years to build, will be one of the exhibits at the Chinese village to be constructed just south of the Temple of Jehol. This was announced yesterday by Ziang Ling Chang, China's commissioner to the Fair, upon his arrival to take charge of the construction work. Commissioner Chang also said his country would send the greatest troupe of Chinese acrobats in the world, the foremost actors and actresses of China and a wealth of the nation's products — porcelain, lacquer ware, silks, embroideries, carved ivories, rugs and furs.

The fair exhibits will range from a drop of water to a diamond mine, a coal mine, a reproduction of an entire countryside, and a chunk of an Adirondack forest. The New York state commission has transported seven carloads of forest trees, fifty tons of rocks and boulders, a section of an old corduroy road, great numbers of trout, pickerel, and bass from New York streams, and a complete swamp to the hall of states. Tumbling from the rocks of the Adirondacks, a winding brook will flow into a pond containing the fish. So natural was the transplantation that birds have been attracted to the trees.

Space in the exhibits buildings is rapidly being exhausted. Space already rented is as follows: Communications' building, 100 per cent; Travel and Transport building dome, 100 per cent; Hall of Science, 98 per cent; Home Planning hall, 97 per cent; Agricultural building, 97 per cent; Electrical building, 94 per cent; General Exhibits', 89 per cent; Travel and Transport building, 85 per cent, and Hall of Social Science, 85 per cent.

Construction of an ultra-modern auditorium, to be known as Spoor's Spectaculum, at a cost of $150,000 will be completed two days before the opening of the fair, it was announced yesterday. George K. Spoor, born in Highland Park, and E. H. Amet of Waukegan were the first men to make movies, and Mr. Spoor will introduce "natural vision" at the fair. The auditorium will be so constructed that from each of the 1,250 seats the "spectorama" on the enormous screen may be seen without distortion of vision.

Police Battle Fugitive; Stray Shot Kills Negro

An unidentified Negro was shot and killed last night during a gunfight between Sergt. John Bolden of the Gary force, and William Holmes, a Negro fugitive. The shooting occurred at 13th avenue and Adams street, Gary. Bolden was grazed on the head by a bullet from Holmes' gun. Holmes escaped. Whether the man slain was an innocent bystander or companion of Holmes could not be established.

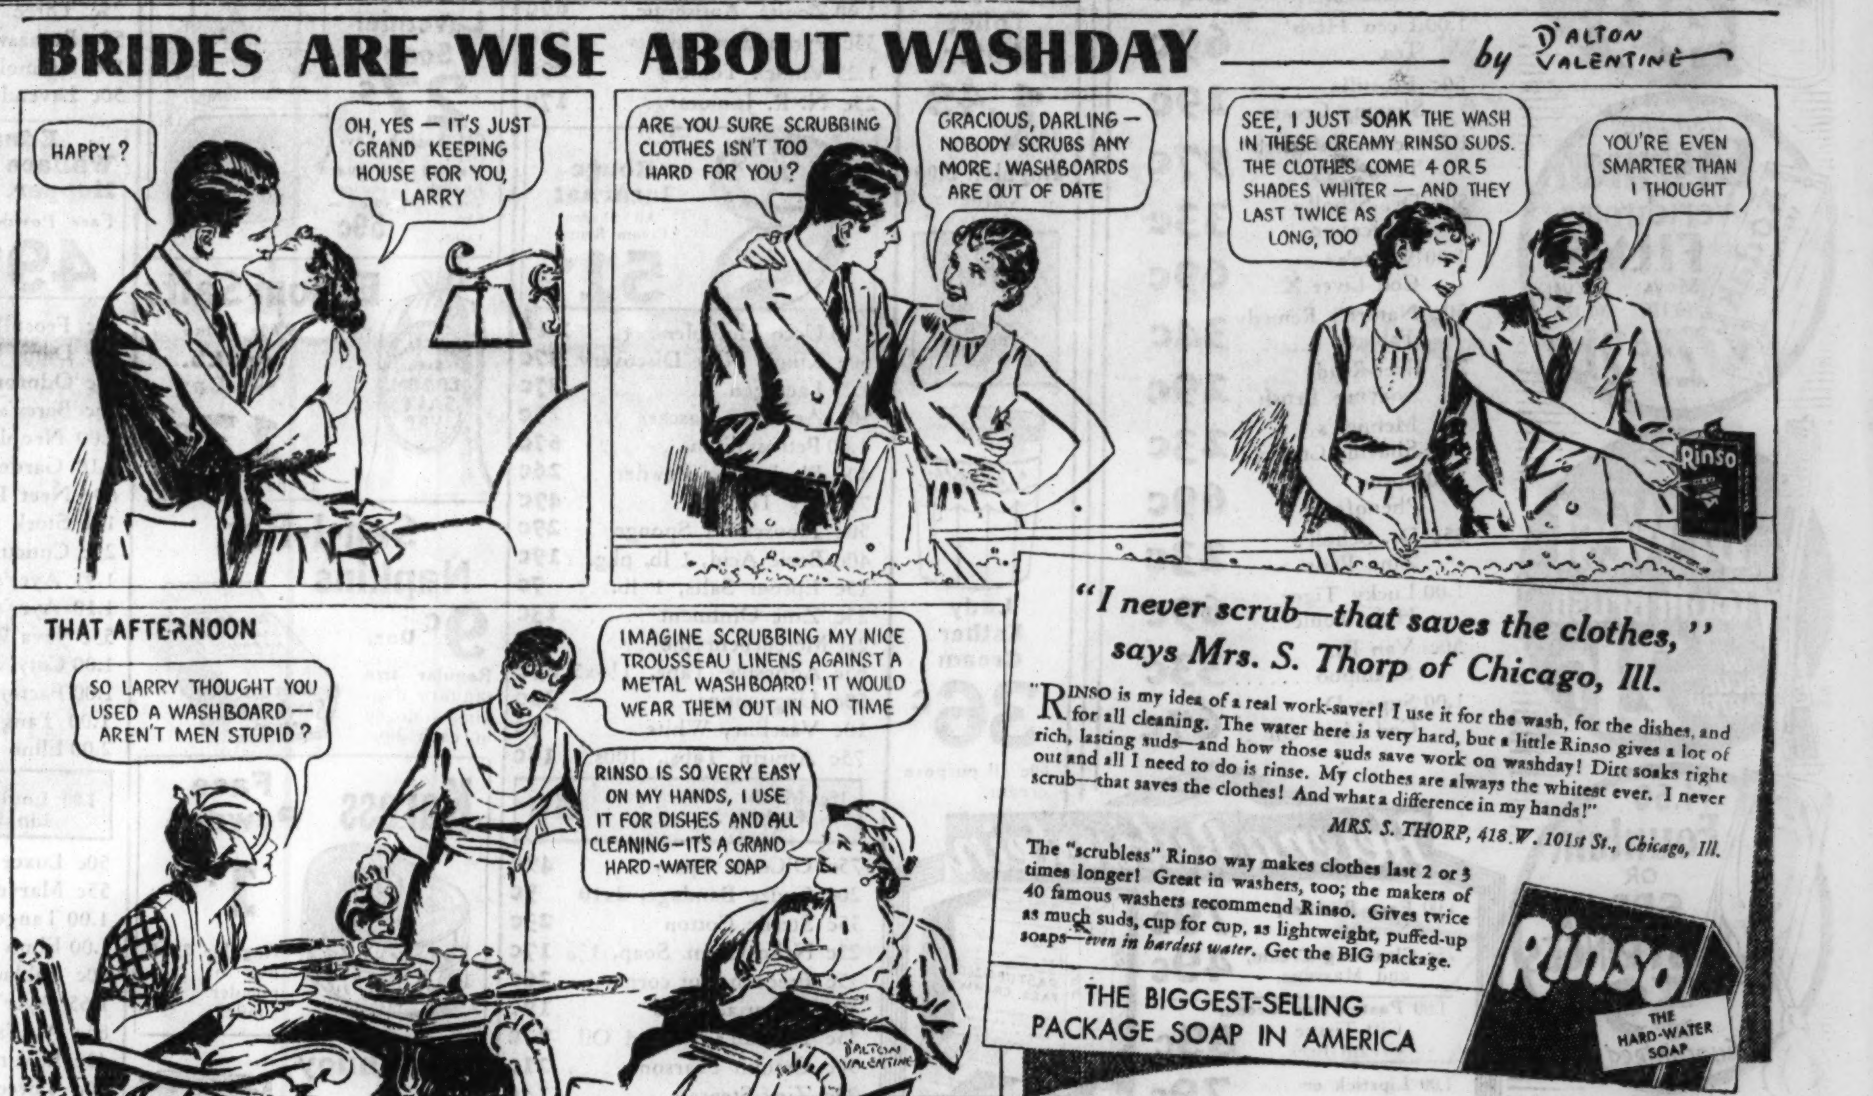
ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

BRIDES ARE WISE ABOUT WASHDAY — by D'alton Valentine



HAPPY?
OH, YES — IT'S JUST GRAND KEEPING HOUSE FOR YOU, LARRY
ARE YOU SURE SCRUBBING CLOTHES ISN'T TOO HARD FOR YOU?
GRACIOUS, DARLING — NOBODY SCRUBS ANY MORE. WASHBOARDS ARE OUT OF DATE
SEE, I JUST SOAK THE WASH IN THESE CREAMY RINSO SUDS. THE CLOTHES COME 4 OR 5 SHADES WHITER — AND THEY LAST TWICE AS LONG, TOO
YOU'RE EVEN SMARTER THAN I THOUGHT
Rinso
THAT AFTERNOON
SO LARRY THOUGHT YOU USED A WASHBOARD — AREN'T MEN STUPID?
IMAGINE SCRUBBING MY NICE TROUSSEAU LINENS AGAINST A METAL WASHBOARD! IT WOULD WEAR THEM OUT IN NO TIME
RINSO IS SO VERY EASY ON MY HANDS, I USE IT FOR DISHES AND ALL CLEANING — IT'S A GRAND HARD-WATER SOAP
D'ALTON VALENTINE
Rinso
THE HARD-WATER SOAP

"I never scrub—that saves the clothes," says Mrs. S. Thorp of Chicago, Ill.

"Rinso is my idea of a real work-saver! I use it for the wash, for the dishes, and for all cleaning. The water here is very hard, but a little Rinso gives a lot of rich, lasting suds—and how those suds save work on washday! Dirt soaks right out and all I need to do is rinse. My clothes are always the whitest ever. I never scrub—that saves the clothes! And what a difference in my hands!"

MRS. S. THORP, 418 W. 101st St., Chicago, Ill.

The "scrubless" Rinso way makes clothes last 2 or 3 times longer! Great in washers, too; the makers of 40 famous washers recommend Rinso. Gives twice as much suds, cup for cup, as lightweight, puffed-up soaps—even in hardest water. Get the BIG package.

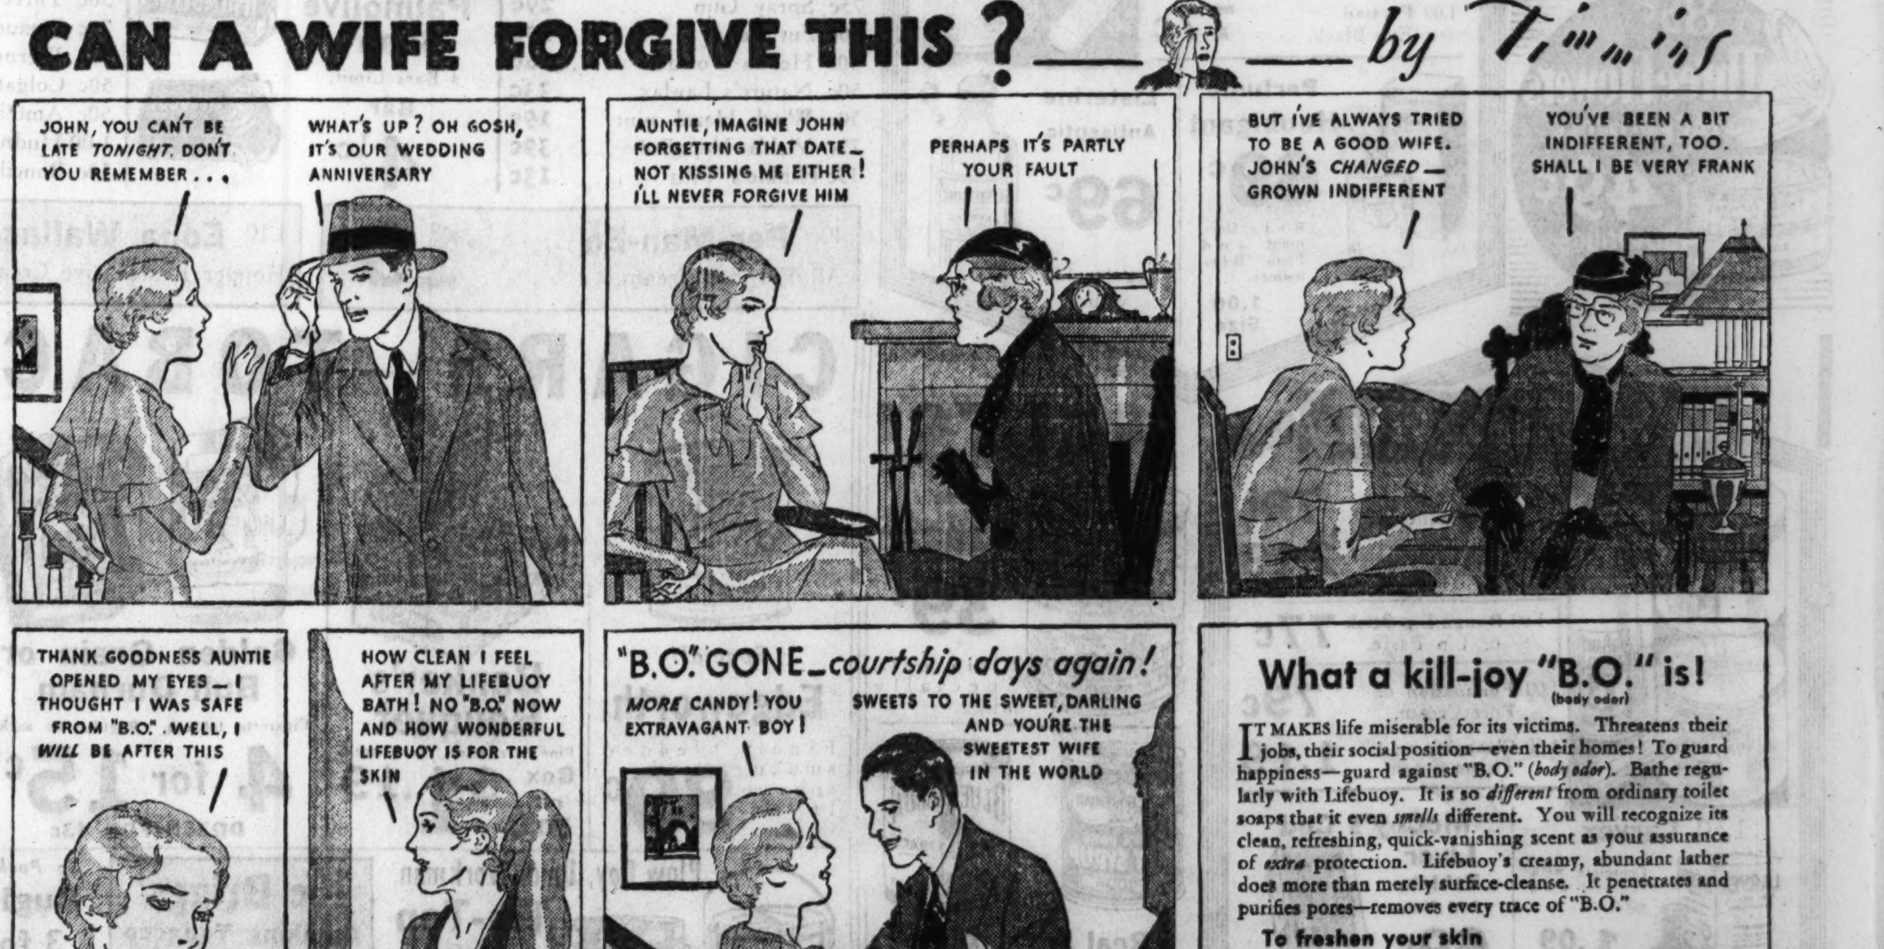
CAN A WIFE FORGIVE THIS? — by Timmins



JOHN, YOU CAN'T BE LATE TONIGHT. DON'T YOU REMEMBER . . .
WHAT'S UP? OH GOSH, IT'S OUR WEDDING ANNIVERSARY
AUNTIE, IMAGINE JOHN FORGETTING THAT DATE — NOT KISSING ME EITHER! I'LL NEVER FORGIVE HIM
PERHAPS IT'S PARTLY YOUR FAULT
BUT I'VE ALWAYS TRIED TO BE A GOOD WIFE. JOHN'S CHANGED — GROWN INDIFFERENT
YOU'VE BEEN A BIT INDIFFERENT, TOO. SHALL I BE VERY FRANK
THANK GOODNESS AUNTIE OPENED MY EYES — I THOUGHT I WAS SAFE FROM "B.O." WELL, I WILL BE AFTER THIS
HOW CLEAN I FEEL AFTER MY LIFEBUOY BATH! NO "B.O." NOW AND HOW WONDERFUL LIFEBUOY IS FOR THE SKIN
"B.O." GONE — courtship days again!
MORE CANDY! YOU EXTRAVAGANT BOY!
LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

What a kill-joy "B.O." is!
(body odor)

It makes life miserable for its victims. Threatens their jobs, their social position—even their homes! To guard happiness—guard against "B.O." (body odor). Bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. It is so different from ordinary toilet soaps that it even smells different. You will recognize its clean, refreshing, quick-vanishing scent as your assurance of extra protection. Lifebuoy's creamy, abundant lather does more than merely surface-cleanse. It penetrates and purifies pores—removes every trace of "B.O."

To freshen your skin

Try this recipe for a clear, radiant, April-fresh complexion. Every night massage Lifebuoy's gentle, purifying lather well into the pores; then rinse. Watch your skin bloom with healthy beauty.

'GREAT CHALICE OF ANTIOCH' TO BE SHOWN AT FAIR

Relic Believed Connected with Last Supper.

In the center of the Hall of Religion at A Century of Progress Exposition, behind a special railing, guarded night and day by armed men, what is known as The Great Chalice of Antioch, said to be one of the earliest relics of the Christian church, will be on exhibition during the fair period.

The Chalice is of silver, apparently crystallized by age and burial in Antioch, ancient capital of Syria, where it was found in a garden in 1910. It holds a crude silver cup, its edges worn, it is claimed, by much kissing and which, according to one school of experts, may have been connected with the Last Supper. This places it among the legends of the Holy Grail of which the knights of the middle ages rode in quest.

Chalice Insured for $300,000.

Whether these be mere pious imaginations, as some scholars hold, or founded on truth, the fact remains that this is a work of great value. It is owned by Fahim Kouchakji, New York and Paris art dealer, and is being brought to Chicago from the vaults of a New York bank where it was placed just before the battle of the Marne. It is insured for $300,000 and this is the second time it has ever been shown to the public, the first being in the Louvre of Paris.

The Chalice is 7.56 inches high and the cup holds about two and a half quarts of liquid. On the outside are two engravings of Christ, one as a youth and the other sitting with his disciples. These are not crude, symbolic pictures, but works of portraiture. This, according to one group of scholars, proves that the artist knew the disciples and may have seen Christ. The dissenters argue that this fact alone places it beyond the pale of first century art.

The elder Morgan offered an immense sum for the Chalice but died just as he was about to become its owner. This was regarded by Mr. Kouchakji as a warning not to part with it and he has since refused to sell it at any price, planning, it is said, to leave it to the public some day.

Hold Authenticity Proved.

The bibliography of the Chalice is some 38 books and articles, the latest a monograph from Dr. Gustavus A. Eisen, former curator of the California Academy of Sciences, the chief defender of the sacred relic theory. He is supported by Dr. A. T. Olmstead professor of ancient oriental history at the University of Chicago, and retiring president of the American Oriental society. In a preface to the Eisen monograph, Dr. Olmstead says:

"In the Chalice of Antioch we have a unique production of the ancient silversmith, whose beauty needs no labored explanation. The portraits of Jesus and His disciples are the earliest known and as such should excite the interest of every Christian. Competent scholars no longer question its authenticity. Opinion is more and more coming to accept the first century date assigned by Dr. Eisen."

Across the campus, however, there is another scholar who questions the date with complete confidence of his ground. This is Dr. Shirley J. Case, professor of early Christianity and chairman of the department of church history. He has spent much of his life in learning about the early Christians and is the author of "Jesus Through the Centuries."

Denies First Century Origin.

"The Chalice is valuable as art, if genuine," he said. "It is, I think, a fifth or sixth century work, although it may have been buried by Christians in 361 A. D., when Julian became emporor and turned against Christianity. He stopped at Antioch and the people made fun of his whiskers and it made him mad. The Christians may have been afraid of him and buried it.

"But it was not made in Antioch at an earlier date. To think that Antioch, where Jewish influence was strong, would have had any interest in pictures of Christ and the apostles is contrary to all we know of the spirit of Christians before 200 A. D. I do not want people to think that we in the middle west are so ignorant that we do not know fiction from reality. I do not want to give the world the idea that Chicago on its one-hundred anniversary has been taken in by something that may ultimately prove to be a clever invention, made for the sake of fooling some rich American.

"The Catholic university of Louvain has not accepted this. Prof. Charles Rufus Morey of Princeton, authority of art and archeology and member of many learned societies of Europe, says that it is not earlier than the fourth century and may be a skillful deception.

Art Once Considered Sin.

"Charles Diehl, French Catholic and expert on early Christion archeology, says it was not done before Constantine. The Christians of the first century thought art a sin. They had no use for pictures except as crude teaching symbols. It was not until Constantine encouraged art and decorations that such things appeared. There is no force in the arguments on the detailed artistic proof of the carvings."

Dr. Eisen says of the date of the Chalice:

"The date is established, not by conjecture, but by known dates of each of its elements, form, proportion, and decoration. The form of the Chalice is paralleled by eleven silver cups of chalice form found in the villa of Boscoveale, which was destroyed by Mount Vesuvius in 79 A. D., by cups and wall paintings from Pompeii, destroyed in the same eruption, by a glass chalice and other cups which cannot be dated later than the first century.

"A foot similar to that of the Chalice was used even before the first century but chalices manufactured later than that date had an inverted funnel shaped foot, not the flat, solid, or slightly concave foot rings of the early type. Human figures superimposed in the manner of the Chalice and seated in chairs are also found on the red glazed pottery and on vases from Maara in Syria, which date from the first century."

Discovery Described.

There are other details as to the rosette bands, forked tendrils, lotus buds, etc., which are also supposed to prove the date, but Dr. Case says these arguments are of no value; that it simply could not be that the Christians of the first century knew or cared anything about such objects of art and decoration. The discovery is told as follows by Dr. Eisen:

"One day in 1910 Arab workmen were digging in the ruins of ancient Antioch. Suddenly they came upon a mass of buried silver, in all probability the treasure of a church which had been hidden in time of danger and lost when the man who did the hiding died.

"Among the objects uncovered were two crosses, three book covers, and two chalices, all of silver. They were sold by the original finders to a syndicate of sixteen Arab compatriots who brought them to Aleppo and sold them in turn to Kouchakji Freres. From Aleppo they were taken to the Paris gallery of Kouchakji Freres, where they remained until 1914."

Rim Only Ornamentation.

He thus describes the sacred relic: "Loosely set in an exquisite openwork chalice is the sacred relic, a crude egg shaped cup. The cup is actually unfinished and its only ornamentation, if such it can be called, is the rim, turned outward as a narrow cuff. Good sized pieces have been cut with a sharp knife from its rim, no doubt for the private reliquary of some powerful or eminent Christian of later times such as Constantine or Saint Helena.

"Otherwise no change has been made in the cup, a relic too sacred for any modification whatever. It will hold two and a half quarts of liquid, the capacity to be expected in a Passover cup, and it is difficult to resist the conviction that at an early date it was connected with the Last Supper.

"In striking contrast to the crude inner cup is the magnificent reliquary in which it is enshrined. A narrow circular foot disk with outlines of lotus petals rises to a knob decorated by a wreath and then to the stem. The bowl begins with a corolla of lotus petals arranged in two rows, then comes a plain baseband whose upper margin is a bead border. From this border twelve grapevines grow upward and form twelve loops, in each of which is posed a seated figure.

"Between the loops and among the vines are scattered seven doves, an eagle, a butterfly, a lamb, a grasshopper, two snails, two wicker baskets and a plate with loaves and fish. Above the grapevines, and just below the turned over rim of the sacred relic is a band of 67 rosettes and a six pointed star. Frequent handling and the kissing of the relic almost obliterated several of the rosettes and began to wear the surface. To preserve it from further injury the whole chalice was covered with pale whitish gold leaf."

Diver Searches in Vain for Drowned Boy's Body

Efforts of Charles Gunderson, 2040 North Sawyer avenue, veteran marine diver, to find the body of Gilbert Salazar, 15 years old, 2447 West North avenue, who was drowned in the Des Plaines river Monday, continued to prove fruitless yesterday. For three days Gunderson, who has been working without charge out of sympathy for the boys's mother, has searched the bottom of the river in the forest preserve near Devon and Milwaukee avenues where the boy fell into the river from a picnic table which he and three companions were using as a raft.

3 PERSONS RESCUED FROM SKIFF AFTER DRIFTING ON OCEAN

Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal., May 13.—[Special.]—After having been given up as drowned when their 16 foot skiff drifted to sea off San Clemente island last Wednesday with only one oar, two men and a woman were brought in today. The small whaling ship Fort Sanders found them yesterday semi-conscious in their drifting skiff. The three saved are Mr. and Mrs. John Sweedborg and William Rudolph, all of San Pedro.

Unequipped with radio, the Fort Sanders, which sighted them about forty miles southeast of San Clemente island and about twenty-seven miles west of Coronado island, was unable to make known the rescue until dropping anchor here.

One of Sweedborg's knees was cut while attempting to steer the skiff with an oar. He also drank some salt water. All three were reported to be recovering tonight.

FOUR CANDIDATES IN MEXICO SEEK THE PRESIDENCY

MEXICO CITY, May 13.—(AP)—Launching of the presidential candidacy today of Ramon P. De Negri brought four candidates into a campaign which has warmed to furious heat this week.

De Negri formerly was director of the National railways, later minister of agriculture under President Calles, minister of industry under President Portes Gil, and subsequently minister to Germany and Belgium. He returned here a few months ago.

Others whose candidacies have been announced are Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, secretary of war; Gen. Manuel Perez Trevino, just resigned as president of the national revolutionary party, and Col. Adalberto J. Tejeda, the retired radical governor of Vera Cruz. The conventions will be held next January.

LOCK BUTCHER IN REFRIGERATOR.

Four men yesterday invaded the Midland Market, 4338 West 51st street, locked the owner, John Gozdsiak, 1802 South 50th court, Cicero, and three employés in a refrigerator, and took $23 from the cash register. A girl acted as lookout for the bandits.

GERMAN INSTILLS WAR SPIRIT INTO BOLIVIAN ARMY

Gen. Kundt Turns Tide in Chaco Conflict.

This is the fourth and last of a series of articles by Mr. Patric, the first neutral correspondent to visit the Gran Chaco battle lines.

BY ANTHONY PATRIC.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MUNOZ, Chaco, Bolivia, April 3.—[By courier and mail to La Paz, Bolivia.]—I talked with Gen. Hans Kundt, the German world war veteran who is now commander in-chief of the Bolivian army in the Chaco in a straw covered wooden barracks here. This crude shack, only slightly more comfortable than an Indian hut, is the headquarters of the Bolivian chief of staff, who wears the iron cross. From this hut, Gen. Kundt issues the orders which have steered the offensive against Paraguay in the last several months.

Gen. Kundt, who has become a naturalized Bolivian because the Versailles treaty forbids Germany to supply officers to other nations, admitted that he is trying to crack one of the hardest nuts of his military career.

Not an Ordinary War.

"Our war is not an ordinary one," he said as he discussed the history of the recent campaign. "Everything is peculiarly different in the Chaco. It presents at first glance the aspect of colonial guerrilla warfare with its touch of the picturesque. But despite its comparative smallness, it is truly a modern war."

This adopted son of Bolivia is 64 years old. He evinces an intense interest in his difficult job of leadership and appears to be fully alive to the unusual obstacles to military action existing in the Chaco. He has inspired great confidence among his subordinates, who acknowledge without question his great military value. Discipline has gone hand in hand with a high morale which has penetrated even the front line trenches.

Gen. Kundt's strategy is credited by every Bolivian soldier with having been the straw which tipped the balance in favor of Bolivia and turned a rout into a victory march. This offensive, Bolivians firmly believe, will end only when the Paraguayans have been driven out of the Chaco.

Bolivia Smells Victory.

After having talked with Bolivians from Gen. Kundt on down to the buck privates in the trenches and the civilians at work back home, it becomes evident why attempts to arrange a truce now appear little short of ridiculous. Bolivia smells victory and as long as that is true, the national slogan is "on with the war," which has been declared by Paraguay. And it will continue to be until Paraguay either has had enough or has somehow again turned the tables.

The ability of the Paraguayans to take punishment must not be underestimated, however. They demonstrated their endurance and fortitude in the five years' war, 1865 to 1870, which was one of the bloodiest conflicts in South American history. In this war Paraguay fought the combined forces of Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay, Paraguay figuratively fought they like a tiger.

In this terrific conflict all males over 15 years of age were called to the colors. They responded willingly. Even boys of ten were permitted to join the army. And as the men dropped Paraguayan women rushed to fill the gaps in the ranks.

Poverty and Disease.

Paraguay's fields were devastated and most of the herds were killed. Poverty and disease were rampant. The population was cut down to one-fifth of what it had been before the war. After the shooting was over, it was found there were seven women to every Paraguayan man.

Such is the mettle of Bolivia's foe in the Chaco. It indicates that the end of the war may not be so close as the Bolivians seem to believe. And incidentally one of the reasons Paraguay is so reluctant to give up its claim to the Chaco wilderness is that it lost 56,000 square miles of territory to the allies in the five years war. Already one of the smallest nations in South America, Paraguay has no desire to become smaller.

That the present position of the two armies in the Chaco is favorable to the Bolivians, barring their longer distance from bases of supply, is, however, undeniable. Unquestionably the spring victories under Gen. Kundt have given the Bolivians a stomach for fighting on to the end. This courage and enthusiasm previously had been lacking.

BOLIVIAN ARMY OPENS BIG DRIVE ON CHACO FRONTS

ASUNCION, Paraguay, May 13.—[U. P.]—Bolivian soldiers opened an offensive on all but the Toledo sector of the Gran Chaco front at dawn today, according to a war office communique. Bolivian losses were said to be heavy. After an attack of several hours, the communique said, the Bolivians withdrew.

Argentina Declares Neutrality.

BUENOS AIRES, May 13.—[U. P.]—A presidential decree today declared Argentina neutral in the Paraguayan-Bolivian war. The decree, it was said, was in fulfillment of The Hague conventions of 1899 and 1907.

The decree was regarded as a blow at Bolivia, the inland empire of South America, which has no seaport. Paraguay had declared war chiefly to force other powers to become neutrals and thus shut off supplies for Bolivia. Bolivia must import all sorts of war and other materials through nations which may follow Argentina's lead.

19 Autos Needed to Carry G. A. R. Veterans in Parade

Nineteen more open cars are needed to carry G. A. R. veterans in the Memorial day parade, Thomas L. Beem, chairman of the automobile division of the parade, announced yesterday. Only 14 automobile owners have responded to the call for 33 open cars. Unless 19 more owners offer their cars many veterans will be unable to join in the parade, Mr. Beem said.

VETERANS' CORPS OFFICIAL KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Edward Strachan, 55 years old, 935 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, vice commander of the Veterans' corps of the 132d infantry, was killed yesterday by an automobile at Talman avenue and Warren boulevard.

The driver of the car, James Mandos, 45 years old, 344 South Maple street, Oak Park, a commission merchant, was held.

Strachan was night custodian of the regiment armory at 2653 West Madison street, and was a veteran of the Spanish-American war. He is survived by his widow and two daughters.

Harry Goetz, 46 years old, 2731 Morse avenue, whose automobile struck a safety island at Sheridan road and Pine Grove avenue March 16, died yesterday in Augustana hospital. Mr. Goetz was president of the Yale Slot and Slug company. Lincoln park police said bright lights on another car caused the accident.

These deaths and two others yesterday increased the Cook county automobile toll for 1933 to 329. The other victims:

Geraldine Rutkowski, 2 years old, 1822 Wilmot street. Killed in front of her home. The driver, Frank Urso, 3814 North Albany avenue, was held by Shakespeare police.

Louis Jones, colored, 9 years old, 1522 West 13th street. Fatally injured by a truck at 13th street and Ashland avenue. The driver, Frank Simpson, 527 Indiana avenue, Peoria, was held.

WILLS DIVIDING TWO $1,000,000 ESTATES FILED

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Ware left her $1,000,000 estate in trust to her grandchildren with the provision that the income from the property is to be divided among her three daughters during their lives. This was disclosed yesterday when Mrs. Ware's will was filed with Probate Clerk Mitchell C. Robin. Mrs. Ware, who was the widow of Dr. Lyman Ware, died at her home 210 East Pearson street, on May 10.

Attorney William S. Warfield III., who filed the will, said that Mrs. Ware's estate consisted of $500,000 in cash and securities and an equal amount of real estate. The Northern Trust company was named executor and trustee. Mrs. Ware's daughters are Mrs. Hildegarde W. Warfield, Mrs. Edith W. Shedd, and Mrs. Elizabeth W. Walker.

The will of Charles F. Goodwillie, president of the box manufacturing concern of P. M. Goodwillie & Co., was also filed. It provided that the widow, Mrs. Emily I. Goodwillie of 416 Barry avenue, is to receive his entire estate, valued at $1,000,000. Of this amount only $50,000 in real and personal property was shown on the petition for heirship. The remainder of the property, according to Attorney John J. Grealis, was held by Mrs. Goodwillie and her husband in joint tenancy and thus automatically becomes her own at the husband's death. Mr. Goodwillie died May 7 at the age of 57 years.

REV. A. M. WILSON, 66, IS DEAD AT HIS WAUKEGAN HOME

The Rev. Alexander M. Wilson, 66 years old, 132 North Genesee street, Waukegan, superintendent of the Waukegan mission of the Holiness Christian church, died at his home Friday night after a long illness.

The Rev. Wilson was born in Belfast, Ireland, and came to America in 1886. He lived in Zion City for 30 years, moving to Waukegan with his family last year. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lydia Wilson, and three sons, Ford and Lorrie Wilson of Zion City and Theodore Wilson of Lake Forest.

Funeral services will be held Monday at Grace Missionary church in Zion City.

UNCLAIMED SALES TAX FUNDS WILL GO TO WELFARE GROUP

All sales tax funds that are not refunded to purchasers will be accepted by the Emergency Welfare Fund of Cook County, Inc., it was announced yesterday by Robert A. Gardner, chairman of the fund's campaign for $7,500,000. These tax funds cannot be accepted by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, he said, because that organization is set up to disburse public funds.

"The Emergency Welfare Fund will accept the unclaimed sales tax funds as donations," Mr. Gardner said. "We fell short of raising the quota which is considered necessary for the continuation of welfare work in Cook county during the coming year, but if these funds are turned in by the merchants who have collected them from the public, our goal may be attained."

Refunding of the sales tax to purchasers has been started by State street merchants, chain organizations, and small retail stores. All funds not claimed by July 3 will be turned over to the Emergency Welfare Fund, it has been announced by leading merchants. Sales tax collections in Cook county amounted to about $3,288,000, it was estimated.

GATHER LILACS THIS WEEK TO CHEER BEDFAST

Thousands of lilac blossoms, due to open this week with the letup in the rains, will be gathered by gardeners in Chicago and the suburbs next Thursday and Friday to cheer the bedfast patients in the city's hospitals and tenement centers.

The "Share Your Lilacs" campaign, conducted each spring by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be aided by officials of the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, whose headquarters is in Room 1609, People's Gas building. Mrs. Frank W. Kingsley of the Evanston Garden club is general chairman.

"The cheer and comfort of flowers are needed more than ever this year in Chicago's hospitals and tenement districts," declared Miss Harriet Vittum of Northwestern university settlement. "While fruits and vegetables fresh from the gardens are needed and will be put to good use, we must not lose sight of the need for spreading cheer with flowers."

Division chairmen in charge of securing the flowers and getting them to railroad terminals for THE TRIBUNE to collect and distribute are: Mrs. A. J. Braun, Mokena; Mrs. J. E. Callendar, St. Charles; Mrs. A. H. Harrison, Bannockburn; Mrs. Earl Mason, Beverly Hills; Mrs. M. R. Monroe, Windsor Park; Mrs. H. A. Sanderson, River Forest; Mrs. K. E. Tholin, Downers Grove; and Mrs. Kingsley of Evanston. T. V. Purcell, vice president of the People's Gas Light and Coke company, is president of the guild.

MAUDE DILLON, ACTRESS OF 20 YEARS AGO, DIES

Maude May Dillon, actress of 20 years ago, died yesterday in the county hospital of a heart attack. She lived at 513 North Clark street. She had been ill in the hospital since last Christmas, when she collapsed at State street and Grand avenue.

Mrs. Dillon appeared under her maiden name of Maude May with Richard Mansfield in Shakespearean productions. She was a member of the cast with William Collier Sr. in the play, "The Hidden Hand," at the old McVicker's theater 20 years ago.

Burial will be in Memorial Park cemetery in Evanston.

MURDER CELLAR YIELDS BOOZE STORAGE PLANT

Gotham Police Discover Secret Door.

New York, May 13.—(AP)—A bootlegging angle cropped out tonight in the mystery of the killing of Edward Ridley, wealthy real estate operator, and his secretary in an east side subcellar Wednesday.

While a minister at the funeral of Ridley was eulogizing the aged eccentric as a "gentleman of the old type," a tipster told police a concealed room in the subcellar, close to where the slayings occurred, had been until a few days ago a bootleggers' "drop."

Find Rum Peddlers' Retreat.

Detectives who had been searching Ridley's old fashioned ledgers for a clew to the killer who beat and shot the elderly man and his secretary to death, hastened to the building.

They pressed a button in what appeared to be solid brick wall. A section of the wall three by four feet swung out. Actually it was a metal door.

No liquor was inside, but police said there was evidence the room had been used for several years—and possibly right up to the day of the killings—as a storage place for liquor.

With this information, and the tipster's story that the secretary, Lee Weinstein, had known of the bootlegging activities, police rejuggled the jigsaw collection of clues ad theories.

Each Day Yields Clew.

Wednesday afternoon the two men were found dead. Two years ago a secretary of Ridley's was killed there.

Thursday ballistic experts disclosed the same weapon fired the bullets that killed Ridley and Weinstein. Ridley's will left $200,000 to Weinstein if he survived Ridley, who was rated as a millionaire.

Friday it was disclosed Weinstein was secretly married and had been living in a hotel with his wife under the name of "H. Lee" from Norfolk, Va., and was known as a gambler. And today came the bootlegging angle. Ridley owned the building in which his body was found.

Prof. W. O. Webber Dies of Pneumonia While in Utah

Salt Lake City, Utah, May 13.—(AP)—Walter O. Webber, 65, professor of sociology and economics in Westminster college here, died of pneumonia today. Born in Ohio, Professor Webber was graduated from Defiance college in that state in 1903 and received his master's degree from the University of Chicago in 1908. He had been a member of the Westminster faculty since 1927, when he came here from the Central Y. M. C. A. of Chicago.

EDMUND WALKER DIES SUDDENLY ON NEW YORK TRIP

Edmund Walker, 60 years old, 3300 Lake Shore drive, head of a firm of certified public accountants at 605 North Michigan avenue, died suddenly yesterday of a heart attack in his room at the Commodore hotel in New York City.

Word of his death was received by his widow, Mrs. Lucille Walker, and their two daughters. They went east at once to take charge of the body.

Walker, in New York City on a business trip, registered at the hotel Friday evening. He became ill that evening and died early yesterday morning. James J. Styles of Rockville Center, N. Y., a friend, was notified and he in turn notified the widow and two daughters, Margaret and Claudine.

SERGEANT NAGLE, LOOP POLICEMAN 30 YEARS, DEAD

Sergt. Anthony J. Nagle, a member of the city police force for 42 years, died yesterday in his home at 4223 Wilcox street. Death was due to a stroke of apoplexy and followed an illness of a week. He was 70 years old.

For 30 years Sergt. Nagle had been detailed to State street stores. With his partner, Sergt. Edward Flaherty, he was known to every merchant on the street.

Sergt. Nagle is survived by his widow, Catherine, and five children, Joseph J., Josephine, Edward M., Daniel P., and Anthony J. Nagle Jr. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning in St. Mel's church. Burial will be in Lemont, where he was born.

Mother
Today and Forever

While my little soul was sleeping,
It was always mother dear
Who was bending o'er my crib,
And her arms were always near!

With those arms now stretched from Heaven
She awaits me as of yore,

To her "baby dear" once more!

For over 25 years, Hursen has saved for the people of Chicago millions of dollars in the cost of funerals. Hursen revolutionized also the methods of funeral direction. Hursen policy has always been, and is now, to give the utmost possible at the lowest cost. As a result, the people of Chicago have made Hursen's the largest and greatest funeral establishment in America!

Hursen Funerals Always Cost Less

Hursen funerals are constantly seen in every neighborhood in Chicago and its suburbs. Hursen elegance is lavished on every funeral, large or small. It is only the vast Hursen organization which can supply this unusual elegance in materials, automobile equipment, musical service, environment and method.

At Hursen's there is no room for coarse bargaining, no trickeries of price. You know, as all Chicago has learned to know, that Hursen funerals always cost less than the charges made elsewhere.

No Charge for Hursen Organ Chapels

There is no charge for any one of the 3 Hursen Organ-Chapels on the South, West and North Sides. The charges for the specially-built Hursen automobiles, the finest of their kind, are no greater than the charges for less desirable equipment elsewhere.

So, when another's race is run, and your devotion demands the sweetest and most appropriate—Call Hursen of course!

CHILDREN HELP DEDICATE FAIR ENCHANTED ISLE

Bottle of Milk Used in Ceremony.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Pouring the proverbial drink of children out of a quart milk bottle onto the ground near the Children's theater, Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes dedicated the Enchanted Island yesterday at A Century of Progress.

"O, mommy, they've poured the cream off," commented a seven year old who was in the audience of thousands that witnessed the dedicatory exercises and in those few words she seemed to epitomize the caution and thrift that has characterized the business management of the fair thus far.

Dr. F. R. Moulton, director of concessions, opened the exercises with a short talk. Others who spoke were Miss Josephine Blackstock, director of the island; Miss Dorothy Schmidt, chairman of the Junior league World's Fair committee and chairman of the Children's theater board, and Nathaniel A. Owings of the concessions department. Eunice Tietjens read a poem she had written for the occasion.

A Perfect Fairyland.

Following the speeches, Chicago's ranking Eagle Scout raised the national emblem, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts snapped to attention, and the most perfect fairyland for children ever constructed was open for the duration of the exposition.

The problem is going to be how to keep the island for children judging by yesterday, for mothers and fathers were as anxious as the youngsters to climb the Magic mountain and slide down, ride on the little train that takes one on a sightseeing tour of the island, see "Peter Pan" and the other attractions in the theater, and eat in the Toy Town tavern which was decorated by Tony Sarg and is the most entrancing place imaginable. Not even the fact that the chairs in the tavern are built to accommodate youngsters, the tables low and the table silver diminutive kept the "grownups" away yesterday.

Entertainment Is Continuous.

There was continuous entertainment in the theater. The Junior leaguers presented "Peter Pan" as the first thing on the program in the morning and again at 3 o'clock. The squeals of delight that were heard during the adventures of Wendy and Michael and John, the three children, in Sir James Barrie's immortal play, after they had flown away with Peter Pan, the little boy who never grew up, portrayed by Mrs. John R. Winterbotham Jr., were proof of how much the young audiences enjoyed the play. Other plays will be given during the other months of the fair by the Junior league.

Others in the Cast.

Mrs. Sherwood Platt was Wendy, Mrs. Robert M. Hoffman Jr., Michael, and Mrs. Stephen Harrington, John. Miss Helen Bell was Mrs. Darling, their mother; E. Parsons Warren, Mr. Darling; Miss Margaret Wiley, Nana, and Mrs. Ballard Moore, Liza, the maid.

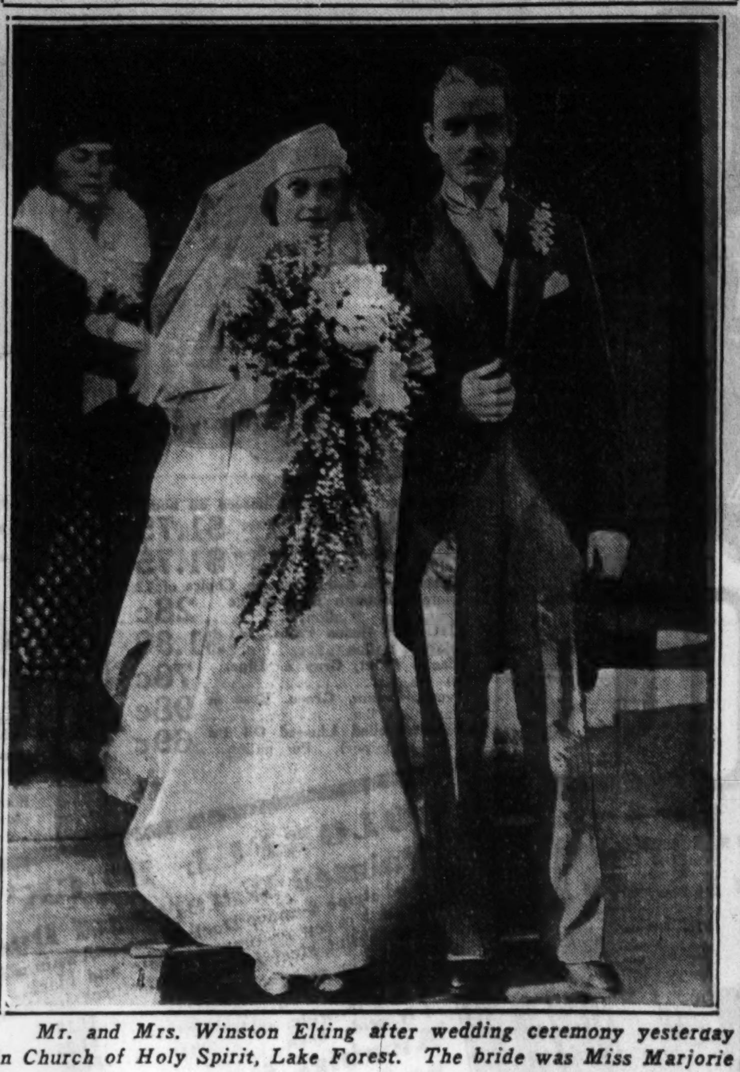
Others in the cast were Mrs. Ambrose C. Cramer, Mrs. W. Calhoun Smith, Miss Charlotte Robertson, Mrs. Theron Chapman, Miss Gloria Chandler, Miss Eleanor Cushman, Mrs. Robert M. Curtis, Mrs. Edward L. Hersey, Mrs. J. Allen Newton, Miss Dorothy Dewes, Mrs. Stephen McKenna, Miss Ethel Dixon, Mrs. Andrew Sandegren, Miss Jean Milsted, Miss Kathleen White, Miss Frances Weary, Miss Barbara Bond, Miss Letitia Channon, Miss Florence Sargent and Miss Gwendolyn Spang.

Lunch in the Tavern.

Some of those who had luncheon in the tavern, attended the dedication and then saw "Peter Pan" were Mrs. William J. Chalmers whose guests were Mrs. J .Ogden Armour, Mrs. Sewell Avery, Mrs. Warren M. Salisbury, and Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson; and Mrs. Nathaniel A. Owings, who as chairman of publicity for the Junior league, was in no small measure responsible for the great numbers that were there yesterday.

Others were Mrs. Wesley M. Dixon, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Junior league, which also had much to do with the success of publicizing the island in the schools of the city and suburbs; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Otis, Miss Margaret Sinclair, Charles S. Dewey, Miss Elizabeth Ricker, Mrs. John S. Stone and her son, Dana Stone; Mrs. Erich Gerstenberg and Miss Alice Gerstenberg, Mrs. Philip Maher and her two small sons, Ralph A. Bond, Mrs. Walter E. Paepcke who designed the lovely scenery for "Peter Pan," and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Granger and two of their grandsons.

Marjorie Horton Becomes Bride



Mr. and Mrs. Winston Elting after wedding ceremony yesterday in Church of Holy Spirit, Lake Forest. The bride was Miss Marjorie Horton.

MARJORIEHORTON IS MARRIED TO WINSTON ELTING

Lake Forest Church Is Scene of Wedding.

With the blessings of the weather man Miss Marjorie Horton, daughter of Mrs. Samuel M. Rinaker, was married to Winston Elting, son of Victor Elting, yesterday afternoon in the quaint little Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest. The service was read at 4:30 o'clock in the presence of relatives and a few intimate friends by the Rev. Herbert W. Prince, rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, rector of Christ church, Winnetka.

In a lovely gown of ivory satin fashioned with a cowl neck, full sleeves, and a sweeping train, the bride moved down the aisle on the arm of her grandfather, Arthur Mason. Floating gracefully behind her was the heirloom veil of creamy duchess lace that had been worn by her mother and grandmother. It was held in place by a delicate wreath of pearl embroidered leaves that circled her head. In her arms she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Before an altar banked with calla lilies and ferns and lighted only by slim white tapers, the bride exchanged her wedding vows with Mr. Elting. She was attended by seven of her best friends dressed in chiffon gowns of pale yellow and cornflower blue.

Miss Clow Maid of Honor.

Miss Francise Clow was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Betty Brown, Miss Jane Boyce, Miss Margaret Chapman, Mrs. Edgar L. Marston III. [Florence Carr], Miss Jane Brooks, and Miss Eleanor Wheeler.

Victor Elting was best man for his son. Ushering were Victor Elting Jr., who came from his home in Cedar Rapids for the wedding; John Elting, at home from Princeton; Ross J. Beatty, Joseph Quarles Jr., Malcolm Stevenson, David Hulburd, William Deknatel, and George P. Bassett III. of Pittsburgh.

After the ceremony the guests gathered at Mr. and Mrs. Rinaker's Victorian residence in Lake Forest, decorated for the occasion with bouquets of apple blossoms, to congratulate Mr. Elting and wish his bride continued happiness. After a short wedding trip the young couple will be at home in an apartment on Tower court.

Two Other Weddings.

There were two weddings of importance last evening, one in Evanston and the other on Chicago's south side. At 8:30 o'clock Miss Catherine Stearns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus C. Stearns of Evanston, was married to George Albert Veeder, son of Mrs. Albert Hoyt Veeder of Winnetka, in the Lady chapel of St. Luke's Episcopal church in Evanston. The Rev. Harold L. Bowen of St. Mark's read the ceremony. After a six weeks' European trip Mr. and Mrs. Veeder will be at home in Evanston.

The south side wedding united two old families in that part of the city. Miss Jane Blocki, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gale Blocki, became the bride of Walter Scott Trude Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott Trude, at 9 o'clock in the Bryn Mawr Community church. Dr. M. Russell Boynton read the service. After a wedding trip Mr. Trude and his bride are to reside at 6850 Jeffery avenue.

BOY, 6, IS INJURED; LAD, 15, HURLS HIM TO DEATH IN MAIN

High Point, N. C., May 13.—(AP)—Fifteen year old Griffith Welch was held in jail here tonight after his confession that he had thrown 5 year old Robert Sechrest down a sewer main. The body of the child, son of a café proprietor, was recovered late today.

Police said Welch told them he threw the boy down the main when he became frightened after a bicycle accident in which Bobby was injured.

Finding the body climaxed an all night hunt by hundreds of persons after news of the child's disappearance had spread.

Welch, led searchers to the manhole down which the boy was thrown. The body was recovered at a point three miles distant.

Welch led searchers to the man- was riding on the handlebars of his bicycle and that when he started up the steep incline of a railroad bank he failed to reach the top, the wheel rolled back and the child's head struck the track.

He said he carried and dragged the injured child a mile and a half to the open manhole and, although Bobby was still groaning and crying, he pushed him in.

California Bandits Steal Money Car with $4,850

Long Beach, Cal., May 13.—[Special.]—Armed with a machine gun, three bandits early today drove alongside a Security-First National bank money car, forced the machine to the curb, routed a bank messenger and his assistant and escaped in the bank car which contained $4,850. The money car was later abandoned by the bandits.

BANDITS ROB DRESS SHOP.

Two well dressed young men robbed the Grayson Dress Shop, Inc., 3139 Lincoln avenue, yesterday, of $200, after threatening two employés. Miss Faunetta Grant, 4927 Kenmore avenue, and Miss Irene Goodrich, 2477 Albany avenue.

GOLD DISCOVERED IN COLORADO; RUSH BEGINS

Canon City, Colo., May 13.—(AP)—Deep mountain gulches that have echoed nothing for years except the howls of night prowling animals resounded today to picks and shovels which spoke with each lusty stroke the ancient gold mining hymn: "Pay dirt, pay dirt, pay dirt."

A Negro prospector, Robert Hoard, yesterday found "pay dirt" that runs $38 to the ton in the upper Copper gulch country.

His discovery started a gold stampede. More than 250 automobiles loaded with men and women have reached the gulch country. A tent city sprang up overnight. Claims were staked for miles around. Squabbles over overlapping claims and claim jumping splotched the general excitement.

Coincident with Hoard's announcement, Ed Hollister, state prison fingerprint expert, James Mow, hard rock miner, and John Drake, a school teacher, displayed samples of gold ore which contained $500 gold content to the ton.

They said they had been working the region during the winter and had developed a producing mine containing a vein which they claimed had only been "meagerly tapped." They were forced to station guards around their property to protect their interests.

ROB PEDESTRIAN OF $11.50.

Two armed men yesterday robbed Fred Freimuth, 2254 Addison street, of $11.50 in front of 2410 George street.

BULGARIAN COPS CONFISCATE BODY OF MURDERED RED

SOFIA, Bulgaria, May 13.—(AP)—In order to forestall a threatened communist demonstration at the funeral of Petko Napetoff, communist leader, who was slain yesterday, the police confiscated his body. Napetoff was buried secretly, the authorities permitting only his parents and a few relatives to be present.

Nikoloff Petroff, a member of the Protogervist faction of the Macedonian Independence party, was shot and killed on a Sofia street this morning. His assassin was arrested and police said the prisoner confessed he had received orders to kill Petroff from the headquarters of the Mihailovist faction of the Macedonians.

The authorities believe that Napetoff also was killed by Mihailovists.

PLAYS BRIDGE, THEN KILLS SELF.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 13.—(AP)—Returning from a bridge party early today, Elizabeth Lloyd, 20, shot and killed herself, police were told by her husband, Reese B. Lloyd, 27.

HEAD PLAY ROMPS TO VICTORY IN PREAKNESS

LADYSMAN FOUR LENGTHS BACK; UTOPIAN THIRD

Brokers Tip, Derby Winner, Is Last.

Baltimore, Md., May 13.—[Special.]—Head Play, the strapping chestnut son of My Play which was beaten by a nose in the Kentucky Derby, made amends this afternoon by winning the Preakness stakes at Pimlico before a record crowd of 40,000.

Head Play raced to victory by a margin of four lengths over Ladysman, with Utopian third a head back. Head Play also obtained ample revenge over Brokers Tip, his conqueror at Churchill Downs a week ago. Brokers Tip had no liking for the slow track and finished last in the field of 10. He was nearly 30 lengths behind.

Winner Pays $5.60.

The victory was worth $26,850 to Mrs. Silas B. Mason, Head Play's owner. The colt was favorite and paid $5.60 to win, $3.60 to place, and $2.60 to show in the $2 mutuels. Ladysman paid $4 and $2.80 and Utopian returned $3 to show.

The time was 2:02 for the mile and three-sixteenths, the slowest since the race was revived in 1909 and run at its present distance. Head Play, however, finished pulled up and could have turned in a better mark. The fractional times were :23 2-5, 1:14 1-5 1:41, and 2:02.

The race was truly run in every particular and there was a general agreement among horsemen after the finish that the son of My Play and Red Head is the best 3 year old so far. However, the season is far from over and Head Play has yet to establish a clear claim to the championship.

Kurtsinger Has Mount.

Charles Kurtsinger, who gained a reputation as Twenty Grand's jockey, was up on the winner. Alfred Robertson was supposed to have the mount, but he had to ride for his contract employer, C. V. Whitney, in New York. Raymond Workman, who piloted Ladysman in the Derby as well as today, was offered the mount this morning, but preferred to take his chance with Ladysman.

The son of Pompey, which was dubbed no stayer by his critics, ran his best race of the year, being the only one to give Head Play any kind of a battle after the sprinter De Valera had been put away in the first six furlongs. But Ladysman's strongest charge left him a length back of Head Play. After that Head Play ran on, opening a bigger and bigger gap as they approached the finish line.

He won with speed in reserve and under 126 pounds, which was the weight carried by all the ten starters.

Track Is Treacherous.

Extraordinary efforts were made by the racing officials to get the track into some kind of condition after many days of rain. Constant harrowing and a hot sun, which made for a sultry day, dried the surface, but it was soft underneath, and the slow time was not considered a mark against Head Play.

Mrs. Mason is the second woman to win the Preakness, the first having been Mrs. Archibald Barklie, whose Holiday won in 1914.

Future plans for Head Play were not announced tonight, but it is thought that he will run in as many of the 3 year old specials as possible in order to establish a claim to the championship. His next appearance probably will be in the American Derby at Washington Park, Chicago.

Head Play Delays Start.

Eight minutes were spent at the post, due mainly to the antics of Head Play, although Inlander also was fractious. Head Play was then taken to the outside. When the break came, Poppyman showed in front momentarily alongside of Brokers Tip. In the first furlong De Valera, which ran coupled in the betting with Utopian, dashed into the lead.

Head Play, crossing over swiftly from the outside, just as he did in the Derby, quickly joined the issue with De Valera, and the two were on even terms as they went past the stand. Going to the clubhouse turn Head Play went to the front. He could not cross over to the rail, as De Valera had the inside track. Ladysman, which broke well, was third at this time.

Ladysman Makes Move.

The run down the back stretch saw Ladysman make a move which brought the biggest thrill of the race. Closing swiftly, Ladysman challenged Head Play. De Valera gave up the ghost at this point while Brokers Tip and Silent Shot were last.

From the far turn to the top of the stretch Ladysman attempted to overtake Head Play. Workman was plying the whip strongly. The son of Pompey responded, but he was not equal to the task of catching the Mason color bearer. Kurtsinger measured his opponent and let Head Play gallop along. They were in the middle of the track, where the footing was better.

As they rounded into the final straightaway Workman attempted to go to the inside to save ground. The effort was in vain, for Kurtsinger merely clucked to Head Play, which went on about his business as calmly as you please. He won without driving.

It was announced by M. L. Deiger, secretary of the Maryland Jockey club, that $139,713 was wagered on the Preakness.

DYKES' ERROR BEATS SOX IN TENTH, 5-4; CUBS SPLIT

SENATORS TIE SCORE IN 8TH ON BOKEN'S HOMER

Crowder Wins 9th in Row Over Hose.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox simply can't get away from the evil influence of Alvin Crowder. He whipped them eight times last season and they didn't beat him once. Yesterday he resumed where he left off last fall, his Washington mates assisting him with a homer that tied the score in the eighth and with a cut rate run that definitely decided the contest in the tenth. The score was 5 to 4 and it serve to ease the Sox back into fourth place.

The evil that Crowder can spread over the Sox got into the arm of Jim Dykes and that's what brought on the final blow for young Paul Gregory, who during the first seven innings had kept himself in front by a one or two run margin. The ex-Mackman, ordinarily a thrower who can register a bull's eye at anything under 100 feet, heaved one so wild that the winning run came home all the way from first base.

Boken Ties Score.

Before going into the distressing details of the tenth it might be well to go back to the eighth and hang a few flowers on Bob Boken, a rookie infielder taken from the Kansas City Blues last fall. The slat like lad who started at second base and switched to third when Ossie Bluege wrenched a foot running in the first inning, offered no resistance to Gregory in his first three appearances. But in the eighth he hammered one into the seats to put the Senators on even terms for the first time since the first inning when the Sox scored twice.

Joe Kuhel, a rather graceless but effective first baseman, had been a nuisance all afternoon, so when he stepped up as leadoff man in the tenth there naturally was some reason to expect bad news. It came in the shape of a slow bounding single that Gregory let hop past him. Jack Hayes tried to recover it but too late. Then Boken bumped a bunt toward third and Dykes picked it up with good intentions. But he heaved it so wild that the few spectators in the right field pavilion ducked. When the ball finally was recaptured, Kuhel was home and Boken was on third. Boken didn't score but this run wasn't needed.

Sox Get Two Runs.

The Sox didn't threaten to do any scoring in the first inning until after Hayes and Haas had been set down, the former on a neat stop by Cronin back of second base. The pleasant portion of the inning began with a walk to Swanson after which Simmons lined a single to right. Appling hammered a fly deep into right field and it cleared Goslin's head for a triple, Swanson and Simmons scoring. Cronin put a stop to the excitement by picking up Dykes' grounder and throwing him out at first.

Gregory's early innings, although scoreless, were not without their stirring moments. Goslin's scratch single and a walk to Cronin put two on base after two were out in the first, but Schulte couldn't produce. Two passes duplicated this situation in the second and this time Kerr was nailed for the third out on a fly to Simmons. Manush endeavored to start something by opening the third inning with a single, but Kress scooped up Goslin's hard smash for a double play and Simmons ran back to the wall to stage a one handed catch of a liner off Cronin's bat.

Kuhel looped a liner over third with one out in the fourth and this grew into the Senators' first run. After Boken had lofted to center, Gregory unloosened a wild pitch that let Kuhel move to second. Sewell walked and Crowder sneaked a single between Dykes and Appling to score Kuhel. Kerr's fly to Haas ended that.

It Just Couldn't Last.

The Sox restored their two run lead in the same inning. Appling led off with a double along the third base line and took third when Sewell pegged wild in hopes of nipping him off second. Dykes survived on a pass and Kress singled through short, Appling scoring. Then Berry ground-

LARGEST CROWD OF CHICAGO RACE SEASON SEES MARTIE FLYNN WIN

Eisenberg No. 3 leads the field around the half mile Sportsman's Park oval at a fast clip in the La Salle handicap, a sprint of 6½ furlongs. Many in the field were ready to concede victory to the pace setter at this stage, but as the horses whirled around the back stretch Espinaca forged to the front and then came the stretch duel in which Martie Fl ynn got up to win by a nose. It was the most thrilling race of the day.

CUBS WIN, 7-5, THEN BUSH FADES AND LOSES, 7-1

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., May 13.—Ed Holley, once a Cub, held the Chicagoans to four singles in the second game of a double header today, to achieve a 7 to 1 victory. Two of the four came after two were out in the ninth inning. The character of Holley's triumph did much to dissipate whatever satisfaction the Cubs felt for having come from behind to win the loosely played first game, 7 to 5.

It is slight solace to point out that the Phillies made enough earned runs to win the second game, even had the Cubs put up a defense of major league caliber—something which they did not do. The tailenders made their seven runs after two were out in the fifth inning and they made five of 'em after the side should have been retired. But the Cubs, with only two singles in 8 2-3 innings, had something besides their cracked defense on which to blame their second game misfortunes.

Hendrick Shows 'Em.

The first game was something of a personal triumph for two gents, one old and one young, who are not rated as regulars, though goodness knows why. By retiring four batters in succession after Lyle [Fat Boy] Tinning had melted in the fourth inning, Roy Henshaw achieved his first victory in professional ball. The other hero was old Gink Hendrick, who knocked a homer with one on in the first inning and then followed with three successive singles, two of which were highly essential in the Cubs' triumphs.

Hendrick appeared today as a substitute for that temperamental hypochondriac, Babe Herman. While Gink probably won't take Babe's place as a regular, he might well be used either at first base or center field until the present occupants of those stations can show Manager Grimm a base hit in batting practice once in a while. Player Demaree made only one hit in his three game visit to this city and Player Grimm didn't make any, making their fight to stay above the .200 mark a brave but losing enterprise. Player Hendrick plays center field and first base not gracefully, but well.

FIRST GAME

Hendrick started his batting spree in the best possible way. Bill Herman singled with one out and Gink knocked Rhem's second pitch over the right field screen for a homer, scoring Herman ahead of him. Stephenson was hit by a pitched ball and went to third on Hartnett's single to center. Gabby, however, was out when he overran first, Fullis to Bartell to Hurst to Finn. Bartell threw out English.

Hendrick also took a heavy part in the acquisition of two more runs in the third inning. Bill Herman walked and went to third on Hendrick's line single to right center. Stephenson grounded to Bartell, who headed off Herman near the plate, but Bill managed to retreat past Whitney and when he landed back on third the bases were full. Herman scored and Hendrick went to third on Hartnett's fly to Fullis and Hendrick scored on English's fly to Klein. Grimm walked, but Jurges fanned.

Henshaw Rescues Tinning.

The Cubs' 4 to 0 lead seemed comfortable until Tinning bogged down in the latter half of the third. Fullis got the second of his three singles with one out in this inning and stopped at second on Bartell's single to left. The runners moved up on Tinning's first wild pitch and when Klein grounded out to Bill Herman, Fullis scored and Bartell took third. Davis walked on four pitches, then Hurst missed a homer off the right field screen by about a foot, the effort going for a double which scored Bar-

Get That Swing at Tribune's Golf School

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
(Other golf news on page 6.)

THE TRIBUNE Golf school, sponsored by the Chicago Daily Fee Golf association, received additional impetus from a new source yesterday, when Harry E. Radix, president of the Chicago District Golf association, comprised of a majority of the private clubs in this territory; praised it as the most novel stimulus golf as a game has had in years.

"It is not only an innovation in golf," Radix said, "but will stimulate interest in the game among all classes. It will afford an opportunity not only to beginners but also to those players who have been at the game for years and are seeking to improve their play. It will be especially helpful to people who have not played golf for the simple reason that they have been afraid that they would appear too awkward when they first stepped on the tee to swing a club in front of others. The golfer who has been playing for any length of time also can benefit his game at the school, which should bring hundreds of new players to golf."

Every One Is Eligible.

The point brought out by Radix with reference to beginners and those who have played golf is one that should be understood by all prospective pupils. THE TRIBUNE school has no restrictions. Every man, woman, boy and girl is eligible, regardless of whether he or she ever has stepped on a tee or has been trying to break 100 for years. The players of today are as welcome as the players of tomorrow. Incidentally, those golfers now practicing the game should find in the school a chance to make or break 100, for in most cases failure to do so is generally due to a lack of knowledge of the fundamentals.

The school will consist of a series of six free lessons, to be given by the home professional at each of the 27 member courses of the association. Lessons will be given to four separate classes—men, women, and boys and girls under 18 years of age. A coupon will be published in THE TRIBUNE daily, which should be filled out with name, address, age, and a check opposite the course at which the pupil wishes to enroll.

School Opens May 22.

The school will open on all 27 courses on May 22 with a general explanation of the school. The first men's class will be held on the following night, the first women's class on May 24, the first girls' class on May 25, and the first class for boys on May 26. For the next six weeks men will be taught on Tuesdays, women on Wednesdays, girls on Thursdays, and boys on Fridays.

At the end of the sixth lesson the professional at each course will choose his best pupil in each class, reducing the school for the finals to 108, a man, woman, boy, and girl from each of the 27 courses. These will meet on July 5 in a contest based on form, to be judged by a jury composed of Tommy Armour of Medinah, Harry Cooper of Glen Oak, Frank Walsh of Bryn Mawr, Jock Hutchison of Glen View, and Bob MacDonald. On July 8 the same 108 will meet in an 18 hole medal play tournament.

Each of the 108 finalists is assured of a prize. The Chicago Daily Fee Golf association will award to the winners at each of the courses a playing membership good for the remainder of the season at the course at which they took their six lessons. The eight winners of the finals will receive a playing membership for the balance of the season at all of the 27 courses. A dozen balls will be awarded by the association to each of the second and third place winners in the two final contests. THE TRIBUNE will award prizes to the eight finalists—four trophies to the winners of the form contest and a set of clubs and a bag to each of the four victors in the medal play tournament.

The largest crowd of the Chicago racing season gathers at Sportsman's Park to watch the thoroughbreds match speed in eight races. This section of the throng of 14,000 is massed on the lawn as the horses dash down the stretch in the first race, won by the long shot Bridgeport.

I wish to enroll in the

YALE'S VARSITY CREW CAPTURES CARNEGIE CUP

Princeton, N. J., May 13.—(AP)—Yale's powerful eight oared varsity crew won the Carnegie cup for the fifth time in six years today, beating Princeton by a length over a mile and three-quarters course on Lake Carnegie. Cornell was third, a length back of Princeton.

The Princeton 150 pound eight captured the Goldthwait cup by three-quarters of a length, with Yale second.

Take Away Powers of Hockey Head

New York, May 13.—(AP)—The National Hockey league, meeting secretly in Boston last night and as scheduled in New York today, reëlected Frank Calder for a two year term as president, but took many of his powers away from him by establishing a new post of managing director.

Frank Patrick, brother of Lester Patrick, New York Rangers' president, and a veteran of hockey management in Canada and in the Pacific Coast league, was named to the new job and given complete charge of referees, officials and enforcement of the rules.

Opponents Claim Victory.

The way in which Calder meted out punishment to various players last season brought him into sharp conflict with several clubs. The establishment of Patrick as the new arbiter was interpreted as a victory for those opposing the league head.

Although the league governors declined comment on the intent of the change, it was said unofficially that Calder would remain in charge of the business affairs, but that the important disciplinary powers now were out of his control. The governors themselves reserved the right to review Patrick's decisions.

The club salary limit was lowered from $70,000 to $65,000, indicating a further cut for the players next fall.

Receipts Off 20 Per Cent.

Reporting on the 1932-'33 season, President Calder said that although attendance dropped off only 4 per cent to 1,500,000, receipts were almost 20 per cent less than in the previous season because of the decrease in the price of admissions.

A new board of governors was elected consisting of: Toronto, Conny Smythe; Ottawa, Redmond Quain; Montreal, James Strachan; Canadiens, Leo Dandurand; Chicago, Maj. Frederick McLaughlin; Detroit, A. B. Plyffner; Boston, R. R. Duncan; New York Rangers, W. F. Carey; New York Americans, W. V. Dwyer.

GIANTS WIN, 2-1; PIRATES' LEAD IS CUT TO ONE GAME

Jackson Singles with Bases Loaded in 11th.

New York, May 13.—(AP)—The Giants reduced the lead of the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National league race to a single game today as they scored a 2 to 1 eleven inning victory without earning a run.

Five errors, three by Floyd Vaughan, brought about the undoing of the Pirates and their star southpaw, Larry French. Going into the ninth inning, French had yielded only three hits and was leading 1 to 0 through Vaughan's second inning home run. Then an error by Vaughan paved the way for the tying run scored by Joe Moore.

In the eleventh an error by Gus Suhr let Ott reach first safely. Vaughan threw George Davis' grounder past Piet for an error and both runners were safe. Johnny Vergez beat out a hit to load the bases but on Blondy Ryan's roller to Traynor. Ott was nipped at the plate. The bases still were loaded when Travis Jackson batted for Luque, third Giant pitcher, and came through with a single that won the game. Score:

DODGERS, REDS TIE, 1-1.

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 13.—(AP)—The Dodgers and the Cincinnati Reds struggled through ten innings today and wound up in a 1 to 1 tie when the game was called at the end of the tenth to allow the Reds to catch a train for home, where they play Chicago tomorrow.

It was a mound duel between Ray Kolp and Owen Carroll all the way and neither team earned its run. Kolp yielded only three hits before he was removed for a pinch hitter in the tenth, but a burst of wildness after Danny Taylor's double and George Grantham's error in the sixth cost him his one run lead. NORMAL TRACK TITLE AGAIN WON BY CARBONDALE

Bloomington, Ill., May 13. — [Special.]—Carbondale Teachers won their fifth consecutive normal college track and field title here today with 95½ points. State Normal was second with 82, Macomb third with 20½, De Kalb fourth with 16, and Charleston last with 6.

Carbondale and State Normal fought on even terms until the closing events, with Carbondale scoring heavily in the field and State taking most of the track events.

Capt. Jim Johnson of State Normal, Olympic sprinter, took the trophy presented to the outstanding athlete by winning the 100, 220, and 440 yard dashes. His time in the 100 was 9.6 and he traveled the 220 in 21.9 seconds.

Lyle Hutton won both the mile and half mile for State Normal, turning the mile in 4 minutes 28.6 seconds and the 880 in 1 minutes 59.2 seconds.

Bauder hurled the discus 130 feet 3¼ inches for the outstanding performance of the Carbondale team.

Luther Beats Dubuque, Columbia Track Teams

Dubuque, Ia., May 13.—[Special.]—Luther college of Decorah defeated Dubuque university and Columbia college in a triangular meet here today. Luther piled up 73 1-3 points to Dubuque's 41 5-6. Columbia scored 27 5-6 points. The victors scored seven firsts.

Cubs Defeat Phils, 7 to 5, Then Lose, 7-1

tell, Davis stopping at third. Tinning cast another wild pitch, Davis scoring and Hurst taking third. Lee and Whitney then walked, filling the bases. Finn sent a long fly to Demaree to temporarily halt the onslaught on the Cub fat boy.

In the next inning the Phils lost little time in resuming their attack on Tinning. Rhem opened with a single to right. Bill Herman made a great diving stop back of second to knock down Fullis' potential hit and force Rhem at second. Bartell walked, after which Klein fouled to English. Davis tripled off the score board in center field, scoring Fullis and Bartell to give the Phils a 5 to 4 lead. Henshaw relieved Tinning and made Hurst tap to Grimm for the third out.

Gink Delivers Again.

Henshaw retired Lee, Whitney and Finn in order in the fifth to complete his day's chore and gain a victory for his first decision in organized baseball.

The Cub victory was accomplished in the sixth inning in the following manner: Grimm opened with his second walk. Jurges and Campbell, batting for Henshaw, flied to Klein, but Demaree came through with his first hit of the series, a single to center, which put Grimm on second. Bill Herman then doubled to left center, scoring Grimm with the tying run and Demaree with the winning marker. At this point Hendrick delivered his fourth successive hit of the afternoon, scoring Bill Herman. Stephenson singled to right and Hendrick went to third, whereupon Rhem went away and Moore came in to make Hartnett end the inning with a fly to Fullis.

Grimes pitched the last four innings and held the Phils hitless, except for a Texas league single which just cleared Grimm with two out in the eighth. A single by Jurges off Grabowski with two out in the seventh was the only hit registered by the Cubs after their rally in the sixth. Liska held the boys completely in the eighth and ninth.

SECOND GAME

The first hit of the second game was made by Hartnett with one out in the second inning, a matter which came to naught when English hit into a double play. The first hit off Bush fell to Cohen with two out in the same inning and was nothing of a threat because Finn immediately grounded out to English. Holley made the second hit off Bush with one out in the third, but it was canceled forthwith in a double play started by Bush.

Only 12 batsmen faced Holley in the first four innings and only four men came up in the fifth. But the Cubs made a run in the fifth. Stephenson got the first walk of the game to start the inning and took second on Hartnett's long fly to Fullis. English then came through with the Cubs' second hit, a single to right, which scored Stephenson. Grimm completed his tenth successive futile time at bat by hitting into a double play.

Bush Loses Control.

Bush, who hadn't come close to walking a batsman in the four innings, suddenly lost control to start the Philly fifth and walked Hurst and Cohen. The runners moved up on Finn's sacrifice, after which Warner grounded to Jurges and Hurst was run down between third and home, Jurges to Hartnett to English to Bush. Cohen advanced to third and Warner to second on the maneuver. Holley came up with his second and the Phillies' third hit, a single to left, scoring Cohen and Warner.

Fullis was given credit for a single when Jurges fumbled his easy grounder toward second, Holley stopping at second. Bartell hopped a bouncer to English, but Woody, in an attempt to force Fullis at second, threw wide to pull Herman off the bag. This error filled the bases and gave all the succeeding five runs in the inning an unearned classification. Klein followed up English's bobble with a scratch single which bounced over Bush's head, Holley scoring and the bases remaining filled. At this juncture Davis socked his homer into the left field stand, Fullis, Bartell, and Klein scoring ahead of him. Hurst, up the second time in the inning, popped to Bill Herman.

Cubs Break Even, 5-5, in 10 Games of Eastern Tour

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., May 13. — The Cubs' first 1933 eastern trip closed today with a record of five victories and five defeats. On May 2 Warneke beat the Giants, 11 to 0, but two days later the Giants swept a double header, 2 to 1 and 5 to 4, with Tinning and Bush the pitching victims. Charley Root went eleven innings to lose a 2 to 1 decision to the Braves on May 5. The following day the Cubs beat the Braves, 9 to 6, in 13 innings, with Lynn Nelson a hero at bat and in the pitcher's box.

On May 7 the Cubs took a series for the only time this year when they won both ends of a double header, 11 to 2 behind Grimes and 5 to 2 behind Warneke. Yesterday, as you probably remember, the Cubs curled up in the late innings to lose to the Phils, 8 to 4, in the first game played in four days. Their series in Brooklyn and the first game here were called off through box office manipulations.

The Reds, who have licked the Cubs in three games out of four, including Lon Warneke's two setbacks of the year, will see what should be the best pitching the Cubs have to offer. Manager Grimm is going to let them look at Warneke again, also Charley Root.

Babe Herman was out of the starting lineup for the first time during the championship season. It was reported that the temperamental Babe's mysterious leg injury improved wonderfully when he saw his successor in right field, Gink Hendrick, account for the Cubs' first two runs with a homer in the first inning of the first game. There was reported to be further healing when Gink's single figured in the Cubs' two run effort in the third inning. And when he made it three hits in a row with a single in the fifth Babe's speedy recovery virtually was assured. When Gink made it four in a row for the game Babe practically swooned with health.

Kuhel's single and Sewell's double to the left field score board gave the visitors another run in the sixth, but the Sox bounced right back in their half to reëstablish their two run advantage. With two out, Berry singled to right and Gregory did the same. Hayes then singled past third and Berry scored.

The Senators broke in with another run in the seventh, but it might have been avoided if Swanson hadn't erred. Manush singled to right after Kerr had popped out. Goslin also singled to right and Swanson let the ball trickle through his hands. This gave Manush time to reach third and Goslin second. Manush scored on Cronin's fly to Simmons and Appling tossed out Schulte to close the inning. Then Boken blasted his homer into the left field seats in the eighth and the score was tied at four runs apiece.

SOX TO USE LYONS, JONES

The best pitching talent he has will be turned loose against the Senators by Lew Fonseca, the White Sox boss, in today's double header, starting at 1:30 p. m. Ted Lyons and Sam Jones will draw the assignments. Lyons failed to beat the Senators in three attempts last season and Jones likewise was unsuccessful in two starts, but Fonseca is sure this can't go on forever. The Senators' pitching will be handled by Earl Whitehill, the ex-Tiger southpaw, and Alphonse Thomas, the prospective bridegroom, who spent several futile years with the Sox.

Jimmy Dykes was charged with only eight errors during the 1932 season. His bad throw in the tenth yesterday was his sixth miscue of the current campaign.

Whether the Sox win or lose, Swanson manages to keep himself on the baselines. He was on four times yesterday, twice on hits and twice on passes. He did the same in the previous game played. In the last ten battles he has reached base 12 times on singles and seven times on free transportation.

Gregory did one thing well. He put a noticeable crimp in the batting average of Schulte, the Senators' center fielder. In five tries the ex-Brown didn't get the ball past the infield. His best effort was a liner straight into Dykes' hands.

Fonseca intended to put on baseball shoes and walk around to determine whether his vanishing foot injury would be annoyed by spikes. The soggy condition of the ground induced him to delay the experiment. However, he is sure that he'll be back on first base before the end of the week.

Oak Park Boy Timed in 9.6 for 100 Yard Dash

Northfield, Minn., May 13.—(AP)—Randall Herman of Oak Park, Ill., freshman at Carleton college, was timed at 9.6 seconds in the 100 yard dash during a telegraphic meet today with University of Chicago freshmen.

MICHIGAN, 4; OHIO STATE, 1.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 13. — [Special.]—Two home runs, one with a man on base, gave Michigan 3 runs, the margin of its 4 to 1 victory over Ohio State today. The Wolverines collected only four hits, but with a run already in and Diffley on second, Manuel smacked a homer down the left field foul line in the second. Petoskey caught Ulrich's first pitch for another homer in the sixth. Whitey Wistert held Ohio State to five singles, two of which were put together for a run in the seventh.

WESTERN STATE WINS, 1-0.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 13.—[Special.]—The Western State Teachers college baseball team continued its string of victories today by winning a pitching duel from Michigan State college, 1 to 0. The winning run came in the ninth inning.

With one down in the ninth Miller doubled and Johnson drove him home with a single to right, giving Marquard his second straight shutout victory and his sixth straight for the season. The victory gives Western State a lead in the race for the state title. It is the only undefeated team in Michigan competition.

Canada Beats Cuba in Davis Cup Play, 4-1

Hot Springs, Va., May 13.—(AP)—Canada defeated Cuba in their Davis cup tennis series, four matches to one by sweeping both of today's singles matches in straight sets.

Dr. Jack Wright's convincing 6-1, 6-2, 6-1 triumph over Lorenzo Nodarse decided the series, but most of the sparkling tennis was reserved for the final match in which Gilbert Nunns, Canadian youth, beat Captain Ricardo Morales, ranking Cuban, 8-6, 6-2, 6-4.

The Canadians will play the United States Davis cup team in Montreal next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Wright was master of the situation throughout his match with Nodarse and contented himself with lashing placements from the back court, seldom electing to come to the net.

Morales, star of the attack that carried the Cubans to victory in the doubles match for their only triumph of the series, could not cope with Nunns' powerful forehand drives from the back court. After a tightly contested first set, which Nunns finally won, 8-6, the Canadian broke through Morales' defense in the second and third sets to win handily.

ENGLAND TAKES LEAD.

LONDON, May 13.—(AP)—England today continued its march toward the European zone final of Davis cup play as Fred Perry and H. W. [Bunny] Austin won the opening singles matches against Finland in a second round series.

Perry defeated B. Grotenfelt, 6-0, 6-3, 6-1, and Austin won from A. Grahn, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

England defeated Spain four matches to one in the first round, while Finland advanced through the default of India. The winner will meet the winner of the Austria-Italy series in a quarter-final match of the European zone.

AUSTRALIA IN THIRD ROUND.

OSLO, Norway, May 13.—(AP)—Australia today entered the third round of Davis cup play in the European zone as it won its third straight match from Norway. Both countries had first round byes. Jack Crawford and D. Turnbull paired to clinch the victory in doubles, defeating Hagen and Haanes.

MONACO IS BEATEN.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, May 13.—(AP)—Czechoslovakia won both singles matches today in the Davis cup play with Monaco to take a first round lead of 2 matches to 0. Doubles will be played tomorrow.

Jay Cohn, former national junior singles tennis champion, will meet David Kreiger in an exhibition match at the Howard-Ashland Tennis club this afternoon.

Outboard Show at Navy Pier Will Close Tonight

The fourth national outboard show at Navy Pier will close tonight. Tournaments in casting, archery and horseshoe pitching, which have been in progress all week, will be completed tonight.

SEMI-PROS OFFER DOUBLE HEADERS FOR FANS TODAY

2 League Bargains; Mills Face House of David.

Four Wisconsin-Illinois Semi-Pro Baseball league teams will engage in league double headers today, while others will participate in nonleague contests. In the league games the Chicago Firemen will meet the Logan Squares at Logan Square park, Kedzie and Elston avenues, and the Duffy Florals will play the Spencer Coals at Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets.

The Mills will meet the House of David team of Benton Harbor, Mich., at Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue. Forrest Paddock will pitch the second.

Warneke, Hartnett Battery.

The House of David's battery in the first game will be Al Warneke and Paul Hartnett. Warneke, 20 year old brother of Lon Warneke, Chicago Cubs' star, pitched in the Nebraska State league last season. Paul is a brother of Gabby Hartnett, Cubs' catcher.

The Mills, last year's league champions, defeated the Madison Blues in a double header last Sunday, but Wednesday night lost to them, 6 to 5, at Madison. The second game, scheduled for Thursday, was postponed because of rain.

Maley Faces Florals.

Joe Maley will pitch for the Spencers against the Florals in the first game. Maley last season was a member of the Florals. The Spencers, who joined the league this year, started the season with a double victory over the Logan Squares last Sunday. Today's schedule:

House of David vs. Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue [2].
Spencer Coals vs. Duffy Florals, Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets [2].
American Clowns at Aurora [2].
Madison Blues at Baraboo, Wis. [2].

MIDWEST LEAGUE

The heaviest program of the season has been scheduled for today in the Midwest Baseball league, when 26 games will be played. The games:

CLASS A [SEMI-PRO].
All Chicagos vs. Hurley A. C. Boosters at Milwaukee and Lowell.
Rogers Parks vs. Amphions at La Vergne and Le Moyne.
Kellers of Waukegan at Racine.

MARTIE FLYNN WON, SO DON'T LET THE ANGLE DECEIVE YOU. Espinaca, on the rail, and the Stuyvesant Peabody thoroughbred reach the finish line of the fifth race at Sportsman's park only a whisker apart. However, from an angle it appears as if Espinaca, the favorite, had earned the nod from the judges. They paid off on old Martie at the rate of $7.20 for each $2 invested. (Story on page 4, Sports.)

MARTIE FLYNN'S NOSE GETS GOLD AT SPORTSMAN'S

14,000 See Old Speedster Win Feature.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The largest crowd of the Chicago racing season gathered at Sportsman's Park yesterday and watched old Martie Flynn, sporting the silks of Stuyvesant Peabody, win the La Salle handicap.

There were 14,000 persons in the audience and they wagered more than $250,000 during the afternoon, according to unofficial reports. About half the folks bet on Martie Flynn and the other half against him for there were some bronx cheers when Martie's number went up after the exciting stretch battle in which he outgamed the favorite, Espinaca, to triumph by the narrowest of nose margains.

Six accepted the issue in the La Salle, which was a dash at six and one-half furlongs. Eisenberg took the track early and made quite a fast pace despite the heavy doing. He wilted half way down the back stretch the second time around. Then Espinaca took the lead and semed to be safely home.

Old Martie Comes Home.

Jockey Arcaro found an opening for Martie Flynn in the deep going next to the rail, however, and the old fellow who was once quite a Derby threat long, long ago, slipped through to come up into contention. Arcaro next took him to the outside, where the footing was more solid and he lasted just long enough to hang it on Espinaca by a nose. Eisenberg was third.

It was one of the largest crowds ever to assemble at the tiny half mile course and the throng jammed the lawns and stands so tightly, players made their way to and from the betting windows with great difficulty.

An upset accurred in the first race when Bridgeport, paying $42.80, got up in the final strides to beat Marabou with Baby Bane third. The top heavy favorite, Lofty Heights, which races for Mrs. Bob Rogers of Chicago, was out of the money.

The stewards suspended Jockey Willie Carroll of Kentucky for 60 days immediately after the race. Carroll had tried to grab the saddle cloth and bridle on Bridgeport, they charged.

Favorite Players Slighted.

The favorite players took another whipping in the second race when Oh Yeah, a cast off from Alderman John Coughlin's barn, came from far back to win by a half length over Zode. Too Much Talk finished third and the favorite, Donate, was far back. The players have about decided to quit donating on Donate. Oh Yeah paid $10.10. Despite the warm sunshine, the track was extremely slow and Oh Yeah's time for the five furlongs was 1:12 4-5.

The favorite players were beginning to weep when they were trounced again in the third and fourth races. It was Adsum which won the second with the choice, One Long Hop, out of the money. Then along came Closing Event to win the fourth. The favorite in this race was Little Joyce.

An assistant starter wrapped a leather twitch so tightly around Little Joyce's nose it didn't unwind when the barrier went up. So Little Joyce carried the twitch all the way around the four and one half furlong journey, and while her breathing was effected she was game enough to finish second. Dorothy Alice got third money. Closing Event paid $7.32.

A favorite finally won the sixth race when Sun Worship accounted for the seven furlong dash. He won handily from Belgian Lass and Howtiz. It was the third straight Sportsman's Park victory for Sun Worship, as royally bred as any horse in the country.

SUN MEMORY SCORES

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Sun Memory splattered across the finish line three lengths in the lead amid the cheers of 9,000 spectators who had made him the favorite in yesterday's feature event at the Aurora race track. Behind him came the popular Dr. Freeland, with Anne L. third, two lengths farther back.

For the first time in many days the spectators enjoyed sunshine and mild weather, but track conditions were worse than usual. The running strip had begun to dry out and had become so heavy that only a mighty game horse could stand a hard drive down the exceptionally long Aurora stretch.

Withstands Doctor's Rush.

Sun Memory proved that he possessed that gameness, for after setting the pace head and head with Anne L. all the way down the back stretch, he took the lead on the far turn and held Dr. Freeland safe in the final drive. Jockey Martin hand rode him nearly all the way, applying the whip only once to keep him running well as Dr. Freeland made a bid in midstretch.

Sun Memory paid $6.36 to win, $3.14 to place and $3.18 to show. He ran the six furlongs in 1:23.

Monte Parke continued his drive to overtake Lee Humphries as America's leading jockey by riding three more winners yesterday. He brought in Vanquish, Helen Green and Old Bill, all heavily backed favorites.

More Anon, an even money favorite, was successful in the second race. Only once did Jockey Richard have to shake him up. One crack of the whip at the sixteenth pole inspired More Anon to gallop to victory by a margin of a length. In the last few yards, Knowledge, an outsider, came up to take sceond place from Sid Lea. Knowledge paid $25.48 to place and $8.34 to show.

Linmast Fails Backers.

The popular Linmast disappointed his backers in the third race by finishing out of the money after he had been made the 8 to 5 favorite. He was the victim of bad racing luck, having been crowded far to the rear in the back stretch. The winner was Preferred, a 3½ to 1 shot, which scored handily by a margin of five lengths.

Daily double tickets on More Anon and Preferred were worth $31.06.

Quinella tickets on Mueller and Cotton Time in the last race paid $8.28.

LEAVES FOR TOURNAMENT.

Miss Helen Ovenden, 2538 Jackson boulevard, second ranking woman ping-pong player of the United States, will leave today by plane for New York, where she will play in the national championship table tennis matches opening tomorrow.

RACING FOR JOCKEY TITLE

NEWS FROM THE RACE TRACKS

SPORTSMAN'S PARK FORM CHART

FIRST RACE—Purse $500. Five furlongs out of chute. Weather partly cloudy; track heavy. Net value to winner, $400; second, $65; third, $25; fourth, $10.

Time, :26, :55 4-5, 1:12 4-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Oh Yeah, $10.10 straight, $5.20 place, $4.26 show; Zode, $7.06 place, $4.52 show; Too Much Talk, $6.58 show. Winner trained by J. O'Sullivan. Went to post at 2:56½. At post, 3½ minutes. Start good from machine. Second and third driving.

OH YEAH dwelt at the start, worked her way up to second turn where she saved ground and kept in firmer footing, won in a drive. ZODE saved off early pace, moved up at head of stretch but was in deep footing and could not get up. TOO MUCH TALK rated off the early pace, under restraint, tired when put to a drive.

THIRD RACE—Purse $500. Five furlongs out of chute. Net value to winner, $400; second $65; third, $25; fourth, $10.

Horse and jockey—	Wt	PP	St	¼	½	Str	Fin	Owner	Eq odds

THISTLE MARTY [E. Arcaro]	105¼	2	3	7	7	7	7	Mrs. A. M. Caff'y	25.17-1

Time, :26 1-5, :55 3-5, 1:11 3-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Adsum, $13.50 straight, $6.40 place, $3.92 show; Adorland, $10.62 place, $4.93 show; Essie, $3.38 show. Winner trained by L. E. Ogle. Went to post at 3:28. At post 3 minutes. Start good from machine. Won easily. Second and third driving.

ADSUM, showing the most speed and racing kindly in the going, assumed command early and was never headed. ADORLAND, restrained off early pace and moving up on second turn, came to outside in firmer footing and closed fast. ESSIE raced with early leader and tired badly.

FOURTH RACE—Purse $600. Four and one-half furlongs. Net value to winner, $475; second, $75; third, $30; fourth, $20.

Horse and jockey—	Wt	PP	St	¼	⅜	Str	Fin	Owner	Eq odds
CLOS'G EVENT [E. T. Moore]	113	1	5	$2^{2½}$	....	1^{1}	1^{4}	F. E. Moore	2.66-1

WHEELER G. [H. Bracken]	109	4	1	5^{20}	....	5½	6	Mrs. M.A. Collins	9.73-1

Time, :27 2-5, :57 3-5, 1:06 4-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Closing Event, $7.32 straight, $3.56 place, $2.70 show; Little Joyce, $3.60 place, $2.80 show; Dorothy Alice, $2.88 show. Winner trained by R. F. Felix. Went to post at 3:58. At post 5 minutes. Start good from machine. Won easily. Second and third driving.

CLOSING EVENT, probably best, rated off early pace, easily went into command when Cabouse tired and came on to an easy win. LITTLE JOYCE, fractious at barrier, carried the starters twitch entire distance, which probably retarded her progress and finished gamely. DOROTHY ALICE, outrun early, closed well.

FIFTH RACE—Purse $1,000. Six and one-half furlongs. Net value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25.

JOLLY PILOT [J. McLaren]	104	1	5	4½	5^{4}	5^{10}	5^{10}	6	M. Simmons	6.10-1

Time, :26 4-5, :57 1-5, 1:27 1-5, 1:34 2-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Martie Flynn, $7.20 straight, $3.34 place, $2.72 show; Espinaca, $3.30 place, $2.60 show; Eisenberg, $3.06 show. Winner trained by R. McGarvey. Went to post at 4:30½. At post 7½ minutes. Start good from machine. Won driving. Second and third same.

MARTIE FLYNN, away well and taken back of early pace, moved up on second turn and, coming to outside in firmer footing, got up to win in final strides. ESPINACA assumed command when Eisenberg tired, labored and faltered in heavy going, tired and varely missed. EISENBERG set a fast early pace and held on gamely after being headed.

SIXTH RACE—Purse $600. Seven furlongs out of chute. Net value to winner, $475; second, $75; third, $30; fourth, $20.

Time, :25 4-5, :56 1-5, 1:26 4-5, 1:43 3-5. *Apprentice allowance claimed. Two dollar mutuels paid: Sun Worship, $5.06 straight, $3.76 place, $2.82 show; Belgian Lass, $6.80 place, $4.08 show; Howtiz, $3.36 show. Winner trained by E. McCuan. Went to post at 5:01. At post 1 minute. Start good from machine. Won driving. Second and third same.

SUN WORSHIP, having most speed and at home in the going, raced under restraint while making the pace and won ridden out. BELGIAN LASS, in firmer footing while working her way up, was gaining on the winner at the end. HOWTIZ, taken back early, closed gamely.

SEVENTH RACE—Purse $600. Seven furlongs out of chute. Net value to winner, $475; second, $75; third, $30; fourth, $20.

Schwartz. Went to post at 5:31¼. At post 2½ minutes. Start good from machine. Won easily. Second and third driving.

DUELIST, much the best and under clever hand riding had most speed and went on to win under restraint. PETABIT, taken back early and saved off pace, could not menace the winner, but was best of the others. UPSWEEP, taken back early, worked his way up and closed well.

EIGHTH RACE—Purse $600. One mile and 70 yards. Net value to winner, $475; second, $75; third, $30; fourth, $20.

COACHES TO HOLD FOOTBALL MEET HERE IN AUGUST

New York, May 13.—(AP)—A call for an informal meeting of the American Football Coaches' association, during the Century of Progress exposition at Chicago, Aug. 21-22-23, was issued today by Dan E. McGugin of Vanderbilt university, the president.

Such a meeting was held in Los Angeles during the Olympic games last summer and was so successful it was decided to continue the practice this year.

A special committee consisting of Kenneth L. [Tug] Wilson, Northwestern athletic director, and Dick Hanley, Northwestern coach, Coach Clark Shaughnessy of Chicago and Coach Bernie Bierman of Minnesota has been named to handle the plans for the meeting.

84 ELIGIBLE TO SEEK AMERICAN DERBY HONORS

Star 3 Year Olds to Clash June 3.

The next of the big 3 year old specials—the American derby at Washington Park—will be run on June 3, with $25,000 in prize money as the big objective.

The entry list includes 84 three year olds, with all of the starters in the Kentucky derby eligible for the race. A number of others which did not start in the Kentucky derby have been named, and there is a chance that the winner of the old Chicago fixture will be a 3 year old which was not named for the Kentucky derby.

Golden Way Eligible.

Among these are Joseph E. Widener's Golden Way, by John P. Grier-Milky Way II. Another fast colt eligible for the race is Morton L. Schwartz' One Chance, J. D. Cohen's Colonel Hatfield, LeMar Stock Farm's Misguide, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Archer, S. W. Labrot's Damascene, Marshall Field's Nimbus, Mrs. E. Denemark's Transbird, W. R. Coe's Pomposo, Col. E. R. Bradley's Broad Hill, the Arden Farm's Quel Jeu, Northway Stable's Northgalis, and John Marsch's Indian Boy.

In addition there are several high class colts that were prevented from starting in the Kentucky race due to illness, which will be given consideration by their owners and followers for American derby honors. These include Trace Call and Sarada. Another withdrawn from the Kentucky derby was Fair Rochester, a handsome black colt.

Modesty Wins First Derby.

It was 49 years ago the first American Derby was run over the old Washington Park track. The winner was the filly Modesty, in the colors of Edward Corrigan. It was 40 years ago that the World's Fair American derby was decided over the same course. The winner turned up in Boundless, ridden by the late Edward [Snapper] Garrison. The scene has changed for the renewal of the American derby, but the track bears the same name, Washington Park.

Since Modesty won the first derby a half century ago no filly has finished in front. It is possible, however, that a filly or two will start in this year's race. Jack Howard named Advising Anna, a brown filly by Blondin from Phenecia, which has never been beaten. She started three times last year and won easily each time.

WORK ON TOTALIZER

Four electrically operated indicator boards, employing the use of 10,276 Mazda bulbs, will be erected at Arlington park in connection with the $250,000 totalizer now being installed at the northside course, Roy Carruthers, managing director of the Arlington Park Jockey club, announced yesterday. The indicator boards, to be located in the infield, clubhouse, and grandstand enclosures and paddock, will be in readiness for Arlington's 30 day race meeting which starts June 26.

In anticipating the demands of a metropolitan race track, engineers of the American Totalizer company, which is installing the new Arlington machine, hit upon the use of electric bulbs, a nest of 24 bulbs being capable of forming the numerals from zero to nine as desired. These numerals may be read clearly at great distances and in any light.

INVITE AMMON RA HERE

Australia is planning to send Ammon Ra, its greatest race horse since Phar Lap, to Chicago this summer. His chief objective will be the Hawthorne Gold Cup, to be run in August.

Some weeks ago, Joseph A. Murphy, general manager of the Hawthorne track, wrote to C. C. Sheath of Sydney, N. S. W., owner of Ammon Ra, inviting him to ship the Australian champion to Chicago to meet Equipoise and the best America could muster in the Gold Cup, a race at weight for age, in which there are no weight concessions. Sheath accepted the invitation and stated that if the horse's May trials were satisfactory, it would be shipped on June 21 to Monterey, and after a rest sent to Hawthorne for its final preparation.

Ammon Ra, in his 21 starts as a 2 year old and 3 year old, was first in fifteen, second in three, third in one, and fourth in the remaining two events. He has taken part in races up to one mile and a half, and judging from his record, all distances are the same to him. The colt is 4 years old.

Ammon Ra is sixteen hands one inch, a bay, with a small white star. He is by Limond, from Hyades.

GEORGE JENNINGS, PARKS NET STAR, WILL TURN PRO

George J. Jennings Jr., four times national public parks tennis champion, will turn professional on June 1, when he reports to the Crestmont inn, Eagles Mere, Pa., where he will be in charge of tournaments.

Jennings underwent an operation for a knee injury last winter, and pending complete recovery will confine his efforts to teaching tennis. He is a former Illinois state champion, city singles title holder, and the western indoor champion. Jennings resides at 8131 South Bishop avenue.

CULVER DEFEATS CRANE COLLEGE IN TRACK MEET

Culver, Ind., May 13.—[Special.]—Superiority in the track events enabled Culver Military academy to defeat Crane Junior college of Chicago in a dual track meet today, 73 2-3 to 39 1-3. Evans of Culver won first places in the 100 yard dash, the 120 yard high and 220 yard low hurdles. Heisted of Crane took the pole vault and broad jump. His leap of 23 feet in the broad jump was the best performance of the day.

POSTPONE BICYCLE RACES.

The American Bicycle league's races scheduled for this afternoon at the Humboldt park outdoor track, have been postponed until May 28.

PREAKNESS CHART

The Preakness Stakes, 3 year old colts and fillies, mile and three-sixteenths. Start good from gate. Won easily, place driving. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:34. Winner, ch. c., 3, by My Play-Red Head. Owner, Mrs. Silas B. Mason. Trainer, T. P. Hayes. Value, $26,850 to winner; $2,500, second; $1,500, third; $500 fourth. Time, :23 225, :48, 1:14 1-5, 1:41, 2:02. Weather cloudy, track slow.

Two dollar mutuels paid: Head Play, $5.60 straight, $3.60 place, $2.60 show; Ladysman, $4.00 place, $2.80 show; Utopian, $3.00 show.

HEAD PLAY, fractious and unwilling to be placed in the stall partition, was sent to the outside. He broke forwardly, and outrunning his field to the first turn was cleverly rated in front, shook off several bold efforts from Ladysman, and then drew out easily in the last quarter mile. LADYSMAN, going along stoutly while in the thick of contention, made a sharp bid when leaving the back stretch, but was no match for the winner during the stretch run. He was strongly ridden to stall off UTOPIAN. Latter, favored by the early pace, worked up on the outside, and finished resolutely. POMPONIUS improved his position while saving ground, and came willingly at the end. INLANDER was never able to threaten. KERRY PATCH, finding racing room all the way, entered contention smoothly, but tired in the last three-sixteenths. DE VALERA began dropping back when reaching the back stretch. BROKER'S TIP lacked speed and could not enter contention under stout handling.

Army Track Team Beats Notre Dame

West Point, N. Y., May 13.—[Special.]—Army defeated Notre Dame in a dual track meet today, 74 to 52. Bruce Epler, with victories in the high hurdle and broad jump, was the Army's chief scorer, tying with Murphy of Notre Dame, who took the 100 yard dash and high jump. The summaries:

WISCONSIN WINS; CHICAGO 2D AND N. U. 3D IN TRACK

Brooks Scores 20 Points for Maroons.

Madison, Wis., May 13.—[Special.]—The University of Wisconsin defeated Northwestern and the University of Chicago in a triangular track and field meet at Camp Randall today. The score was Wisconsin, 75½; Chicago, 54½, and Northwestern, 45.

John Brooks, Chicago's colored star, piled up 20 points on firsts in the broad jump, 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, and 220 yard low hurdles. Brooks won all four events without being closely pressed.

Wisconsin won six firsts, including the relay and a tie for first with Chicago in the shot put. Brooks' four firsts and Ovson's tie for first in the shot put produced nearly half of the Maroons' points.

Northwestern won the high jump, javelin, 880 yard run, and the mile.

MONOPIECE STEEL BODY TEST IN DETROIT

New "MIRACLE CAR" Wins Nation ...as sensational "Show-Down" Plan shoots Dodge sales skyward

All over town the news is spreading like wildfire. A new way of buying automobiles has been introduced—a plan that takes all the gamble out of car buying!

Pick your next car on a Show-Down basis. Be the judge yourself. Try to make any competitor's car do what the big new Dodge Six does so easily.

Test it on the open road. Look at its long 115-inch wheelbase. See its flashing speed. Its instant acceleration. In town, notice how easily it weaves in and out of traffic. How quickly it comes to a non-skid stop in emergencies. Score the Dodge against any competing car in engineering features, too. You'll be amazed at the multitude of refinements in construction that make the big new Dodge Six the Wonder Car of 1933—the miracle value everyone is talking about.

"I could hardly believe my eyes! The Dodge Show-Down won me in just twenty minutes!" says Carl P. Zellner.

Compare, also, the 7 points where Dodge definitely saves you money. From $50 to $100 extra savings on upkeep from these seven big advantages alone!

End Repair Bills—Buy Now!

Your present car will probably make the full down payment on a new Dodge. And like other motorists, you too may get a thrill and discover that the low monthly payments on the big new Dodge Six actually cost you less than the upkeep and repairs on your old car!

Go to your Dodge dealer for details of the Show-Down Plan and a copy of the Show-Down score card. This new aid in judging motor car values is free. See the dashing beauty of America's most distinguished-looking low-priced car... Then congratulate yourself on how little it costs to own and run.

MICHIGAN WINS FROM ILLINOIS IN TRACK, 75-60

Howell Defeats Woolsey in Mile Run.

Champaign, Ill., May 13.—[Special.]—Michigan defeated Illinois in a dual track meet todal, 75 to 60. Willis Ward led the Wolverines with firsts in the broad jump and 100 yard dash, a tie for first in the high jump and third place in the high hurdles.

Bill Howell of Michigan provided a surprise by his defeat of Dean Woolsey, Big Ten indoor champion, in the mile. Howell beat Woolsey in a close finish in 4:18.3 the fastest mile ever run on Memorial stadium track.

Barry Ornstein of Illinois, who tied for first in the high jump reported for track only a week ago.

MARQUETTE WINS MEET

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 13.—[Special.]—Marquette university defeated the Western State Teachers college track team today in a dual meet, 76 1-3 to 54 2-3. Ralph Metcalfs, Marquette sprinter, won both the 100 and the 220 yard dashes. In the 100 yard dash the Marquette star turned in a mark of :09.4 to tie the recent record set by Frank Wykoff, and which has not yet been accepted. It is doubtful, however, if the mark set by Metcalfs will be allowed because of a high wind down the track.

During the course of the meet eight field records were broken. Marquette won nine firsts and tied for a tenth, while Western State won five and tied for one.

MICHIGAN GOLF TEAM CONQUERS OHIO, 17½ TO ½

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 13.—[Special.]—Michigan's golfers overwhelmed Ohio State, 17½ to ½, here today. The Wolverines piled up a score of 5½ to ½ in the foursomes this morning and won, 12 to 0, in the individual matches this afternoon. Eddie Dayton, with a 75 on each round, and Johnny Fischer, national intercollegiate champion, with a 78 this morning and a 74 this afternoon, led the Wolverines.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By Westbrook Pegler

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13.—Jack Sharkey has had a long time to recover from the astonishment of that moment last summer when he stood in Max Schmeling's corner with his right arm hung over the German fighter's shoulder, chatting amiably with the man who had just given him a severe beating, and heard the incredible announcement of Joe Humphreys that he had won the heavyweight championship of the world. There was small honor in the title at best, for the fight had been no great credit even to Schmeling, who had had the better of it, and anyway the heavyweight championship had been cheapened by the New York prize fight commission. The commissioners had used it as a political reward for political favors anticipated and since that time received in full by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

JACK SHARKEY.

At any rate, Sharkey seemed amazed by the news that he was champion, and if he wasn't amazed he should have been. As he stood there, talking shop with Schmeling a few seconds after the final bell, his right eye was swollen shut and that side of his face was purpling. His lips were frayed, his body was red from punishment, and he was, in the politest language consistent with the facts, licked.

Finds He Has Nothing to Talk About.

Always before that evening Sharkey had been a talky man with much to say on any matter, but partial to himself and his prowess as a subject. He was Topic A to him.

But, starting then, he became, so far as the public was concerned, a hermit and a miser as to his conversation. He retired to his family circle in Boston and for his defense against all doubt and scoffing set up an impenetrable silence. It was as if he realized that he had been licked and could not trust himself to discuss the weird calculations by which the referee and one of the judges decided that he had won.

The customers are likely to have formed an impression that Sharkey is not only an inferior prize fighter but a pretty punk sort personally. If so, they are misled by his professional record, for the worst that can be said against him is that he has been inclined to console himself and fail in appreciation of the bounteous luck which has attended him ever since he came up to the major leagues to fight. When Sharkey lost fights or fouled his opponents or permitted common journeymen to hold him close and soil his prestige, that was always Sharkey's fault, but he took to blaming fate. He knew he should have done better and the customers thought so, but there were the results.

And yet he was always paid in full for his bad fights, and the customers' stubborn faith in their own overestimate of this Sharkey created a constant demand for more of his fights. They wanted to see him in a great fight some time to justify their original error. I saw most of his fights, including all the important bouts, and never saw him great except for two rounds against Dempsey. But normalcy then possessed him and he was counted out when Gene Tunney and Dempsey both thought he could have come up. They said they would have come up, and I think they would have.

As a Failure He's a Big Success.

So, though he holds the championship, he is only a successful failure at best, as he should know. However, he has made a fortune and must have some of it left, although he has lived luxuriously. He has a very sensitive pride, so it probably hurts him not to have come to the title with full honors, but he will find happiness in his ability to live well and maintain his family in a state which he knew only by vague hearsay when he was a boy in Binghamton, N. Y.

He is not intellectual in the current meaning of the world, but he is highly intelligent, a common trait of heavyweight champions since the war, and if he has a flair for coarse, rowdy humor in prize fight company, he does not entirely reveal himself in that, for he is tenderly devoted to his family, and in all his years in the fight business he has begrudged every hour that he had to spend apart from his wife and children, training, ballyhooing and fighting.

If personal decency were a box office attraction many a poverty stricken citizen might step to independence overnight. So I do not set forth that Sharkey's private conduct adds anything to his fitness for the office of heavyweight champion, in which it seems to me that he rattles around. But I don't see how it can be held against him, and in any summary of what he is and how he came to be, the fact of his private virtue ought to be mentioned for just what it is worth I never saw much else to admire in him.

Here's How You Can Win Those Fish Arguments

BY BOB BECKER.

With the fishing seasons getting under way, the fisherman has all kinds of problems to solve, from how to choose the right lure at the right time to keeping fish without ice and getting them home in good shape. The muskellunge soon will be another reason for anglers going into conference on problems of the "industry." The Wisconsin muskie season will open May 25.

Anglers who want a small handbook on fish and fishing which gives the answers to many common problems which are encountered in the sport and also tells how to concoct mosquito dopes for use in fishing trips, how to figure the shrinkage of fish after they have been caught and kept out of the water for a long time and how to identify related species of game fish, will find THE TRIBUNE'S "Fisherman's Guide" a useful companion. The guide contains 72 pages, is illustrated, and is distributed through THE TRIBUNE Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago. The price is 19 cents by mail.

This pocket handbook will be especially valuable to the bait casters who fish a great deal for muskellunge and pickerel or northern pike. These two species of fish have so many names that it is difficult to tell just what a guide or another fisherman is talking about when he speaks of jack fish, pickerel, northern pike, plain muskie or tiger muskie.

The Fisherman's Guide has many tips on this question of names for fish and also tells how to distinguish the difference between our northern muskie and the St. Lawrence variety.

That controversial question of when a pickerel is a northern pike also is covered in the handbook. Seventeen full page plates of game fish are in the book to make it easy for the reader to identify easily and quickly all of our common game fish.

Play 3 Games in Peel Soccer Series Today

Three games will be played in the third round for the Peel challenge cup this afternoon. Sparta, Chicago professional champions, will meet the Ravenswood Scots at Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue, and the Swedish-Americans will play Olympia at De Paul stadium, Sheffield and Webster avenues.

In the third cup game, at 4600 Fullerton avenue, the Norwegians will play the winner of a contest between the Judean Leaders and Wanderers.

Only one National Professional Soccer league game is scheduled. The Maccabee All-Stars will play the Bricklayers at Kuppenheimer stadium, 18th street and Keeler avenue. The game will start at 3 o'clock.

Five games will be played in the first division of the International league. In the most important contest the Chicago Sports will meet the Schwaben A. C. at Kedzie and Elston.

In the Wake of the News

UNIT COST EDUCATION.

ROLLINS COLLEGE, located at Winter Park, Fla., which draws many students from middle western and eastern states, has just announced adoption of the unit cost plan of education, beginning this fall.

This plan involves an increase in the charges for room, board, and tuition of more than $400 per year, with registration limited to 500 students. What effect this will have upon attendance at a time when the country still has not recovered from its four year depression will be interesting to watch. Most colleges and universities have suffered decreased enrollment even where charges have remained stationary or been reduced. General tendency has been toward making the cost lower, if possible.

Rollins, of which Dr. Hamilton Holt, onetime editor of Outlook, is president, prides itself on progressiveness. It feels it is pioneering in a move widely discussed among endowed colleges, generally suffering from reduced incomes. For that reason The Wake presents outline of several of its arguments.

Before proceeding, however, it may be stated Rollins qualifies its announcement by stating the plan does not apply to those students of "approved standing now at Rollins who can affirmatively show that they will have to leave college if they are required to meet the increase. It is proposed to allow these to continue at the rate they are paying this year."

Here are some of the pertinent statements:

> It divides the annual operating expenses by the estimated student enrollment, not to exceed 500, on an adequate but not extravagant financial basis.
> It makes available incomes of present endowment, approximately $60,000, for reducing tuition to worthy and desirable students not able to pay the $1,350 fee.

Privately supported American colleges originally were "charitable" institutions. It was assumed that students would go into the ministry, teaching, or public service professions. Today college is more often a preparation for business and social life.

Therefore well-to-do students should pay for the benefits received, and income from endowment should go to those unable to pay the full amount. In other words, a rich man's son should pay more for his education than a poor man's son.

Intending matriculants, handicaped by finances, will be considered as individual cases.

In a survey of the United States bureau of education published several years ago it was found at that time that a little less than one-half of current expenses of endowed colleges and universities came from students: one-quarter from interest on endowment, and another quarter from gifts and other sources. In other words, students paid less than one-half of the cost of educating them.

In state universities, supported by public taxes, the percentage of cost borne by the student was much smaller.

Under the Rollins scheme there will be no discrimination between those who pay the full tuition and those who receive aid. That apparently means that students receiving benefit of reduced fees will not make any direct return in services, but will have their full time for their studies and college activities.

A prominent educator to whom we outlined the scheme commented: "Unless this college has a great many scholarships paying liberal amounts it simply will become a rich man's college. Cost of $1,350 a year for board, room, and tuition is too high for 90 per cents of present day college students."

In its announcement Rollins says: "Inauguration of the unit cost plan will not make Rollins a rich man's college. Even with increased tuition, graduation costs from Rollins will not be in excess of that of many standard colleges throughout the country. With a minimum of $60,000 a year available for scholarships and loans, a sum that will certainly increase through new endowment gifts from time to time, it is obvious that, proportionately to our numbers, we shall be able to help more worthy students through college than most of the older and richer institutions operating under the old plan, where endowment is distributed to every one, rich and poor alike."

CHICAGOANS WIN $5,546 IN A. B. C.; PAY $5,580 FEES

Prize List Shows Bowlers Made Good Record.

BY MORT.

Although Chicago bowlers did not fare so well in the recent American Bowling congress tournament at Columbus as in past tournaments, they fell only a few dollars short of winning back their entry money.

A checkup of the final figures shows that Chicago paid $5,580 in the five man, doubles, and singles events, and cashed $5,546.45 in the prize division.

While Chicagoans failed to win any of the championships, a tabulation of their winnings shows that local bowlers were not "lost" on the new tournament alleys.

Chicago Holds Most Titles.

Intimation that Chicago bowlers have not the ability to produce big scores on neutral alleys can be considered unfair. A checkup of A. B. C. records discloses that Chicago is far out in front. Chicago bowlers have won no less than 15 team titles, 10 doubles championships, and 9 individual and all events crowns during the 33 tournaments staged by the National association.

It is a fact that some of Chicago's best teams, including star groups from the Classic and Randolph leagues, fell below their average at Columbus, but that's just an annual A. B. C. custom. The new alleys, pins, etc., have a tendency each year to slow up scores, and seldom do teams roll their league average in A. B. C. competition. That is the big reason for the huge entry each year. The A. B. C. is a great evener and places bowlers on an equal basis. The short three game route gives every one a chance, and any one is liable to get "hot."

Alleys Conform to A. B. C. Rules.

It is true that scores rolled in the Classic league this year have been especially high, but the new league, comprising, with a few exceptions, the best bowlers in Chicago, rolls its scheduled games on one pair of alleys at each of the ten houses which make up the circuit. Rolling repeatedly on the same pair of drives naturally increases scores, but the alleys conform to A. B. C. regulations and all of them have been sanctioned by the congress.

Before high score medals are awarded, it is the duty of the Chicago Bowling association secretary to check up on the alleys on which the scores were rolled and this has been done in every instance. The Classic league has made four 300 scores and one world's team record, 3,613. Pins used in the Classic league were found to weigh not less than 3 pounds 4 ounces and in some instances 3 pounds 6 ounces.

The alleys installed at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium for the match series were brought here from the A. B. C. at Columbus. Results show that the De Barry Insurance team and the Lorenz Knitters of the Classic league rolled totals of 2,985 and 3,075, respectively, and the Mineralites, Randolph league champions, 3,035. A total of 3,021 won the A. B. C. team title for the Flaig Opticians of Covington, Ky.

Chicago match eliminations will be staged under a different system next season. Too many of Chicago's best bowlers were eliminated in the opening rounds of play this year, and the Greater Chicago Bowling Alley association has decided on a longer route. Adolph Carlson, Eddie Krems, Frankie Kartheiser, and practically all of Chicago's best known match stars were eliminated in the short schedule which governed the first match eliminations. Joe Miller, the Buffalo title holder, will have to face stiffer competition next year when champions from all leading midwest cities produce a finalist over a long route.

A 3,122 figure, registered early in the play by the Gouwens Auto Parts lineup of Roseland, topped the scores of the 478 other teams in the Illinois Bowling association and captured the 36th annual state title. The meet was concluded Thursday night at the Bensinger Randolph Street Recreation.

The powerful Bruck five, champions of the Woodlawn Major league, missed the team crown by five pins Wednesday night with a 3,117 total. The leaders of the Classic league, the Lorenz Knitters, also gave the Gouwens a close call by scoring 3,106. The Lorenz quintet won the state championship last year as the Boyle Valves with a 3,202 score.

In the doubles division the Carney-Sampayo combination won with a 1,391 performance. Jack Bishop nosed out Wally Freitag for the singles honors by a single pin, totaling 739. The all events title went to Milo Wiesner, who collected 2,044 for the nine games.

Questions and Answers.

Have the Alberti Jewelers ladies' team won more than one national championship?

The Chicago team won the 1933 championship last month at Peoria with a record score of 2,867. The team also finished first at Detroit and New York. It finished second at Louisville and third at Buffalo in other tournaments.

BENEFIT BOXING PROGRAM COSTS VETERANS $300

After a checkup yesterday by Howard Roberts, state commander of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, under whose auspices the bouts between Missouri valley's best amateur boxers and a team of Chicagoans were held at the Stadium Friday, it was announced that the show lost $300. A crowd of 6,976 paid about $4,000 to see Chicago win, 7 to 1.

The two major expense items were $2,500 to rent the Stadium and $600 traveling and hotel costs of the valley team, which consisted of nine boxers, one being an alternate, and a coach, a manager, two members of the Missouri Valley Association of the A. A. U., and a Kansas City newspaperman. The visitors left for home yesterday.

Admission prices were 25, 50 and 75 cents. The 25 and 50 cents tickets were most popular. The usual 20 per cent tax, 10 for the state treasury and the same for the federal government, was waived.

MOURNERS AT GOLF BALL GRAVEYARD

MEDINAH RANKS IN FIRST TEN OF U. S. GOLF CLUBS

(This is the second of a series of historical sketches on the Chicago district golf clubs which will be the scene of important tournaments during the 1933 season.)

Starting in 1925 as one of the youngest golfing organizations in the Chicago district, the Medinah Country club has progressed to a point where it may be ranked among the first ten in the entire country on all counts—three 18 hole courses, one of the most unique clubhouse and grounds arrangements in golf, and one of the world's leading professionals in Tommy Armour, who joined the club this year.

With such a background established over so short a number of years it is easy to understand why Medinah should be one of the first clubs to be recognized when the schedule makers are casting about for the battlegrounds of big tournaments. This year the club will have the honor of starting off Chicago's Century of Progress program with the district qualifying round for the national open tournament, to be decided over the No. 1 and No. 2 courses tomorrow, when 204 amateurs and professionals will fight for the 27 qualifying berths allotted to Chicago.

Don't Forget Camel Trail.

In addition to this the club will be the scene of the Illinois state amateur and professional championships June 19 and 24. And no Medinah season would be complete without the Camel Trail, which dwarfs all other invitational tournaments in this vicinity with an annual entry list of more than 1,000 players from the entire district. Camel Trail this year will be held on Aug. 16.

Medinah Country club had its inception in 1923, when a number of Shriners, members of Medinah temple, conceived the idea of a country club composed of their friends among the Shrine organization. The original plan called for two 18 hole courses, but the membership campaign went over in such a big way during 1923 after work had progressed on the huge clubhouse and the No. 1 and No. 2 courses that the present No. 3 course, rated as one of the most difficult layouts in the central states, was started in 1925.

Play Starts in 1925.

The cornerstone of the clubhouse was laid in 1924 by the uniformed bodies of Medinah temple, and play started on the No. 1 and No. 2 courses in 1925. More than 800 of the original members are still active in the club, including the following past presidents: H. R. Lundblad, Morris C. Jepsen, John H. Sasser, O. E. Schmidt, J. Oliver Johnson, and Sydney H. Sturdy. Edward H. Forke is president of the club this year; James O. Kelso, vice president; Perry B. Brelin, secretary, and George J. Lawton, treasurer. Russell Miller has the busy task of managing the club, and Matt Bezek, formerly of Beverly, is the greenskeeper.

In Tom Armour Medinah has a stylist and competitor who needs no introduction, and although he did not arrive at the club until little more than a month ago, he has made a tremendous personal hit with the entire membership.

ILLINOIS BEATEN BY NOTRE DAME IN GOLF MATCH

Notre Dame, Ind., May 13.—[Special.]—Notre Dame's undefeated golf team won its fifth consecutive victory here today, defeating Illinois, 13½ to 4 1-12. Johnny Banks, La Grange, Ill., led Notre Dame with a 76 in the morning doubles and a 74 in the singles matches during the afternoon.

Capt. John Montedonico of Notre Dame was second low with a 78-75-153. Bob Baker shot the best score of the day for the Illini with a 76 total for his afternoon round, in which he won three points from Fehling of Notre Dame. Baker had a 78 in the morning for a 154 total. His teammate, Lyle Hoffman, equalled that score with a pair of 77s.

The Irish held a long lead at noon, having taken all available points in both the best ball doubles matches. The summary:

DOUBLES—Fehling and Veeneman [Ind.] beat Baker and O'Neil [I.] 3-0. Banks and Montedonico [N. D.] beat Hoffman and Prey [I.], 3-0.

SINGLES—Baker, [I] beat Fehling, [N. D.] 3-0. Banks, [N. D.] beat Hoffman, [I.] 3-0. Montedonico, [N. D.] beat Grunewald, [I.] 3-0. Cole, [N. D.] tied Smock, [I.] 1½-1½.

204 to Play Tomorrow for Places in National Open Golf

The Chicago district qualifying rounds for the national open golf championship will be played tomorrow at the Medinah Country club with a field of 204, the largest of any district in the United States, battling for the 27 qualifying places allotted to the district. Eighteen holes will be played on the No. 1 course and eighteen on the No. 2 layout.

The No. 1 and No. 2 courses will be open today, provided weather is favorable, to all entrants who want to play a practice round. The No. 3 course was to have been used in the qualifying instead of No. 2, but it was decided to make the shift because the heavy round of play tomorrow might injure the young No. 3 layout.

Those players who will play the morning round on No. 1 course and the afternoon round on No. 2, together with their pairings and starting times, follow:

8 and 12:30—Wilfred Wherle, Racine, Wis.; Ollie Kainen, Chicago, and H. A. Barry, Chicago.

8:05 and 12:35—Jack Ledwon, Michigan City, Ind.; G. A. Swenson, Urbana, Ill., and Kenneth K. Spear Jr., Chicago.

8:10 and 12:40—Gene Isaacson, Ottumwa, Ia.; Lloyd Voorhees, Chicago, and T. D. Harvey, Evanston, Ill.

8:15 and 12:45—Eddie Joyce, Chicago; Johnny Connell, Chicago, and Sam Ruskin, Nakoma, Wis.

8:20 and 12:50—Howard R. Davis, Norwood Park, Ill.; Ralph W. Johnson, Urbana, Ill., and G. W. Vollmann, Chicago.

8:25 and 12:55—Edwin O. Schildberg, Glen View, Ill.; William Kelly, Mundelein, Ill., and Gus Tamburrino, Chicago.

8:30 and 1—Sam Gayer, Chicago; George Weager, Chicago, and Jack Kemsler, Chicago.

8:35 and 1:05—Frank S. Adamo, Chicago; Bud Matteson, Chicago, and Harvey Olson, Chicago.

8:40 and 1:10—Vigo Sundt, Nakoma, Wis.; Matt Matteson, Chicago, and Harry De May, Elmwood Park, Ill.

8:45 and 1:15—Henry J. Kaiser, Racine, Wis.; James Weager, Chicago, and Eddie Hisert, Chicago.

8:50 and 1:20—Ralph Guldhal, St. Louis, Mo.; Jack Westland, Winnetka, Ill., and John Van Nortwick Jr., Wheaton, Ill.

8:55 and 1:25—J. A. Drucker, Wheaton, Ill.; Dick Olson, Joliet, Ill., and William J. Saunders, Niles, Ill.

9 and 1:30—Len Gallett, Waukesha, Wis.; Al Megeff, Chicago, and Don Koder, Chicago.

9:05 and 1:35—Les Whipple, Elgin, Ill.; Fred C. Lahn, Chicago, and Finley W. Brown, Chicago.

9:10 and 1:40—Stanley Pankman, Highland Park, Ill.; Milo Seiglar, Chicago, and Frank Flegel, Chicago.

9:15 and 1:45—Abe G. Espinosa, Lemont, Ill.; Sonny Rouse, Chicago, and Wallie Reich, Joliet, Ill.

9:20 and 1:50—P. J. Wagner, Prairie View, Ill.; Frank Moore, Duquoin, Ill., and Joe Flegel, Berwyn, Ill.

9:25 and 1:55—Tom Robbins, Park Ridge, Ill.; Eddie Loos, Glencoe, Ill., and James McGonagill, Medinah, Ill.

9:30 and 2—William V. Lain, Chicago; Gunnar Nelson, Rockford, Ill., and Don Hamilton, Chicago.

9:40 and 2:10—Eddie Hruz, Waterford, Wis.; Jimmy Smith, Delavan, Wis., and Martin O. Johnson, Chicago.

9:45 and 2:15—Jimmy Faltus, Dyer, Ind.; Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., and Ira L. Couch, Wheaton, Ill.

9:50 and 2:20—Henry Dettlaff, Oshkosh, Wis.; Wilfred Reid, Chicago, and Tom Cooley, Chicago.

9:55 and 2:25—John H. Bird, Menominee Falls, Wis.; Elmer F. Freed, Chicago, and Rex Bigelow, Jackson, Mich.

10 and 2:30—Jim Noonan, Chicago; Phil Greenwald, Fond du Lac, Wis., and Jules Henderson, Chicago.

10:05 and 2:35—Johnny Jones, Chicago; Johnny Gibson, Forest Park, Ill., and Carl J. Engstrom, Michigan City, Ind.

10:10 and 2:40—Arthur R. Martin, Chicago; A. L. Miller, Highland Park, Ill., and Joe Nickols, Janesville, Wis.

10:15 and 2:45—David Cairns, Addison, Ill.; Arthur Toepke, Addison, Ill., and W. H. Pollock, Oak Park.

10:20 and 2:50—Tom Saielli, Chicago; Sam Bernardi, Deerfield, Ill., and Al Huske, Elgin, Ill.

10:25 and 2:55—Victor Soitz, Orland Park, Ill.; Donald Gardner, Flossmoor, Ill., and Charles A. Grosscurth, Chicago.

10:30 and 3—Dave Tosh, Winnetka, Ill.; Alan Baker, La Grange, Ill., and Robert Baldwin, Homewood, Ill.

10:35 and 3:05—R. W. Treacy, West Allis, Wis.; Johnny Lindstrom, River Grove, Ill., and Winfield S. Day Jr., Elmhurst, Ill.

10:40 and 3:10—Jack Hutchison Jr., Golf, Ill.; Frank Brady, Flossmoor, Ill., and Joe Paletti, Wilmette, Ill.

10:45 and 3:15—Harold R. Fossum, Green Lake, Wis.; John C. Watson, South Bend, Ind., and John Graw, Glencoe, Ill.

The golfers who will play the No. 2 course on the morning round and the No. 1 course in the afternoon, with their pairings and starting times, follow:

8 and 12:30—Peter H. Raap, Medinah, Ill.; Ben Stevenson, Olympia Fields, Ill., and Bill Parker, Chicago.

8:05 and 12:35—Oliver C. Schmidt, Medinah, Ill.; Desault B. Kirk, Chicago, and William Hartshorn, Glencoe, Ill.

8:10 and 12:40—Bob McLaren, Medinah, Ill.; George Arnold, Prairie View, Ill., and John Morrell, Chicago.

8:15 and 12:45—Don McKenna, Nakoma, Wis.; George K. Vitense, Appleton, Wis., and John Woytz, Chicago.

8:20 and 12:50—John Reuter Jr., Mount Prospect, Ill.; Eddie Gayer, Bensenville, Ill., and Neil Christian, Chicago.

George Ade's Golf Club Opens with Tourney Today

Brook, Ind., May 13.—[Special.]—The Hazelden Country club, of which George Ade, noted humorist, is president, will open tomorrow with a tournament for members. The club is located two miles east of Brook, in state route 16, about 90 miles from Chicago. Mr. Ade's home, Hazelden, is near by.

The Hazelden Country club has been in existence for twenty years. It has a nine hole golf course, where total yardage is 3,063. Hazelden is not a public course, but the club is glad to welcome visiting golfers who will make proper use of the privileges extended them. Each visitor is given the use of a locker, shower, and the swimming pool on the club grounds. Greens fee is $1.

The club is a community enterprise, with a membership of 125. It is not operated for profit.

Hazelden annually has many visitors from Chicago, who reach the course by going south in Indiana route 41, through the town of Morocco to the intersection of routes 41 and 16. Swing east on 16 through Brook to the club grounds.

MOTORS · TRAFFIC · HIGHWAYS

Find Scores of Auto Trucks Violating Illinois Road Laws

BY HAL FOUST.

A survey of truck traffic one night last week on Ill. 4 and U. S. 66, the main highway between Chicago, Springfield, and St. Louis, disclosed that motor freight carriers are running improperly lighted, overloaded, ill driven, and with length and width dimensions that use every inch allowed by statute.

On the night of the survey Acting Chief Taylor of the state highway police assigned two squads of his men to operate scales at Wilmington, Ill., and at Chenoa, Ill. Acting Sergeant W. J. Spaulding rode with this reporter. Seventeen arrests were made and about fifty or sixty drivers were required to fix their lights before they could proceed. Others escaped with reprimands.

Truck with One Headlight.

Just south of Joliet, shortly after 9 o'clock, Spaulding stopped a truck of the tractor and semi-trailer type owned by Morrow Brothers of Chicago. One headlight was out. The carrier lacked the three rear red and the three front green lights and the reflectors on the sides required by law. The van was pulled into the nearest filling station to repair the headlight and the driver was instructed to tell his employers of the new equipment that must be installed.

The truck was thirty-five feet long. This is the maximum permitted under the amendment to the motor vehicle code which became effective on Jan. 1. The code permits forty feet for a truck and trailer. Crawling along the highway, some of these combinations appear as long as freight trains. Prior to Jan. 1 the maximum for truck and trailer was sixty-five feet.

The vehicle was eight feet wide. This is the legal limit. Most of the rural slabs outside the metropolitan area are eighteen feet wide, although there are a few old slabs that are narrower. On the eighteen foot pavement the eight foot width leaves little room for passing unless the truck driver keeps well to the outer edge.

Slow Moving Barrier.

The three rear red lights missing from the Morrow Brothers truck are intended to warn passenger car drivers approaching from the rear that there is, in effect, a slowly moving barrier ahead. The passenger car doing sixty miles an hour overtakes the truck doing thirty miles or less an hour at the same rates as a stationary barrier would be approached at thirty miles an hour. However, it takes three times as much braking distance to pull down an automobile from sixty to thirty miles an hour as it does to come to a stop from thirty miles an hour.

The front green lights, also missing from the Morrow Brothers truck, are likewise designed to warn motorists that a slow and wide vehicle is approaching. The side reflectors, which some day will be required of railroad freight trains, are to guard against cross-traffic collisions. They also enable a passing motorist in dodging the outer edge of the highway box cars.

Survey Car Goes South.

While Spaulding was talking with the driver of this truck a farmer with a load of pigs for the Chicago market approached from the south. The vehicle was owned by William Blistein of Dwight, Ill. He did not carry the red rear lights and one of his three front greens was not burning. He likewise was directed into the filling station.

The survey car continued south. Just north of Elwood a St. Louis Freight Forwarding company truck was trailing within fifty feet behind another freight carrier. The law requires them to travel 500 feet apart, so that a passenger car has a chance to pass one of them at a time. The driver was reprimanded.

In Wilmington a squad of state highway police under Patrolman T. H. Wise were putting a string of trucks over a pair of portable scales that weigh one axle at a time. One axle of a trailer belonging to the Motor Dispatch company of St. Louis registered 18,500 pounds. The maximum permitted by Illinois law is 16,000 pounds.

Over Maximum Weight.

Prof. C. C. Wiley of the University of Illinois school of engineering, testifying recently before the senate at Springfield, declared that overloaded trucks were responsible, with weather influences, for the destruction of the state's slabs. He was a witness in behalf of the Illinois Highway Users' conference, defending the present legal load limitations against proposals to reduce the maximum loads.

The other axle of the Motor Dispatch company's trailer weighed 16,750 pounds, 750 pounds over the legal maximum. The total weight of the trailer was 35,250 pounds. The legal gross load for a trailer is 32,000 pounds.

The truck in front of the trailer scaled 20,700 pounds. It was loaded with cast iron cylinders while the trailer carried zinc pigs. Truck and trailer totaled 55,950 pounds, nearly twenty-eight tons. The driver said the load was en route from Chicago to St. Louis, traveling on a Missouri license, battering Illinois pavements.

Drivers Arrested.

Policeman Wise ordered the truck off the highway, to remain there until the owners sent another machine to carry part of the load. The driver was held for trial.

A King Transfer line truck of Quincy, Ill., carrying general freight from Chicago to Quincy, was arrested for having 17,000 pounds on its rear axle. Reynold Hoffman of St. Louis, with Missouri license 37,288, was given a ticket for a gross load of 45,000 pounds, two and a half tons over the legal maximum.

Arthur Harris of Springfield, Ill., had a "D" license that provided a maximum gross load of 12,00 pounds, but his truck of beer registered 13,000 pounds on the rear axle alone, so he got a court summons. Rudolph Pokorny, 2800 Hamlin avenue, with a load of furniture, carried a "B" license on his truck, a license for a maximum of 8,000 pounds, and he got a ticket for carrying 8,962 pounds. Joe Sinagra, 1210 Burling street, with another "B" license, was given a summons for carrying 10,000 pounds. Sinagra was also without either the rear red group lights or the front green lights.

These letter classifications of truck licenses require a graduate scale of fees depending upon the maximum load permitted. An overload on one of the smaller licenses is cheating the state road fund and, almost invariably, is also overloading the capacity of the machine and straining the brakes and the steering gears and other mechanical parts beyond the point of safety.

While the trucks were being weighed, their lengths, widths and lights were also checked. Almost all the large carriers were exactly the legal limits in length and width although a few were a fraction of a foot short.

A carrier of the Illinois-Missouri Truck company of St. Louis was without front green lights. Ben Gragert, a farmer of Odell, Ill., was without a tail light. Lewis Yates, a farmer of New Berlin, Ill., with two loads of live stock for the Chicago market, on one machine had no tail light, no front green group and no rear red group, and on the other machine had but one headlight, no tail light and neither the red nor green group lights. Lyle Fuller, a farmer with a load of cattle from near Bloomington, lacked two green and two red lights.

The national safety council has found that improper lights with the trend toward higher speed and more night driving, is causing an ever increasing number of accidents.

Over Center Line.

Driving southwest from Wilmington, Policeman Spaulding and the reporter overtook a truck with its left wheels on the left side of the center line. In following this machine for two miles, it was noted that the driver didn't approach the other edge except when passing other trucks. He stayed close to the center when passing passenger cars. Fourteen times, in the two miles, the left wheels crossed the center line.

Spaulding swung his flivver to the left of the road, sounded his siren and pulled the truck to the side of the road. It was then discovered that it was Joe Sinagra, who had been arrested in Wilmington for a ton overload.

"Why crowd these passenger cars?" asked the policeman.

"I'm afraid to get over farther, afraid I'll get into the mud," Sinagra answered.

"You get over when you're passing another truck," Spaulding retorted.

"So does every one in passing a truck," the driver responded, "but the passenger cars don't need as much room."

"You've got one arrest ticket tonight and you'll get another if you can't stay on your own side of the road. What's the matter with you? You haven't been drinking, but are you getting sleepy?"

"I pull over and take a nap if I find I can't get along better," Sinagra promised.

More Arrests for Overloads.

Approaching Chenoa, the clouds that had covered a full moon began to flash lightning and to drop rain. It was about 1 a. m. when the survey car arrived at this village 100 miles south of Chicago. A squad of police was weighing trucks and there were a half dozen machines that had been pulled into a filling station yard to reduce their loads before they could proceed with arrest slips for the drivers.

Patrolman J. F. Condon said they had weighed forty-two trucks in five and a half hours, making eleven arrests for overloads. These were the reported violations:

French Brothers, Chicago, 16,250 pound gross load on 16,000 pound maximum license.

J. D. Stopp, hog farmer of Good Hope, Ill., 26,800 pounds on 24,000 pound license.

Trans-American, Inc., Chicago, 16,750 pound axle load.

Fred Torrence, hog farmer of Media, Ill., 15,800 pounds on 12,000 pound license.

More Violations.

The rain had developed into a downpour. The reporter and Spaulding headed back toward Chicago, passing several improperly and inadequately lighted trucks and several that were hugging the center line, leaving little room for passing. Near Joliet, at 3:40 a. m., a farm truck northbound with a load of hogs, was astride the center line part of the time. His license was D-4468, issued to W. P. Staubus of McLean county. But it was too wet for any more disciplining of truck traffic.

"The state highway police," said Patrolman Spaulding, "is just getting reorganized, and you'll see some improved conditions on our highways within a short itme."

NEWS AND VIEWS

Automobile sales are continuing their second month of ascent, influenced by an apparent improvement of general economic conditions, by the prospects of higher prices due to inflation, and by the arrival of the touring season. The present schedules of the motor car factories indicate that May production will exceed 200,000 units as compared with 191,000 for the same month last year. The output for April of this year was approximately 175,000 units, 20,000 more than in April of 1932.

The automobile industry is one of the larger exhibitors at the World's Fair, which will open a week from next Saturday. Displays are more elaborate than any prepared for the annual National Automobile shows. An assembly line will be operated in the General Motors building, the Chrysler corporation has a race track for test driving, and other companies are exhibiting instruments and machines for research and manufacture and various devices for demonstrating the working parts of the modern automobile.

Two shiploads of new Plymouths, 541 automobiles, valued at approximately $400,000, arrived at Navy pier last week from Detroit for 117 dealers in the Chicago territory. The driveway was managed by Fred Johnson, president of the Chrysler Illinois company.

TRIBUNE'S 1933 CHICAGOLAND MAP IS READY

Goes on Sale Tomorrow; Price Is 25 Cents.

THE TRIBUNE'S 1933 Chicagoland road map, the only detailed motoring guide of its type, will be placed on sale tomorrow morning at the newspaper's public service offices at 1 South Dearborn street and in the lobby of The Tribune Tower. The counter price, covering but part of the cost of production, is 25 cents; mail, 30 cents.

The map gives an accurate picture of the metropolitan area, identifying places of interest and indicating how to get there. The territory covered extends north beyond Milwaukee, west to include Walworth, Wis., and Harvard, Mareno and Plano, Ill., south beyond Joliet, Chicago Heights, Ill., and Valparaiso and Walkerton, Ind., east to Elkhart, Ind., and north on the east coast of Lake Michigan to South Haven, Mich.

Inserted is a large scale map of Chicago's lake front from Diversey parkway to Oakwood boulevard, including the World's Fair grounds, the loop, and Lincoln park. Thirty-eight of the more important buildings of A Century of Progress are identified. The main automobile approaches to the fair are marked.

Twenty-eight points of interest in the business district are indicated as well as the city's ten down town railroad stations. The directory of Lincoln park lists thirty-four buildings, monuments, and exhibits.

The 677 cities and villages of Chicagoland are listed alphabetically with their last federal census, with their distances from the loop and with a finder for locating them on the map. The metropolitan area's 320 small lakes, its thirty-nine airports, and forty-six forest preserves are likewise listed in a directory printed on the map. Three hundred three golf and country clubs are easily located on the map. Points of historical interest are indicated.

The map is in pleasing and informative colors. The four lane rural roads, constructed after year's of editorial campaigning by THE TRIBUNE, are shown in bold red. Golf courses and forest preserves are in green. Secondary highways and byways are in black, all on an old ivory background.

In other years, motorists have found that THE TRIBUNE'S road map was an invaluable guide for a maximum enjoyment and efficiency of an automobile in the metropolitan area. The 1933 edition meets the public's expectations.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

AUTOMOBILE TAXES.

Chicago, April 19.—Taxes! What does that word mean to motorists? If you drive a car do you realize that you are paying, and paying, and paying? From the moment you make your first payment to the last mile your car moves you pay.

First one tax and then another and another was levied on the motoring public without one iota of complaint until you are now carrying an unfair burden of governmental expense.

One of your biggest burdens is the gasoline tax. This tax was originally levied as a toll in order to pay for the highways over which you travel and derive a direct benefit. If your car runs twelve miles on a gallon of gasoline, at the present state tax of 3 cents a gallon in Illinois you pay a toll of 1 cent every four miles you travel.

This tax over a period of years has been gradually increased and its uses have in a like manner been diverted. In other words, you are paying for something you don't get. You have been an easy mark too long. If you think this is unfair it is entirely up to you to remedy the situation.

This high cost of operation has been one of the causes retarding the recovery of the automobile industry and its related industries. States with the highest gasoline taxes suffered the greatest decline in automobile registration and gasoline consumption last year. Politicians have almost killed the goose that lays the golden egg and it is up to John Q. Public to come to the rescue. The gasoline tax must be reduced and the diversion of funds must stop. P. D. SCHAEFFER.

CITY TRUCK TRAINS.

Chicago, April 20.—I am a bit interested in your article regarding the arrest of drivers using illegally long trucks. I heartily approve of the enforcement of that law.

May I suggest that the city of Chicago garbage collection work also be carried out in legal vehicles. They have a truck haul three trailers—and worse still, they use hard tires that are likewise illegal if driven over ten miles per hour.

The heavy garbage trains habitually pass through stop signs, knowing they will not be molested. How do they expect citizens to show proper deference for our laws when our own municipal departments set such defiant examples?

I hold no ill feelings toward any one, but believe in the city setting a good example to its own citizens.

PAMPERED CAR THIEVES.

Chicago, April 27.—According to your report of over 7,000 cars and trucks stolen in Chicago during the last three months and a steady increase as the weather warms up, what can we expect by the opening of the fair?

I spent a few hours the other day in the boys' court to see Judge Gutknecht either dismiss or grant probation to young hoodlums that steal taxpayers' cars. Judge Sullivan of the Criminal court and a few others are likewise very lenient to the car thieves.

If they continue to regard a stolen car as a petty theft, our visitors to the fair can expect a welcome upon reaching the city limits and their cars and valuables taken from them.

The police department is doing a wonderful service to recover stolen cars with very little support from the courts to punish such criminals.

ELEVEN MORE TAX RECEIVER SUITS STARTED

$792,895 Is Involved in New Court Actions.

Receivers to collect delinquent taxes totaling $792,895 were asked in eleven suits filed yesterday in the County court by County Treasurer McDonough. The receivers were asked under the Kerner-Skarda act, which permits the county treasurer to take tax delinquent properties into receivership and collect the income until the taxes are paid in full.

The largest debtor in the list of defendants is the Willoughby Tower Building corporation, 8 South Michigan avenue, which owes 1928, 1929, and 1930 taxes aggregating $215,042. Representatives of the corporation some time ago promised to pay $100,000 in cash and the remainder in monthly installments but the promise was never kept, county officials said.

Says "Bargaining" Is Over.

It was announced that an end has been put to "bargaining" in the county treasurer's office. Heretofore, a down payment of a few thousand dollars for as little as 20 per cent of the total taxes due has been enough to halt receivership action. Hereafter, at least 75 per cent of the total must be paid at once, the county treasurer said.

The defendants besides the Willoughby Tower Building corporation in the suits filed yesterday and the amount of taxes due on each follow:

Algonquin hotel, 4601 Sheridan road, $72,033.

Riviera Building corporation, 4752 Broadway, $58,519.

Aragon ballroom, 4800 Winthrop avenue, $62,909.

439-445 Diversey parkway, $54,249.

30 North Dearborn street, $34,451.

Central Life Insurance building, 117 East Superior street, $33,769.

4736-4758 Sheridan road, $69,999.

34 Suits Now in Courts.

The suits filed yesterday raised the total filed since May 1 to 34. It had been announced that 20 suits, instead of 11, would be filed today but the county treasurer said he was still hampered by lack of an adequate clerical force. He promised that at least 50 suits would be filed tomorrow.

Hereafter, all the suits will be filed in the County court where Judge Jarecki, because of his knowledge of tax matters, is expected to dispose of the receivership petitions in short order. The judge said that no masters in chancery would hear the cases. Reference of the petitions to masters in chancery had been a probability in the Circuit and Superior courts with a resultant delay.

Judge Jarecki will be asked to appoint receivers tomorrow for the Central Life building and the Willoughby Tower. State's Attorney Courtney has assigned as assistant to aid Assistant State's Attorney William T. Crilly in this work in the future.

Bismarck Hotel Pays $86,000.

A payment of $86,000 was made yesterday on the Bismarck hotel property at Randolph and Wells street. The payment was made on delinquent real estate taxes.

The county treasurer's office these days is receiving payments of tax bills which are as low as 5 cents, it was revealed. William Wickmann of Norwood Park yesterday paid 15 cents on a 1931 tax bill and Mrs. Erna Schmidt, 6119 Nassau street, paid a 5 cent tax bill. These bills are for assessments on one or two shares of bank stock and must be sent out separately under a recent decision of the state Supreme court.

W. S. Holderness, treasurer of the Outlook Envelope company, revealed that he had received a delinquent special assessment bill for 1932 from the county treasurer together with a notice that his property would be sold unless the assessment was paid within ten days.

"For some reason or other, the county treasurer elected to withhold mailing of the assessment bills for a year," said Mr. Holderness. "The idea of threatening the property owner with the sale of property for delinquent taxes after mailing the bills one year late is an example of the loose business methods of the present county administration."

JOHN D. BLACK NOMINATED FOR BAR PRESIDENT

The members of the Chicago Bar association yesterday received the slate of officers selected by the nominating committee. The election will be held in June.

Those nominated are: President, John D. Black; first vice president, Henry A. Gardner; second vice president, Laird Bell; secretary, Erwin W. Roemer; treasurer, William Beye; librarian, Willard L. King.

Nominees for the board of managers are: Richard Yates Hoffman, William H. Holly, Stephen Love, Fred D. Silber and Frederic E. von Ammon. The nominees for the committee on admissions are Russell B. Burt, William R. T. Ewen, Edward J. Farrell, John S. Lord and Carl H. Zeiss.

Hunt George Henderson, Building Firm Manager

Chicago police yesterday were searching for George Henderson, 26 years old, 8006 Colfax avenue. His mother, Mrs. A. D. Henderson, said he left Des Moines on May 2 by train and was to have arrived here the next morning, but has not appeared. Henderson is a manager for the Esbico company, building management firm at 10 North Clark street. Henderson is 6 feet tall and weighs 168 pounds.

Autoists with 1932 Plates Face Arrest After Tuesday

Springfield, Ill., May 13.—[U.P.]—Persons driving automobiles with 1932 license plates will be subject to arrest after Tuesday, according to a statement issued today by Edward J. Hughes, secretary of state. Hughes declared that state highway police and investigators in his office would be ordered to start making arrests after that date.

MOTION PICTURE OPERATORS TO HOLD MOVIE BALL JUNE 5

The Motion Picture Operators' union will hold its annual dance on June 5 in the Trianon ballroom, it was announced yesterday. The dance will be staged as a "movie ball" at which screen and radio stars will be present. A queen will be selected at the party and given a movie contract.

DISCUSS ALLEGED IRREGULARITIES IN RECEIVERSHIPS

Fees Not Paid in Full, Lawyers Assert.

Barnet L. Rosset, president of the Metropolitan Trust company, and members of the law firm of Pritzker & Pritzker, offered explanations yesterday of alleged irregularities in foreclosure and reorganization proceedings involving 87 properties, for which Herman Straus, former vice president of Straus Brothers Investment company, was trustee. These alleged irregularities were pointed out by Assistant Attorney General George Lavin and other investigators for the Sinnett legislative committee which is studying receiverships.

Jack Pritzker, a member of the law firm, explained that the "mysterious Adolph Fisher," whose name appears in records of realty transactions involving Trustee Straus was a "dummy person used in transferring titles of properties represented by the Straus company bondholders' protective committee." The dummy Fisher was used, he said, when Gustav and Louis Frankel, investment bankers who use the same offices as the Straus brothers, wished to transfer equity holdings from one individual to another.

Holds Title to Equities.

"This 'Adolph Fisher' was just a man against whom there were no judgments and who, consequently, could be used by the investment company's protective committee to hold title to equities which were purchased," Pritzker explained.

The two lawyers said that the "excessive fees" which it was charged had been paid to the law firm, have not been paid in full. They said that a schedule of $125,000 in fees allowed them by the courts in 15 of the Straus receiverships, was correct. They explained, however, that none of these fees have been paid in full. On most of these cases, they said, they had been forced to accept paper of the reorganized properties as pay. This paper, they added, is usually discounted approximately 50 per cent when boldholder's committees finally do obtain funds to pay the fees.

Sell at Buying Price.

The attorneys explained that a transfer of equity holdings from one individual to another did not halt foreclosure proceedings in any court. The purchase of the equities was made by the Frankel brothers, they said, in order to protect bondholders. In every case they handled, they added, the Frankel brothers had sold the equity they obtained to the bondholders' committee at the same price they paid for it.

The Frankels, according to the lawyers, have bought only a small proportion of the bonds on buildings which they are refinancing. Their profit, the lawyer said, is expected to come at regular real estate board rates after the financing and reorganization is complete.

Rosset said that there has been no attempt on the part of himself, Straus, or the Frankel brothers to seize buildings through purchase of depreciated bonds from stricken bondholders. He said that a number of suits against Straus, charging fraud, had all been held to be groundless. Most of these suits, he said, were initiated by bond speculators who purchased depreciated securities and then attempted to force the reorganizing bondholders to pay them off in full to avoid complications in the receivership hearings.

BLOMGREN TELLS ABOUT PURCHASE OF SITE FOR PARK

A. D. Plamondon, president of the Lincoln park board, yesterday received a letter from George W. Blomgren, former member of the board, concerning the purchase of the site for Emmerson park at Granville and Ravenswood avenue on Jan. 6, 1931.

Last Wednesday the present Lincoln park board discovered that a price of $57,000 an acre had been paid by the former board for the site, which consists of 2.34 acres. The purchase was made from the Chicago Town and Tennis club. The price was compared with the $17,000 an acre paid by the board of education for the site of the partly completed new Lane Technical high school at Addison street and Western avenue.

Mr. Blomgren in his letter to Mr. Plamondon said: "With all the requisites in its favor the Chicago Town and Tennis club frontage was purchased at a price ranging from $50 to $100 per front foot less than any parcel offered. To compare the Emmerson park site cost with that of the land on which the Lane Technical high school has been partially erected, with its thirty foot depth of ash and tin can base, is, to say the least, most unfair."

PLANT REOPENED AFTER WALKOUT OF 24 EMPLOYES

The Globe Rendering plant on Torrence avenue, one mile north of Lansing, which was closed Friday when 24 workers walked out in protest at the dismissal of the superintendent, was reopened yesterday. The former superintendent, Harry Robinson, father of Betty Robinson, track athlete, has been succeeded by Alexander Bennett of St. Louis. Nelson Morris, one of the owners of the plant, has employed men to take the place of the strikers.

Mr. Morris said yesterday that Robinson, who had been an employé of the plant for 32 years, was discharged because his services were unsatisfactory. Robinson said on Friday that he was discharged because he refused to follow instructions of the owners of the plant to reduce the minimum wage from 18 to 16 cents an hour. Mr. Morris denied that such an order had been given.

Foreclosure Holiday Would Halt Realty Recovery, Say Lawyers

JUDAH ASSERTS BILL WOULD ADD TO TAX MUDDLE

J. L. Vette Finds Measure Carries Dynamite.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

NOBLE B. JUDAH.
[Matzene Photo.]

Noble Brandon Judah of the law firm of Judah, Reichmann, Trumbull & Cox yesterday declared that if the proposed two year mortgage foreclosure moratorium bill now under consideration at Springfield is passed there'll be no hope for any possible improvement in real estate conditions in Chicago for the next two years. He said it would throw another wrench into the tax machinery by making it impossible to obtain new mortgage money from any source with which to reorganize bond issues and pay up back taxes.

"The small investor would be the eventual sufferer from a moratorium against foreclosures because of the increased expenses in pending foreclosure proceedings due to the delay, and because of the delay in any possible improvement of the real estate situation," said Col. Judah. "But the instant sufferers would be the teachers and city and county employés because of the decrease in real estate tax payments in Cook county which would promptly result from such legislation.

The proposed law, known as house bill No. 579, provides that in all foreclosure suits now pending, or which are hereafter filed, the court may suspend all proceedings until July 1, 1935. It was introduced by Howard L. Doyle [Dem., Decatur], and is now on third reading in the lower house at Springfield.

Incentive to Tax Strikers.

"In foreclosure proceedings now pending, where receivers have been appointed the receiverships will continue for another two years, with consequent increase in expense," said Col. Judah. "In the thousands of cases where the equity now has no value and where there's no possibility of its regaining its former value, the owner will be able to stay in possession, but knowing that foreclosure will be begun two years hence. Human nature being what it is, there's not much chance of his paying his taxes during those two years for the benefit of some one else.

"In the case of larger properties, which are covered by bond issues, the incentive for the owner not to pay his taxes is even greater. In the case of most of the large properties, covered by bond issues, there already are substantial amounts of back taxes unpaid.

"The only way that the owners or the reorganization committees can obtain money to pay these back taxes is, at the present time, by a loan from Reconstruction Finance corporation sources. There's no new mortgage money being loaned in Cook county from private sources at the present time.

"If, then, there is to be a two year moratorium on the foreclosure of mortgages, there is absolutely no chance to obtain new mortgage money from any source with which to reorgaize and pay up back txaes.

Predicts Less Taxes.

"It's evident that there will be an immediate falling off in the payment of taxes on large and small holdings, and the situation of our local governing bodies will become worse than it is now. If the percentage of tax collections is to become less than it is at the present time, it will be increasingly difficult to carry on our local government. The market for school board warrants, with which to pay our teachers, and for city and county warrants, small as it is now, will then disappear completely."

Col. Judah points out that the attitude of the backers of the moratorium legislation is that the debtor must be protected in any event and no consideration need be given to the creditor. He calls attention to the hundreds of thousands of small investors whose holdings in real estate bonds average less than $1,000 each, whom he believes also should be protected.

"It is probable that for every property owner who would be helped by the moratorium there would be a hundred small investors whose savings would be jeopardized," concluded Col. Judah.

Sees Dynamite in Bill.

Other Chicago attorneys, in commenting on the bill, were even more emphatic in their criticism than Col. Judah. John Lyle Vette had this to say: "In my judgment there's dynamite in this bill and the possibilities and even certainties of the harm in it for a great number of individual citizens and the public collectively, greatly outweigh the possible benefit to a relatively few.

"It certainly can't be denied that a foreclosure moratorium would keep capital out of the real estate loan field. Undoubtedly the eastern insurance companies would mark Illinois off their list. And so would the individual investor."

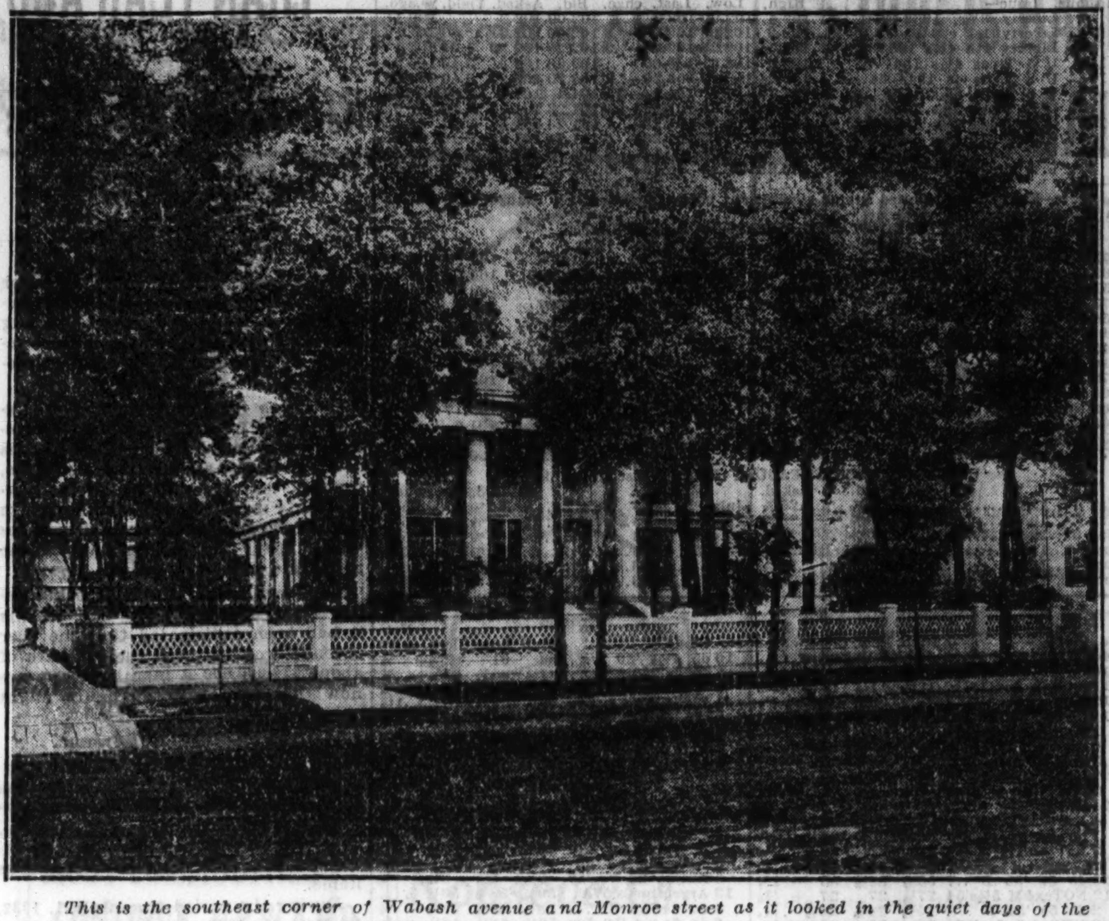
Fees Pile Up.

William G. Lodwick, vice president and general counsel for the Fort Dearborn Mortgage company, declared that the proposed moratorium on mortgages would put an end to all reorganizations.

"Expensive receiverships, however, would continue during the moratorium," he said, "and fees would continue to pile up, as well as other foreclosure and reorganization costs. This expensive management would prevent or impede considerably the payment of taxes. In addition, the moratorium, discouraging financing in Illinois, would prevent the making of loans to pay taxes.

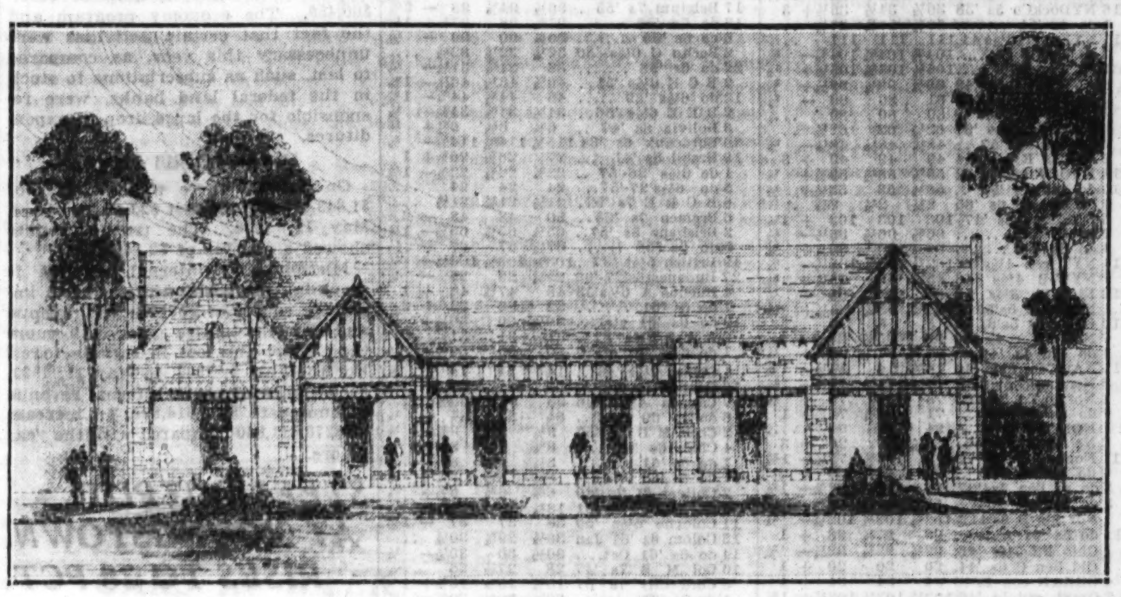
"To thrust another barrier in the way of the bondholder and the owner settling their differences would create a condition that would be well nigh fatal to real estate financing in Illinois now and in the future."

AT WABASH AND MONROE



This is the southeast corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street as it looked in the quiet days of the middle of the last century. Eli B. Williams and his family lived here. It burned in the '71 fire and Mr. Williams built the present five story Williams building, later given by his son to the University of Chicago. More is told in another column.

AIR CONDITIONED SHOPS FOR EVANSTON



Work has just started on the above Tudor Shops building, at 707-13 Church street, Evanston, just west of the Orrington hotel. This is said to be the first small shop building in this area to have a complete air conditioning plant for the entire six stores. It will be cooled in summer. Maher & McGrew, architects, have used the English Tudor style, with exterior of Wisconsin Lannon stone and half timber front and variegated slate roof. Smart & Golee, of Evanston, represent the owner. The building which has a frontage of seventy feet, between Orrington and Sherman avenues, is 100 feet deep. It will have foundations for an additional story. Completion is set for the middle of August. The M. Foley company, of Evanston, has the general contract. The cost is reported as approximately $50,000. Kenneth A. McGrew made this perspective.

UNSCRAMBLING OF DOUBLED UP FAMILIES SEEN

Signs of unscrambling of doubled up families are evident in the shifting from large to small suites, a feature of this spring's renting, according to Fred M. Lorish, of Swan, Lorish & Caspers. He pointed out that this trend is an indication that employment is better and families that were sharing large quarters are seeking their own homes in small apartments.

"The season closed with a net decrease of about 25 per cent in vacancies over last spring and fewer concessions were granted this year," said Mr. Lorish. "The demand was better for apartments up to six rooms and while the prices were under those of last year, the market started to stabilize during March.

"At the present time the south shore district is the most fully rented section of the south side. The vacancy percentage increases slightly as you travel northward through Woodlawn, Hyde Park and Kenwood. During the months of March and April we secured a total of 564 new tenants and renewed 78 per cent of the leases expiring during those months.

"An an indication that there are some buyers for real estate, we recently received 24 replies to a twelve apartment bargain advertised in THE TRIBUNE classified. Four answers came from real estate concerns and the other twenty from prospects having money to invest in Chicago real estate."

CHICAGOLAND 1933 ROAD MAP IS NOW READY

The 1933 Chicagoland special detailed road map is just off the press. Although primarily a map for motorists, it covers outlying Chicago so comprehensively that ever since it was first published it has found great favor among real estate men and home buyers who are touring suburban Chicago looking over prospective home sites. A reliable map is then indispensable. This year's map covers the same territory, but, of course, has been brought up to date with every mile of new concrete shown. For the World's Fair motorists the map gives A Century of Progress markers and also gives the locations of the principal fair attractions on the map of the exposition grounds.

JUSTIN KOMISS
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

What is claimed will be the finest and most modern women's apparel shop on State street is announced for the Stewart building, at the northwest corner of Washington. The Komiss company, a new corporation, of which Justin Komiss is president, has leased the corner store, the entire basement, and all of the second floor, comprising approximately 21,000 square feet, for a term of years at an undisclosed rental. Edward A. Shedd & Co. were lessors. Hall & Ellis, agents of the building, were the only brokers in the transaction.

Elaborate alterations are under way. Ralph Renwick has the general contract for exterior work and the Finkel Brothers Manufacturing company is doing the interior. The three floors of the new Komiss store will have a private elevator service. The design of the establishment is distinctly modern. According to Justin Komiss it is now planned to open his new store concurrently with the opening of A Century of Progress, now set for May 27.

SUBURBAN REAL ESTATE MARKET SHOWS ACTIVITY

A large and widespread activity in suburban homes has developed this spring, according to Stewart B. Matthews, vice president of Baird & Warner, in charge of sales. He states that his firm has closed over $350,000 in gross sales between Feb. 1 and May 1.

"In checking back our records for similar periods we find that our gross volume this year is larger than that of any year since 1929," he said. "Practically all of this business consisted of north shore residential sales and several parcels of vacant for homesites.

"Among several underlying reasons for this increase, in my opinion, is the fact that a number of conservative persons who have been able to accumulate cash have been startled by the thought of inflation and have taken action to convert their cash into commodities, particularly real estate.

"This is substantiated by the fact that out of all these transactions closed since Feb. 1 only one trade was made and that involved an investment by one party of over $10,000 cash. In all the other deals the entire equity price was cash and in many cases the properties were purchased clear or mortgages reduced or completely paid up by the buyers."

Brokers' Notes

Royal D. Smith, for many years connected with the late Robert F. Shanklin, who had been in the real estate business since 1892, announces that he is continuing that business as Robert F. Shanklin & Co., in the Conway building.

Bernard A. Ciesluk, real estate broker, who was in the Otis building, at 10 South La Salle, for many years, has moved his offices to 100 North La Salle.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago for the week of May 5 to 11, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled forty-seven, with a combined total cost of $240,200. Of these, thirteen contracts, totaling $61,600, were at the World's Fair. Outside the fair there were thirty-four, totaling $178,600. There were thirteen building permits issued at the city hall calling for an expenditure of $59,400.

WILLIAMS BLDG. REPORTED TO BE 100% OCCUPIED

History of Property Is Interesting.

ELI B. WILLIAMS.

With the leasing of the south section of the five story Williams building, at the southeast corner of Monroe and Wabash, to the Straus & Schram Furniture company, Lyndon H. Lesch, real estate manager of the University of Chicago, yesterday stated that the structure is now 100 per cent rented. The corner store and basement was leased several days ago, as reported in this department last Wednesday, to the Bond Clothing company.

This corner has had an interesting history. Since the land was owned by the federal government it has been held only by Eli B. Williams, his son, Hobart W. Williams, and the University of Chicago.

Eli B. Williams, accompanied by his wife, drove into Chicago in 1833 in his own carriage all the way from Tolland, Conn. This was then a hamlet of 200, but rapidly growing into a village. He opened a store on South Water street, east of Dearborn, and lived on Washington street.

Heads Village Board.

Mr. Williams shortly was made a member of the town board of trustees and in 1836 was elected its president. During the first three years there was a big real estate boom and Chicago grew from 200 to 4,000. Then Mr. Williams decided his house was too close to the rapidly growing business district, so he bought the southeast corner of Wabash and Monroe in 1844. The records show he paid $1,366 for the south section of the corner, or at the rate of about $17 a front foot. In 1930 this corner was valued by the board of assessors at $1,925,000, exclusive of the building.

Here Mr. and Mrs. Williams built an imposing colonial frame residence, shown on this page, surrounded by an ornamental white fence and with large trees and shrubbery.

They lived there until business again forced them to relocate. The house was rented for several years to an exclusive "ladies' restaurant and ice cream parlor" known as the Maison Dorée. It was swept away in the fire of '71.

Rebuilds in 1877.

In 1877 Mr. Williams built the present five story Williams building, which has been extensively remodeled several times. In 1916 Hobart W. Williams, son of Eli, gave the property to the University of Chicago to establish the Eli B. and Harriet B Williams memorial fund to assist poor and deserving students, preferably in business studies.

The Straus & Schram Furniture company has leased five floors and basement, each 60x160, at 115-17 South Wabash, in the south section of the Williams building, for ten years, on a minimum guarantee and percentage basis. On June 1 it will enter the loop with its eighth Chicago store. J. C. Hutchinson of McMenemy & Co. was broker.

This will be the third Straus & Schram store to be established during the present depression. The firm has passed the half century mark, having been established in 1882 by David Straus, who still is president and actively directs its policies. The new loop store will be extensively remodeled.

Other Leases Made.

The Charles P. Cochrane company of Philadelphia has leased 6,000 square feet of space on the second floor of the Williams building. This is three times its present quarters in the Lytton building. R. E. Wood of the university's business office negotiated this lease. J. W. Hannan, local manager of the Cochrane company, represented the lessee.

The Bond Clothing company has leased space fronting sixty feet on Wabash and eighty feet on Monroe and also 6,000 square feet of basement area. This will be the concern's second local store and its thirty-first unit in a nation-wide chain of popular priced men's clothing shops. Factories are in New Jersey. John Dietrich will be manager of the new store. The opening is set for Friday, May 19. This space formerly was used by Browning, King & Co.

A fourth lease in the Williams building is the store at 61 East Monroe, rented by the American Colortype company for one year, beginning June 1.

Report Gain in Inquiries for Near North Side Space

For the third time in the last six months the Pacini Laboratories, Inc., have found it necessary to expand facilities and take additional space. They have leased the balance of the fourth floor of the Seymour building, at 155 East Ohio street, for five years. This gives them approximately 7,000 square feet. Hogan & Farwell, agents of the building, say it's now 100 per cent rented. They also report an increase in inquiries for commercial space on the near north side.

BUILDING SHOWS 19% INCREASE IN STATE FOR APRIL

59 Pct. Gain in Repair Work Reported.

April construction projects in Illinois showed a 19 per cent increase over the previous month, according to figures supplied yesterday by the state department of labor. The increase occurred despite a 29 per cent decline in nonresidential building throughout the state. It was due to an 84 per cent gain in residential construction and a gain of 59 per cent in rehabilitation projects. The total estimated expenditure on building for April was $900,000.

Additions, alterations, repairs, and installations in buildings overtopped all other types of construction for April, according to the department of labor figures. The same situation developed in Chicago, where rehabilitation projects were approximately two-thirds of the entire building construction for the month.

84 Pct. Increase in Residences.

The total estimated expenditure for new residential building in all reporting cities of the state increased from $93,725 in March to $172,616 in April, or 84 per cent. New nonresidential building declined from $368,852 in March to $260,805 in April, or 29 per cent. Thus, despite the increase in new residential building, the estimated expenditure for all new building, both residential and nonresidential, declined from $462,577 in March to $433,421 in April, or 6 per cent.

The miscellaneous rehabilitation work throughout the state, however, pulled up the building total to the 19 per cent increase. In this class of construction the total expenditure of $293,196 in March climbed to $466,597 in April, a gain of 59 per cent.

All Classes Gain in Chicago.

In Chicago all three classes of construction showed increases for April over March. Residential building in the city advanced 7 per cent from $34,250 to $36,750; nonresidential building increased 27 per cent, from $80,475 to $102,575; rehabilitation made the most spectacular gain by climbing from $157,408 to $240,265, or 52 per cent.

The increase in new residential building was the third consecutive monthly gain in Chicago, while the increase in nonresidential construction was the fourth consecutive monthly advance reported.

Suburban Building Hits High.

Suburban building in the Chicago metropolitan area for April hit high for the year, increasing 67 per cent over the previous month. The total for 54 towns in the metropolitan area, as shown in the building survey by the Straus Securities corporation, was $330,951. This compares with $198,324 for March.

Of course the April total doesn't look so imposing when comparison is made with April, 1932, figures, but it indicates a real upturn in the construction business.

A number of communities record substantial gains in April over March, particularly Hammond, Ind., with an increase of 2,356 per cent. Others are Oak Park, with a gain of 2,296 per cent; Lake Forest, 555 per cent; Winnetka, 229 per cent; Berwyn, 196 per cent, and Joliet, 176 per cent.

These gains stand for April permits amounting to $20,000 or more in each case. In other words, the increases are not merely in percentages but indicate the expenditure of real money for building.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 13.—Bond prices were mildly reactionary on the stock exchange today, with total trading during the two hour period amounting to $8,175,000, compared with $9,614,000 for the preceding Saturday.

As measured by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE averages, leading foreign loans did better than domestic corporation issues. United States government bonds closed unchanged to 11-32ds of a point lower.

German Group Steady.

Bonds of the German group preserved a fair decree of steadiness, following announcement by the German government that it will not pay its debt service in gold in terms of the various foreign currencies. The government 5½s moved up ¼ of a point, while the 7s lost half a point. French government and municipal loans showed fractional changes for the day, as did United Kingdom 5½s and Italian government 7s.

Less than $1,000,000 of United States government bonds changed hands, with the maximum loss amounting to 11-32ds of a point accruing to the treasury 3¾s. The market was enlivened by appearance of the tape of bids for several of the government's infrequently traded issues: 101 16-32ds bid for $500,000 First Liberty 4s, 101 24-32ds for like amount of First-Second Liberty 4½s, par for $1,000,000 of Panama Canal 2s due 1936, and 99⅞ for $1,000,000 Panama Canal 2s due 1938.

Corporation Issues Mixed.

Price changes in domestic corporation bonds ran the gamut of up 5 points to off 2⅛ for the active issues, with a few in which only one or two bonds were traded, showing wider variations. As a rule, the greatest variations in prices occurred in the lower priced issues.

Both domestic and foreign bonds on the Curb exchange manifested considerable irregularity in fairly active trading for a Saturday. With but a few exceptions, the most active bonds showed but fractional variations in quotations.

PROFIT TAKING IN COTTON CARRIES PRICES DOWN

Profit taking in cotton resulted in a lower range on a moderate volume of trade. The opening was 9@10 points net lower and the close in Chicago showed net losses of 9@12 points, and other markets 9@15 points. Spots were off 10 points in New York at at 8.85c, New Orleans lost 15 points with finish at 8.75c, Galveston 8.60c, Houston at 8.70c. Liverpool closed 5 points net higher. Consumption of cotton in April as given by the census report was 470,685 bales this year against 366,481 last year, exports for the month of April was 436,450 bales against 544,563 bales last year. Number of spindles active in April was 23,416,680 compared with 23,362,862. Fall River reports an active trade in cotton goods throughout the week and all New England centers also had a good business. Prices follow:

REVENUE OF U. S. NOW IS HIGHER THAN YEAR AGO

New Taxes, Beer Help; Deficit Still Large.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—For the first time since early in 1932 government receipts are now beginning to exceed those of the year before, according to figures at the treasury today.

This has resulted from heavy miscellaneous internal revenue collections, increasing because of new taxes of the 1932 revenue act and beer taxes, the fact that some of the foreign governments made war debt payments in December, and to other smaller gains which offset heavy losses in income taxes and customs receipts.

The beer taxes are now being received in considerable volume. While it had been anticipated that the beer revenue would exceed the estimate of about $12,000,000 a month, it appears now that for April the figure might go past the estimate.

Beer Boosts May Revenue.

For the first 11 days of May miscellaneous internal revenue collections were $47,743,439, an increase of $12,778,752 over the same period of April. This was due to the beer tax and increases in certain other miscellaneous items.

During the period from July 1, 1932, to May 11, 1933, government receipts were $1,716,238,281, a gain of $159,542, compared with the corresponding period a year earlier. Receipts from trust funds in this period were $135,584,648, higher by $31,594,233 than the previous year.

In the same period expenditures were $3,364,308,628, a drop of $898,800,456. The economy program and the fact that certain activities were unnecessary this year, as compared to last, such as subscriptions to stock in the federal land banks, were responsible for the large drop in expenditures.

Deficit Is Still Large.

On May 11 there was a deficit of $1,648,070,347, against $2,547,030,344 on May 11, 1932. The trust accounts showed a surplus of $2,146,170.

Miscellaneous internal revenue is assuming the position of the most important source of government revenue and for the entire year will more than offset the loss in income taxes. For the July 1, 1932, to May 11, 1933, period, miscellaneous internal revenue amounted to $705,614,874, an increase of $270,411,840 compared with the year before.

STEEL OUTPUT AT YOUNGSTOWN RISES TO 38 PCT.

Youngstown, O., May 13.—(AP)—Steel ingot production in the Youngstown district will rise from 36 to 38 per cent of capacity next week, and may go even higher, announcements of mill schedules showed today.

Iron production also will rise with the blowing in of a second blast furnace by the Carnegie Steel company at Farrell, Pa., bringing the number of active furnaces to seven of the 31 in the district, the highest figure for many months. A year ago, however, eight furnaces were in blast. Two others are now being prepared for production.

Federal Reserve Banks Slowly Putting Out Asset Money

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—Preparing to shake off the gold reserve requirements which they have long considered too restrictive, federal reserve banks are gradually shifting from the use of federal reserve notes to federal reserve bank notes, officials admitted today.

Federal reserve notes must have a 40 per cent gold backing, but the reserve bank notes may be issued on the basis of government securities or eligible commercial paper alone.

Turning from reserve notes to the bank notes would free 2 billion 707 million dollars in gold which the reserve banks are now having to use as collateral for the reserve notes. Unincumbered gold, with which the system can function domestically or internationally, would be tripled and reach a total close to four billions.

Substitution Is Gradual.

While reserve notes are gradually being withdrawn and their total in circulation diminished, reserve bank notes are being paid out. Since the end of April, 26 million dollars in reserve bank notes have been paid out, and the total of reserve notes in circulation dropped more than 74 millions.

This process of substitution has been adopted by the reserve banks as a general policy, it was revealed, and all the reserve banks except those of Richmond, Va., and San Francisco have started paying out bank notes.

The total of reserve bank notes in actual circulation is only $62,800,000, but the reserve banks hold another $30,400,000 ready for payment. The total of gold backed reserve notes continues to be far in excess of the total of reserve bank notes, amounting to 3 billion 350 millions, according to last reports, but this amount has been steadily shrinking, while the amount of reserve bank notes increases.

Circulation Decreases.

All types of money except reserve bank notes have been returning from circulation. The lessening demand for money has hampered the spread of the bank notes, but the usual autumn call for more money will offer an opportunity to increase their circulation.

Reserve board experts have long considered the gold reserve requirements for reserve notes a useless and encumbering provision. They point out that, regardless of the specific collateral provisions, the reserve notes and the bank notes are primary liens on all the assets of the reserve banks, including the entire gold stock.

SUBURBAN TRUST BANK, OAK PARK, PLANS TO OPEN

Plans for the reopening of the Suburban Trust and Savings bank of Oak Park have been completed and approved by Edward J. Barrett, state auditor, directors of the bank announced last night. They said the bank will reopen Wednesday, May 17, with $150,000 in new capital. The depositors have agreed to waive payment on 50 per cent of their deposits, according to the directors.

A plan calling for release of 70 per cent of deposits and the freezing of the balance is being considered by the First Lake County National bank of Libertyville. The plan is reported to have the tentative approval of the national bank authorities here, and is awaiting final confirmation by Washington. Officials are going ahead with the reorganization plans in anticipation of such approval.

State Auditor Edward J. Barrett yesterday authorized the First State bank of Westmont, Ill., to reopen tomorrow.

LAND BANK TAKES ALL OF ITS FARMS OFF THE MARKET

Louisville, Ky., May 13.—(AP)—Ernest Rice, president of the Federal Land bank here, announced today that the bank has withdrawn all its farms from the market and is revaluing them on the basis of normal land values as of the period of 1909 to 1914.

The new policy, Rice said, will affect some 500 bank owned farms in this district, scattered through Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, and Tennessee, and aggregating approximately 100,000 acres. A new schedule of higher prices is expected to be announced in two weeks.

The increased valuation, Rice said, will be made on the basis of 92 cent wheat, 64 cent corn, and 12½ cent cotton.

Rice said the bank had dropped all foreclosures.

3 CLOSED BANKS IN BLOOMINGTON TO FORM NEW ONE

Bloomington, Ill., May 13.—[Special.]—A major step toward releasing deposits of Bloomington's three closed banks and resuming general banking service to their customers through a new and consolidated institution has been taken, with the assurance that a new national charter would be granted. This assurance was given by A. P. Leyburn, chief national bank examiner, to a committee of officers from the three banks—First National, Liberty State, and American State.

The charter will be obtained when the two following requirements are met: Subscription of $150,000 in capital stock and surplus and organization of a board of directors and management acceptable to the national banking department.

SENATORS BACK BANK DEPOSITS, INSURANCE BILL

Committee O. K.'s Measure; It's Up Tomorrow.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—The Glass bill, aimed at tightening the banking laws and insuring deposits, moved ahead another step today when it received the approval of the senate banking and currency committee.

Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], author of the measure, will report it to the senate next Monday.

By an 11 to 1 vote the committee agreed to the two billion dollar federal bank deposit insurance corporation proposed by the Virginia senator. Under the bill the corporation would be created with an initial capital of 450 to 500 millions of dollars made up of contributions from the treasury, the federal reserve banks, and the member banks of the reserve system. It would guarantee both time and demand deposits 100 per cent up to $10,000, 75 per cent between $10,000 and $50,000, and 50 per cent over $50,000.

McAdoo Proposal Beaten.

By a vote of 8 to 4 the committee rejected a proposal by Senator William G. McAdoo [Dem., Cal.] to give 100 per cent insurance to deposits up to $5,000 immediately upon enactment of the bill. The bill itself postpones establishment of the guarantee corporation for one year.

Only a few minor amendments were written into the bill in committee. The chief purposes remain unchanged: To force banks to divest themselves of their investment affiliates within two years, to prohibit private banks from engaging simultaneously in the business of receiving deposits and selling securities, to impose government examination on private banks accepting deposits, to bar interlocking directorates between commercial banks and private securities companies, to permit branch banking to national banks where and to the extent state laws permit, and, by numerous provisions, to prevent the exploitation of federal reserve funds and credit for speculation.

Nonmember State Banks.

Meanwhile the house banking committee met to consider both the Glass bill and the measure sponsored by its chairman, Representative Henry B. Steagall [Dem., Ala.]. Similar in nearly all respects, the Glass and the Steagall bills differ in one major feature.

The Steagall bill proposes to allow nonmember state banks wide opportunities to obtain the benefits of the deposit insurance corporation, while the Glass bill would make membership in the reserve system a prerequisite to eligibility under the insurance plan.

4 CLOSED BANKS IN CAPITAL PLAN NEW INSTITUTION

Washington, D. C., May 13.—(AP)—Designed to solve the complex financial situation presented by Washington banks in the hands of conservators, plans were formally announced tonight for organization of a new national bank here, with a capital structure of at least a million dollars, to be headed by Edwin C. Graham, president of the National Electrical Light company.

Four banks form the nucleus of the new institution—the Federal-American National Bank and Trust company, the District National bank, the Potomac Savings bank and the Washington Savings bank.

Under the plan, 50 per cent of all deposits in these institutions would be made available to depositors in the new bank, totaling about $10,000,000.

ILLINOIS PLANS BETTER LAW ON CORPORATIONS

New Act Proposed to Protect Investor.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Simplification of the entire legal machinery dealing with corporations, together with new safeguards for investors, are the important features of the proposed new Illinois corporation act now pending before the state legislature.

The present archaic corporation act, which is full of legal loopholes, but still an important factor in driving business out of the state, is completely revamped and modernized under the proposed measure, which is known as senate bill 225.

The bill is backed by the leaders in both political parties, and represents the results of years of study by various agencies. The bill was drafted by a committee of 15 appointed by the governor in 1931. The committee studied the recommendations made by the Illinois and Chicago Bar associations.

Result of Much Study.

After making additions and changes the committee submitted the present bill to the legislature. It is the culmination of several years' work by reputable agencies to reform the Illinois act, which is known throughout the country as ineffective.

Among the abuses which the new act seeks to correct are those practiced so extensively by the public utility holding companies and the real estate financing promoters in the last few years.

The bill prohibits the payment of cash dividends from surplus raising through unrealized appreciation—a practice indulged in by the Insull holding companies on a large scale. It was also practiced by various heavily bonded real estate enterprises in Chicago. Promoters voted themselves generous dividends out of surplus resulting from reappraisal of assets with the result that bondholders were defrauded.

Limits Real Estate Financing.

The bill also strikes at another condition which led to the unsound real estate financing. The severe limitation on corporate ownership of real estate imposed by the present act has long been regarded as a prime factor in encouraging the heavy bonding of real estate ventures.

Under the law it was not feasible to capitalize these ventures with a sound balance of bonds and stock. As a result, a moderate decline in rents was sufficient to wipe out the capital. The result—for which Chicago and Illinois have become notorious—was wholesale default on real estate bonds and the consequent ruinous receiverships and reorganizations.

The limitations on corporate real estate ownership were originally enacted to prevent the gobbling up of farm lands by big corporations. The practical result has been drastic restriction on corporate ownership of urban real estate.

Reckless Promotions Encouraged.

Thus, a profitable field was opened to real estate promoters, who recklessly financed individual real estate projects and brought immense losses to real estate bond investors.

Directors of all corporations are made liable to the full amount of loans made by a company to any officer or director until such loans are repaid. The present act was deficient in this respect, attaching liability to directors only for loans made to stockholders and directors. The experience of the last three years showed that officers were the principal borrowers from their companies and Chicago companies will have to shoulder big losses on this type of lending.

Outside Corporations Aided.

The severe limitations made on the type of out-of-state corporations which may do business in Illinois are also eliminated by the proposed bill. At present the law specifies that foreign corporations that have sold common stock for less than $5 a share cannot do business in the state.

The bill is sponsored in the senate by Senator Richey V. Graham, Richard J. Barr and Arthur A. Huebech. It has been endorsed by members of the law school faculties of the University of Illinois, and Chicago, Northwestern and Loyola universities.

How 'Cheaper' Dollar Speeds Up Business

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Ten weeks ago business was flat on its back. The banks were closed. Factories and mills were operating at a bare minimum. Employment was diminishing rapidly. The nation was in economic despair.

Today business is rapidly accelerating. The large majority of banks are open and their deposits are rapidly mounting. Factories and mills are increasing their rates of operation. Men are being put back to work. Everybody is hopeful.

True, United States currency has been removed from the gold standard. No longer is it possible to turn in money and receive gold in exchange. And in the foreign exchange markets of the world the American dollar has slipped a few pegs in comparison with the currencies of other nations.

Yesterday the dollar was worth only 83 cents, measured in terms of currencies of nations still on the gold standard. That means that if you exchange $100 of American money for francs you will receive what in normal times would be regarded as $83 worth of francs.

This would indicate a 17 per cent cheapening of American money. This cheapening has actually occurred as far as foreign trade is concerned. Within the borders of the nation, however, it is a moot question whether the money has been cheapened or whether confidence has been restored in goods and securities and in business in general.

Certainly there has been no currency inflation to date. On the contrary, there has been contraction of the currency as hundreds of millions of dollars have come out of hoarding to be spent.

The markets have advanced because of the promise of inflation rather than because of actual expansion of either currency or credit. For years people had clung to money as the one and only fixed value. As the prices of other things continued to recede they pinned their faith more and more upon money itself.

This dried up trade. It was a vicious circle. People who had money wouldn't trade it for goods because they believed the value of money would stay put and that the value of goods would drop. When prices decline buying decreases. When prices are rising buying grows.

Something was needed to reverse the vicious circle. The dollar was taken off the gold standard and allowed to seek its own level.

How has the scheme worked?

Assuming for the sake of argument that the value of the dollar has depreciated in domestic as well as foreign trade as much as 17 per cent and that present prices are measured in terms of 83 cent dollars rather than 100 cent dollars the rise in values of goods and securities has far exceeded the decline of the dollar.

Stock prices have advanced 50 per cent since March 1. At that time THE TRIBUNE's average of 50 selected stocks on the New York stock exchange was below 50. Today it is approximately 75.

On March 1 the price of July corn at Chicago was 25¾ cents per bushel. Yesterday July corn had advanced to 47 cents per bushel. Subtracting freight and handling charges, which are the same in both instances, the price to the farmer has more than doubled.

And so on down a whole long line of commodities. They are all up, most of them far more than 17 per cent. Hogs yesterday reached $5 per hundred pounds, a gain of a dollar in a single week. Wheat had risen from 47 cents to 75 cents in ten weeks.

How many billions of dollars have been added to the value of property by this tremendous upswing can only be guessed at. More important than the paper profits is the stimulus given industry.

The nation's steel mills have more than doubled their operations since the low ebb during the moratorium. In the Chicago district alone steel operations in six weeks have risen from 13 per cent of capacity to 30 per cent and the improvement continues.

The consumption of electric energy, regarded by many as the premier index of business activity, has risen rapidly. Last week the nation's electric output was higher than it had been in the corresponding week of the preceding year.

More sales by industry means more traffic for the railroads. Car loading figures vary greatly from week to week and are not a perfect index, but they indicate that railway traffic now is close to 20 per cent above the 1933 low.

Bank figures, as boiled down by the federal reserve board, show a tendency toward loan expansion. To date most of the expansion has been in brokers' loans, but New York and Chicago institutions have begun to increase their commercial loans.

The reopening of additional banks especially in rural districts has helped stimulate business. Business men and farmers are thus supplied with credit

Tide of Trade Continues Rise Over Nation

News of expanding business and resulting increases in employment and wages continued to come in yesterday from various industries in all sections of the country.

Automobile production last week increased for the eighth consecutive week, according to Cram's reports. The output was set at 51,671 cars, a gain of 235 over the preceding week. Hudson Motors announced a peak production for two years by stepping up output from 1,500 to 2,000 cars a week.

The increase in steel operations in the Gary and Chicago district was said to have raised pay rolls more than $800,000 a month.

Steel Mills Reopening.

From Wheeling, W. Va., came the report that the Wheeling Steel corporation will resume capacity operation of its Benwood steel mill which has been idle since the first of the year. The tube department will increase its rate from 40 to 60 per cent of capacity. Approximately 600 men are being recalled, the company announced. Coal mines in the area were preparing to call 1,000 men back to work.

From Sharon, O., came word that the Carnegie Steel company's Farrell plant, partly closed for four years, will reopen Wednesday.

A result of the increased activity in steel manufacture was seen in an increased demand for fire brick, adding 50 workers to the brickyards pay rolls of Johnstown, Pa.

The Stinson Aircraft corporation reported in Chicago that with $100,000 of unfilled orders on hand it was operating on the largest scale in its history.

Brewery Hops Wages.

An increase in wages of from 10 to 20 per cent for the hop yard employés of the Oregon Breweries and Hop Farms, Inc., was reported from Portland, Ore.

The Jacob Ruppert Brewing company of New York placed a $500,000 order for glass lined tanks with the Pfaudler company. The tanks will require 1,800 tons of steel. The Pfaudler company announced it was one of the largest orders it has received in 20 years.

From Massachusetts came three items of cheering news. The Massachusetts Mohair Plus company of Lowell reported that it has increased its force from 225 to 285 as a result of the "tremendous demand for mohair yarn."

Leather Workers Pay Raised.

From the same city came the report that the Leather Workers union which has been negotiating with the American Hide and Leather company for several days have agreed to accept the company's offer of a 10 per cent wage increase, effective May 22.

The third came from Northampton, a report indicating smaller businesses are picking up. College Weavers, Inc., announced 100 more workers had been employed because of increased orders.

Continental Motors corporation from Detroit announced that it has shipped 20 carloads of taxicabs, including motors, frames, axles, and transmissions to the M. P. Moller Car company of Hagerstown, Md.

At Edwardsville, Ill., the Elder Shirt company announced the capacity of its plant, now employing 115, would be increased 40 per cent.

The Swift and Armour packing plants at Fort Worth, Tex., reported employés had been increased 10 per cent recently.

RAIL LOADINGS DECLINE 11,857 CARS IN WEEK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—Loading of revenue freight for the week ended on May 6 totaled 523,819 cars, the car service division of the American Railway association announced today.

This was a decrease of 11,857 cars below the preceding week, 10,132 cars under the same week in 1932 and 221,921 cars under the same week in 1931.

Miscellaneous freight loading for the week of May 6 totaled 197,066 cars, a decrease of 9,224 cars below the preceding week.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 164,343 cars, an increase of 2,224 cars above the preceding week.

Grain and grain products loading for the week totaled 39,412 cars, 2,102 cars below the preceding week.

Forest products loading totaled 19,167 cars, 418 cars above the preceding week.

Coal loading amounted to 76,655 cars, a decrease of 630 cars under the preceding week.

Live stock loading amounted to 17,919 cars, a decrease of 2,458 cars below the preceding week.

WEEK'S INDICES SHOW BUSINESS CONTINUES RISE

New York, May 13.—(AP)—Statistics appearing during the last week indicated a rising business tendency, according to Moody's index figures for freight car loadings, electric power production, and steel ingot output.

These index figures are adjusted for seasonal variation—that is, if the change from the previous week should coincide with the normal seasonal change, the index figure would be unchanged.

Roosevelt's "My Friends" Catches On

The introductory phrase, "My friends," is gaining wide popularity among speech makers. Made a household phrase by President Roosevelt through his radio talks it is being taken up by after dinner speakers, lecturers, political haranguers and the clergy.

A speaker addressing the American Spice association recently in New York started off with the phrase and then launched into this forecasting:

"It is my belief that the grand finale of this social and economic system will come between the years 1941 and 1942. This period will mark the return of the spirit of human love, the spirit of 'I am my brother's keeper' and the spirit of 'live and let live.' By this time we shall see an entirely new era and social system."

The speaker was one William P. Shaw of Dyer-Hudson & Co. of New York.

One of the leading operators on the Chicago Board of Trade expressed the belief yesterday that the trade appears to be paying too much attention to wet weather as a market factor in corn and too little to the possibilities of the farm relief inflation bill. He would not be surprised to find some morning that an import duty had been levied on blackstrap molasses and on tapioca and other starchs overnight. These products have displaced corn in many lines of manufactured commodities in recent years.

George F. Anderson of the law firm of Anderson & Anderson has an unusual collecting hobby—maxims. He has assembled hundreds of sayings from all nations and what is more to the point of any collection—he can use them. Yesterday in conversation regarding the present attempt of politicians, officials, lawyers, etc., to do something about the present mortgage bond mess, Mr. Anderson summed the whole thing up with a maxim he had collected from some far eastern nation and stored away in his memory: "The dog barks, but the caravan passes."

The rise and fall in the number of telephone calls has been called one of the most accurate barometers of business conditions. A hopeful sign, therefore, is found in reports that the curve in the number of calls handled in Chicago has been moving steadily upward during the last six weeks, with an especially sharp upturn in the last two weeks. Furthermore, the number of long distance calls is said to be increasing materially. The number of telephones in Chicago is said to be decreasing, but officials are hopeful that the present increase in the number of calls will check this tendency.

$5 HOG IS BACK; FARM ANIMALS UP HALF BILLION

Total Rise in Live Stock Computed.

Live stock prices last week were whirled to the highest position in almost a year, in the most spectacular rise seen in the stockyards market in three years. The advance was far beyond the most optimistic hopes of the speculative element, which has been unanimously on the "inflation" side of the trade for the last six weeks and more. Not even the bulge of last June could compare with it.

Being strictly a cash market, the rise means that additional millions of dollars are going directly into the farmers' pockets. The rise added more than 100 million dollars to the value of the animals still on the farms and raised the weekly flow of money from the leading packing centers back to the farm about $5,000,000 over the low point of the winter.

Half Billion Added to Value.

The gain in live stock values, as a whole, compared with the low point of the winter amounts to 43 per cent. Animals still on farms are worth approximately 530 million dollars more now than they were at the low time, allowing for what has been sold, says the Corn Belt Farm Dailies.

Hogs continued their record breaking advance to new 1933 highs on the week-end session yesterday. Top sales soared to $5, with the average for the day at $4.90, both prices showing 20 cents gain over Friday and $1 advance compared with the preceding Saturday. A year ago yesterday top hogs sold at $3.50 and the average was $3.35.

Buyers were eager for numbers and despite the fact that the available supply was larger than usual for a Saturday, it was below the requirements of packers.

Hogs, Lambs Above Year Ago.

Returns from both hogs and lambs are above the average of 1932, but cattle prices still are substantially under a year ago. As a whole, live stock valuations are about equal to the averages for the entire year of 1932.

Last week's Chicago receipts of all kinds of live stock cost the packers approximately $3,500,000. This compares with an official average weekly value of $3,580,764 in 1932. Many farmers are in need of cash for spring planting necessities. Consequently the urge was to capitalize on the rise in the markets for live stock.

Buying by packing interests was for numbers and tonnage all week, particularly in hogs. Little attention was paid to the pressure of heavier receipts, which were only slightly under the largest of the year.

Pre-War Prices Higher.

Notwithstanding the big gains made by live stock, prices still are considerably under pre-war levels, which is the goal set by the secretary of agriculture in the farm relief program to put the buying power of the farmer back to what it was before the war.

The average price of beef steers on the Chicago market for the last six days at $5.40 was highest of the year, but showed a 27 per cent loss when compared with the beef steer average for the period 1909 to 1914, inclusive.

Hogs at Chicago averaged $4.30 for the week, or 45 per cent under the pre-war average.

Lambs averaged $6.35, showing only 13 per cent decline from the 1909-'14 average.

Wheat Conference Moves Toward World Limit Pact

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 13.—(AP)—The "big four" nations at the wheat conference made considerable progress today in working out an agreement to limit production by reducing acreage. The agreement would cover two years. The United States, Canada, Argentina, and Australia are participating in the conference.

Dollar Able to Regain Par, Bankers Say

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 13.—The fall of the dollar has resulted in an unstable condition in the foreign exchange market which could explode at any time in a violent rally of the American monetary unit back to par or even above par, according to banking experts. The bankers base their thesis on several elements.

First, they say, the dollar is inherently strong, lacking the political and psychological factors which have forced it down to a 15 per cent discount, it would still be at par on the basis of the country's trade balance and its gold reserves.

Second, there is a large short interest outstanding, both the speculative European short interest and the legitimate short position created by the action of exporters in postponing conversion of the proceeds of their foreign sales into dollars.

Third, nothing has yet been done by the government to devalue the currency internally.

Foresee Covering Movement.

On this basis, any sudden development leading to the opinion that the government did not intend to utilize the more radical provisions of the farm bill might set in motion a covering movement that would bring a sharp appreciation of the exchange.

There remains another factor, however, which might easily prove the means of setting this covering movement going. This is European participation in our stock market. Thus far, European markets have been skeptical of the rise in stocks and commodities here. They have not participated except to the extent that some Europeans having dollar balances here have purchased stocks as a hedge against inflation. But if the rise in stocks should continue it is inevitable, bankers feel that Europe will come into the market.

This will involve the purchase of dollars by Europeans and in view of the existing strong technical position of the dollar in exchange any considerable buying of dollars for participation in our market might set off the covering rally.

DOLLAR HOLDS STEADY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, N. Y., May 13.—The foreign exchange market displayed increased stability and dullness in trading today. Sterling rose ¼ cent against the dollar to $3.97½, while francs were unchanged at 4.63 cents. Guilders rose 3 points to 47.25 cents; Belgas were up 3 points to 16.38 cents and Swiss francs improved 3 points to 22.75 cents. Marks were unchanged at 27.56 cents as were Japanese yen at 24.18 cents.

Am. Telephone's Dividend Meeting Due Wednesday

New York, May 13.—Major interest in next week's dividend meetings concerns the session of American Telephone and Telegraph directors, scheduled for Wednesday. Other important meetings include International Harvester, E. I. du Pont de Nemours, Chesapeake corporation, Chesapeake and Ohio railway, Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, Texas corporation and Electric Storage battery.

STOCKS SAG ON PROFIT TAKING; LOSSES SMALL

Some Issues Ignore Trend and Rise.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 13.—Stock values slipped to moderately lower levels today on week-end realizing sales. Losses were kept within a limit of a point or so in the main and special buying served to sprinkle a few plus signs about.

Business continued on a fairly active scale, however, volume for the two hours amounting to 2,273,617 shares, a quarter of a million more than last Saturday. Brokers ascribed the mild setback to the fact that traders generally are growing wary over the market's technical condition, which many think primed for a more or less severe reaction, unless some unforeseen political or business development of importance comes along to save the day.

Six Weeks Advance.

Prices have been moving ahead almost steadily for some six weeks now and past experience has shown that bull movements seldom carry on even to this extent without backing up to "consolidate gains" as the phrase goes. The wise ones have been warning for two weeks now that such a right about is long overdue but apparently the public, wildly enthusiastic over the anticipated efforts of the administration's inflationary program, refuses to be guided by such professional advice or to be swayed by the so-called professional element. It can see nothing but indefinite progress ahead and continues to buy with indiscriminate ardor, whatever the day-by-day happenings at Washington or elsewhere.

A spurt in the railroad shares in the early part of the second hour immediately preceeding the publication of the weekly car loadings reports was about the nearest approach to a feature for the abbreviated session. The figures when they did appear proved about in line with the Street's expectations showing as they did a drop of 11,857 cars from the previous week and the flurry quickly subsided. The momentary gains melted down as fast as they had been run up and the close found the group generally below its Friday night level.

Auburn Spurt Checked.

Auburn Auto turned on the shorts around midmorning and ran up a six point gain with a speed reminiscent of its old time fireworks displays but the long lean period the issue has had to undergo with the rest of the market told on it and profit takers cut the runup in half. General Motors lost more than a point of its recent gains and other issues of the group came in for moderate selling. Mack Truck, however, was up 2 points at one time and succeeded in recording a new high for the year.

American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, United States Steel and other leaders of the recent boom slumped from 1 to about 2 points each.

GERMAN DEBTORS SEEK WAY TO PAY FOREIGN CREDITS

Schacht to Call Conference on Exchange.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 13.—[Special.]—In a prepared statement on the German private debt and questions of banking and currency, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reischsbank, announced tonight that he intends to call at once a conference in Berlin of representatives of holders of German obligations in the various countries, with a view to deciding on the best ways of meeting the problems surrounding these private debts.

Dr. Schacht issued his statement during a reception in his honor shortly before he boarded the liner Europa for his home. The German envoy, who arrived here Friday night after conferring with President Roosevelt on economic affairs, disclosed that the gold and foreign exchange reserve in the Reichsbank, already at "an exceedingly low figure," is "decreasing every week."

Difficulty Lies in Exchange.

His statement stressed the point that the problem of meeting Germany's private debt lies not in the possible difficulty of having payments made by the individual debtor "but in the difficulty of securing the foreign exchange which is needed for making the transfer in foreign currency.

"The problem of meeting our foreign private debts does not lie in the possible difficulty of having payments made by the individual debtor, but in the difficulty of securing the foreign exchange, which is needed for making the transfer in foreign currency," his statement read in part. As all the foreign exchange flowing into the country has to be delivered under the present law to the Reichsbank, the debtor can obtain foreign exchange only from the Reichsbank.

Pay Out 2½ Billions.

"Two years and a half ago, the Reichsbank had some 750 million dollars in gold and foreign exchange, derived partly from trade and partly from other sources. Since then German debtors have paid back two and one-half billion dollars in gold and foreign exchange on foreign debts, which has brought the gold and foreign exchange reserve in the Reichsbank down to an exceedingly low figure.

"From the Reichsbank status it is to be seen that this figure is decreasing every week. In view of this situation I intend to ask representatives of holders of Germany obligations in the various foreign countries to convene in Berlin at once and to go into the situation with us and have them consider what would be the best means of meeting the present situation."

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, May 13.—(AP)—Advances were announced today on wide sheetings, some bleached cottons, percales, denims, tickings, and other finished lines. Gray cloths continued firm and advances occurred on brown sheetings. Rayon sales have taken care of June and July output. Burlaps are firm and domestic consumption is increasing. Wool goods are very firm with an upward trend. Silk goods are quiet and steady, influenced by threatened strike in Paterson.

†Officially listed.

Other stocks and bonds are traded on the Curb exchange as "unlisted." They include those of corporations from which the exchange has deemed it unnecessary to require financial statements such as must be filed periodically if listed. The exchange states it investigates at regular intervals the financial status of "unlisted" securities.

*Ex-dividend. EX—First sale since ex-dividend date or dates. ww—With warrants. xw—Without warrants.

LARD TRADE ACTIVE; REALIZING AT TOP

Business in lard was liberal with buying based on an advance in hogs to $5.00. The government monthly stocks of lard were construed as bullish and good advances were made.

Cash lard was up to $6.80, an advance of 12½ cents for regular, while loose gained 5 cents at $6.10, and leaf advanced 12½ cents to $6.12½. Liverpool lard was 3d to 1s 6d higher. There were exports of 602,240 pounds of lard.

Bellies had a good advance with a close of $7.25. Pork loins were firm at 7 to 9 cents, and cash meats generally were in fair demand at higher prices. Prices follow:

HOW A 'CHEAPER' DOLLAR SPEEDS TRADE PICKUP

and with a means for clearing transactions.

Beer continues to play an important part in the revival. Railroads, steel companies, automobile manufacturers, farmers and many others have benefited by the resurrection of this industry.

As for the thousand and one other types of business that have lately been whooping it up no single reason for their recovery can be offered. In each case it is different. But all of this activity boils down to the fact that people have stopped clinging to money and have begun to buy the things they need and want. And as customers buy men are put to work and these workers and their families in turn also become customers.

Other developments of the week have brought cheer to business.

News that the nations of the world have agreed to a tariff truce pending the outcome of the international economic conference which meets in London next month improved the outlook for American exporting concerns.

Prospects for the coördination of parallel railroad lines and the consequent elimination of wasteful duplication of service make the railroad horizon brighter.

What will develop out of the Roosevelt plan for the coördination of industrial effort and the elimination of cut throat competition business men do not presume to guess at this stage. There is general agreement, however, that the proposed legislation is not as much feared as was the scheme it displaced, the Perkins 30 hour week and minimum wage bill.

From the farmer's point of view, the outstanding event of the week was the government crop report, showing the extent of the decline in wheat production. It indicated a smaller crop than any since 1904. American wheat during the last few weeks has been priced almost entirely on a domestic basis.

Is there to be a relapse in prices and in business as there was last autumn after several weeks of steady advance?

Perhaps the best answer to that is another question: Would it be politically wise to have 75 cent wheat in May when the farmer's bins are empty and 65 cent wheat in July when the farmer's bins are full?

And unquestionably the administration has the power to maintain prices at present levels or higher. None of the vast inflationary powers conferred by the Thomas amendment have yet been exercised.

Concerning Audits.

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Edward G. Seubert, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the other day in an interview preceding the annual meeting of his company's board of directors pointed out that audits of corporation books by independent firms of auditors does not necessarily mean that the stockholders' worries are over.

He pointed out that his company has been getting along very well with audits prepared by its own people and that the stockholders have been given an excellent picture of the company's condition.

He added that his company's system had resulted in a considerable saving to stockholders, because the audits were prepared at less cost than a similarly complete report by an independent firm would have cost.

This affords something for stockholders in general to think about. Before long we'll probably have laws forcing companies to hire outsiders to make their financial reports. The trend is unmistakably in that direction. The change in methods is being forced by public demand because of unfortunate experiences in the last few years. Too many companies that audited their own statements weren't as honest as Standard of Indiana.

But will that cure the evils that have caused people to be misled into heavy losses? Probably not.

Legislation will probably help, but wherever there are large temptations there will be people in high places succumbing to those temptations.

The trouble with an audit is that it is necessarily the expression of an opinion—or, rather, of a lot of opinions. And you can't put a man in jail for an opinion.

Certain standards of accounting have been established, but they are by no means clear and distinct. One thing shades into another by almost imperceptible degrees.

The income account shows what a company has done during a given period. A balance sheet is a picture of the condition of a company at some particular time. The figures in such reports are so definite and the arithmetic is so perfect that the reader sometimes fails to remember that they merely represent an attempt to approximate values that can never be exact.

What is a factory building worth? What valuation shall a railroad place upon its right of way? How much shall be set up for losses on bills collectible? What about good-will, contingent liabilities, depreciation, investments in affiliated companies, etc.?

Not long ago the directors of a corporation met to consider three separate audits of their corporation. All were different. All were correct. One was for the directors, one for income tax purposes, and one for the stockholders.

You can take figures too seriously.

BRITISH STAGE BOOM IN STOCKS; KEEP EYE ON U. S.

Inflation and Tariff Truce Chief Influences.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 13.—Following the example of Wall street bulls, the London Stock exchange went on a rampage this week. The swelling wave of optimism gathered daily force, bringing a remarkable revival of activity to the industrial, commodity, and base metals sections of the market.

Prospects of American inflation provided the principal impetus, together with the openly expressed opinion that the tariff truce between America and Great Britain constitutes a hopeful prelude to the world economic conference.

Until recently, interest in the stock markets was mainly professional, but now there is a definite sign that the public is beginning to exhibit some of its former lively interest in the stock markets.

Turns to Speculative Issues.

The gilt-edged and at times the gold shares groups have been rather overshadowed by more speculative securities. Investors now are spreading their purchases over all the leading industrials in the belief that politicians can no longer check the automatic forces of recovery.

The end of the week saw a pause in the upward movement, chiefly as a result of the serious developments in disarmament negotiations. Probably a more generally depressing effect would have been produced but for the "city's" hopes upon the program of the American administration. In effect, a Roosevelt atmosphere constituted a cushion upon which news of the European crisis could fall without producing a conspicuous effect.

The rising trend of commodity prices strengthened hopes that economic conditions in many overseas countries will tend to improve and the result of this was seen in a good deal of speculative buying of low priced foreign government, state, and municipal securities.

Less Pessimism Over Dollar.

Foreign exchanges remain unsettled, although there appears less pessimism regarding the dollar. Roosevelt's statement of policy tended to reassure the market. Holland is most under suspicion among the continental gold countries at the moment regarding its ability to remain on the gold standard.

Gold hoarding still continues a feature of the bullion market, there being a strong demand almost entirely on continental account.

IT'S just off the press!—The Chicago Tribune's 1933 Chicagoland map, surpassing in completeness, accuracy, and convenience all previous editions.

Here's the map that every motorist in Chicago and suburbs should have in his car at all times. No other map of the Chicago territory is so complete, accurate, or informative.

It shows every surfaced, improved, and unimproved road in the territory around the lower end of Lake Michigan, from South Haven to Milwaukee and for more than forty miles back into the country in the states of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin.

Here is the latest edition of a map that represents an investment of thousands of dollars and years of painstaking care on the part of the Tribune to provide far and away the best map of this territory available.

To keep this map up-to-date, the Tribune maintains a complete map making department and a fleet of "checking cars" which actually travel all roads and check conditions and mileages.

No other map is so helpful because no other map receives such careful attention in the making. Get your copy today and see for yourself. Now on sale at the

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Weather conditions played an important part in shaping the trend of the grain markets yesterday. The forecast for generally fair weather over the corn belt for the week-end and reports of rapid progress in spring wheat seeding in the Canadian northwest caused some letup in the general buying movement of several preceding days, and prices eased moderately.

Flood conditions in parts of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, with water soaked soil over the greater part of the corn belt, brought in active buying at the opening of the market and prices were lifted as much as 1 cent over Friday's finish. However, local professionals and scattered longs, impressed by the forecast for clearing weather, turned sellers and brought about a reaction to around the close of the previous day.

Little Change in Corn.

The bulk of the trading in corn was around the previous closing figures, with the finish ⅜ cents lower to ⅛ cent higher. May corn was 45¼ cents at the last, with July, 47 to 47⅛ cents; September, 48⅞ to 49 cents, and December, 50¼ to 50⅜ cents.

Corn planting is seriously delayed, according to A. J. Surratt, agricultural statistician of the department of agriculture for Illinois, who reported that on May 10 plowing ranged from nothing to 50 per cent completed in the state. In recent years 40 to 50 per cent of the corn has been planted by May 15. Planting is expected to continue into June, thus increasing uncertainty over full maturity of part of the crop. The season is believed to be the latest since 1927.

Corn traders regard the market as a weather affair and expect that price changes will be extremely rapid.

Wheat Prices Lower.

Public interest in the wheat market was much smaller than on Friday and with the professional element disposed to await further developments regarding the manner in which the farm relief inflation bill will be administered, prices eased quickly when selling appeared. At the inside July was off 1 cent from Friday's finish, and the close showed net losses of ½ to cent. May was 73¼ cents; July, ¼ to 74⅜ cents; September, 75¼ to ⅝ cents, and December, 77⅜ to ½ cents.

Winnipeg wheat closed ½ cent lower in Canadian funds. Liverpool was ½ to ⅝ cent lower.

Week-end evening up and profit taking was in evidence in other grains. Oats closed ¼ to ⅜ cent lower, May being 26⅛ cents; July 26⅜ cents, and September, 26⅝ to 26¾ cents. Rye lost ¼ to 1¼ cents, with May closing at 56 cents; July, 57⅛ to 56¼ cents, and September, 56¾ cents. Barley was off ⅛ to ¼ cent, with July closing at 37⅞ cents and September at 39¾ cents.

Company's net profit for the March quarter was $91,940 after charges and federal taxes, equal after preferred dividends to 29 cents a share on the common stock. This compares with a loss of $21,541 for the first quarter of 1932.

EGG FUTURES DECLINE

Egg futures declined sharply under heavy selling on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, closing ½c lower. Butter eased ⅛@¼c. Selling in eggs was largely profit taking, although some new selling appeared. A slightly bearish construction was placed on the monthly cold storage report and the daily four market figures showed 20,000 cases more eggs into storage than last year. However, near the close new buying improved. Butter monthly storage reports were considered slightly favorable, but the movement of stocks into the four markets totaled 234,000 lbs. more than last year. Profit taking was in evidence, but new buying was slightly better. Sales: Butter, 71 cars; eggs, 129 cars. Deliveries: Eggs, 10 cars. Prices follow:

Treasures of Antiquity Uncovered at Persepolis, Ancient Persian Capital, by the Oriental Institute

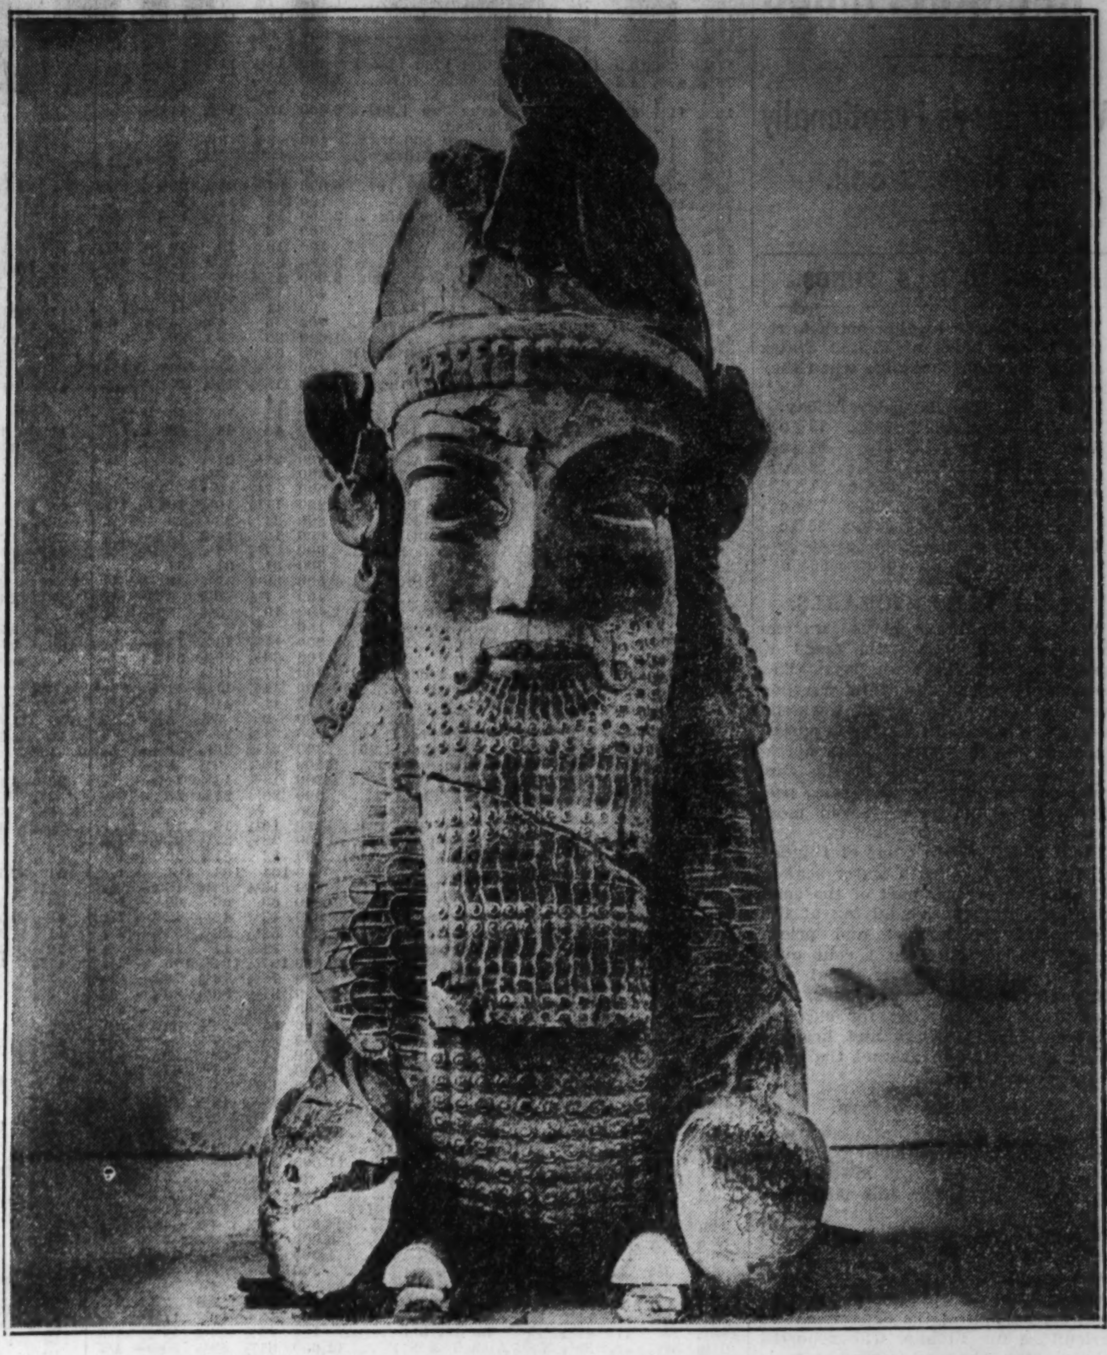
MONUMENTAL STAIRWAY WITH MAGNIFICENT SCULPTURED RELIEF AMONG TREASURES FOUND AT PERSEPOLIS. The northern wing of the Apadana staircase, one of treasures of antiquity dug up at ancient capital of Persia by expedition of Oriental institute of University of Chicago under direction of Dr. James H. Breasted. Many of the reliefs had fallen to the earth and were replaced by means of the tripod hoist shown in the background. The Apadana was the audience hall of the Persian kings centuries before the Christian era.



ONE OF HISTORIC SCULPTURES DUG FROM RUINS OF PERSIAN CITADEL. A crowned human headed bull restored by Oriental institute scientists after discoveries at Persepolis. Conquering Greeks destroyed the empire and Alexander the Great sacked the palaces, but neither Greeks nor time could obliterate this bit of pre-Christian art.

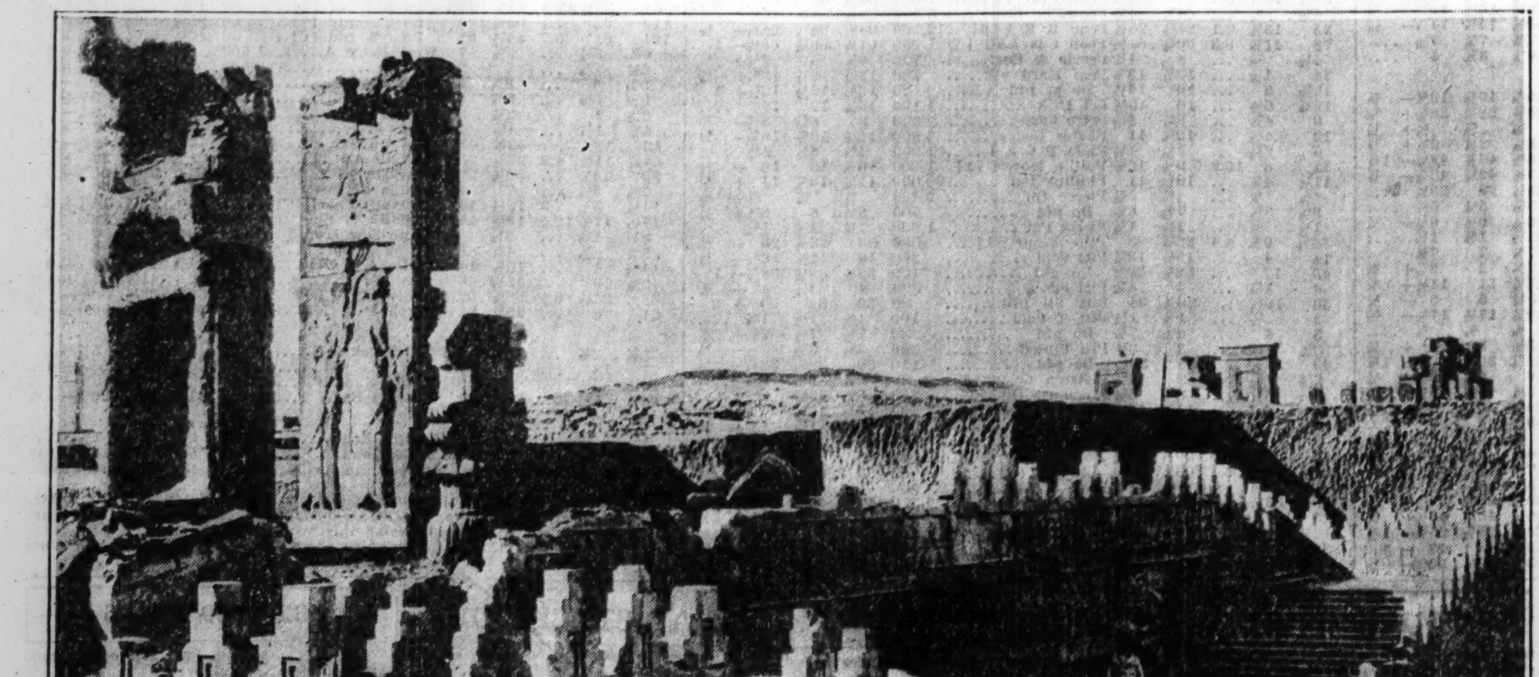
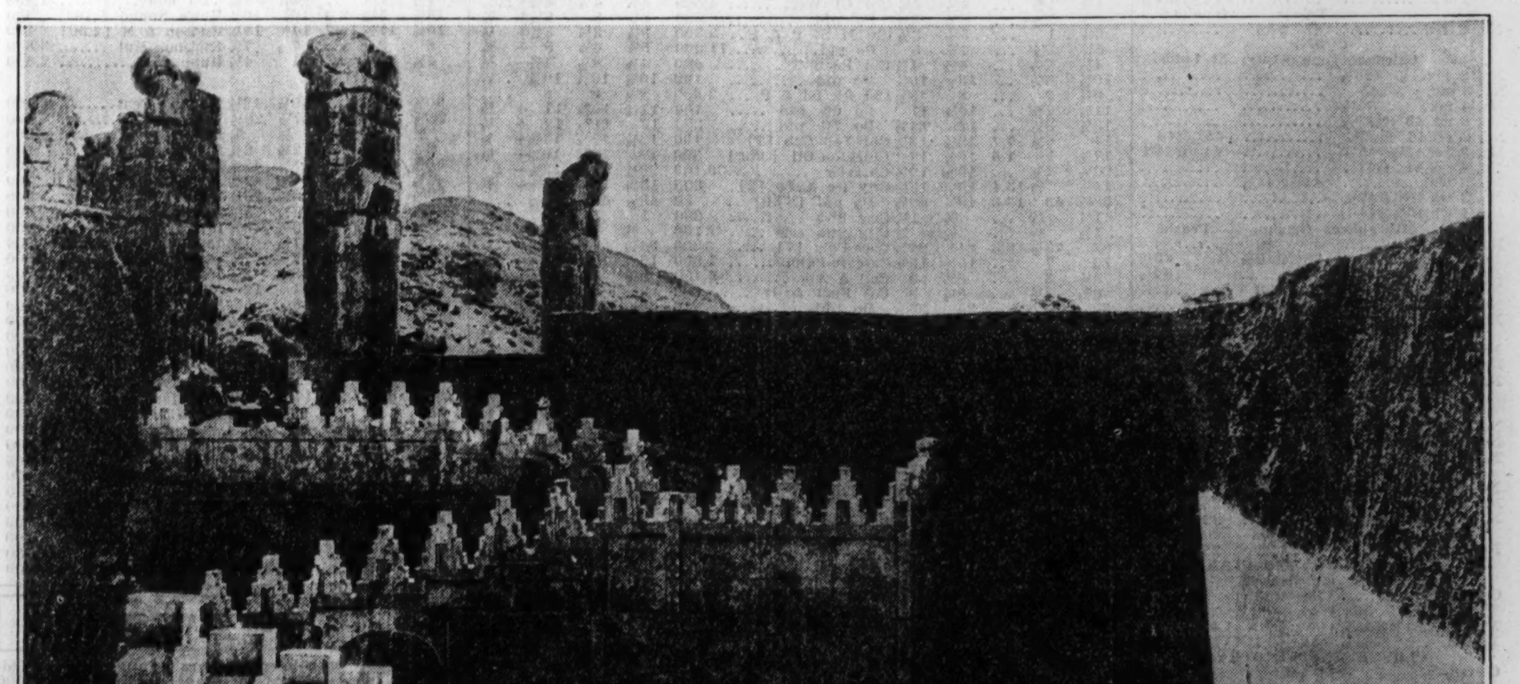
SOUTHERN END OF GREAT APADANA STAIRWAY WITH TRIBUTE BEARERS. Another view of the entranceway to the great Audience hall of ancient Persian kings. It shows the last figures in the tribute procession, which are gift bearers from Kush and Punt, two of the 28 nations controlled by Darius, Xerxes, and Artaxerxes.



NEWLY DISCOVERED TRIPYLON STAIRCASE LEADING TO RESIDENTIAL PALACES OF KINGS. This was the main entrance to the smaller palaces of the kings, which were used on ordinary occasions because they were on higher level than Audience hall. In the center is a relief showing a lion attacking a bull. The staircases are the chief feature of the Oriental institute expedition's discoveries.



ANOTHER VIEW OF THE TRIPYLON STAIRWAY, ENTRANCE TO SMALLER PALACES OF THE KINGS. This view, taken from the Apadana stairway (in foreground), is from the south wing of the main palace. The Persian monarchs built their palaces on an elevated terrace a third of a mile long and a thousand feet wide. The Audience hall was on a lower level than the residential palaces.

Did You Know?

That one of the largest and finest beauty culture schools in the United States is located on Chicago's South Side?

DID YOU KNOW that due to a small overhead we are able to teach you a complete, fully accredited course above state requirements, that would cost you 2 or 3 times as much in the loop for as low as $2 down and $3 a week, inc. set of tools free?

DID YOU KNOW that during the period of your course you save hundreds of hours that could be credited to your course by attending a school on the south side?

DID YOU KNOW that we place our graduates 100%, that you can earn while learning, that we handle from 600 to 800 customers weekly? COME IN AND SEE FOR YOURSELF

From World's Fair to World's Fair, Chicago's Foremost Language School.

Back in 1893, when Chicago had its first World's Fair, The Berlitz School of Languages had already established itself firmly as the city's outstanding language school. Today, forty years later, with Chicago preparing for its Century of Progress Exposition, Berlitz School still remains pre-eminently the foremost school of languages not only in Chicago but the country over as well. Master easily, quickly, by conversation. Take a Free Trial Lesson in French, Spanish, German, or Italian.

Our Men Are "All Set" for PROSPERITY

Remington Rand Salesmen Are Well Paid.

If you are fortunate enough to be one of those selected your success is assured. The coöperation given our men is unprecedented. This constitutes thorough sales training, broadcasts on Chicago's leading station, W-G-N, and many other plans that have been devised to assist and assure our salesmen of above average earnings.

Our men have no trouble keeping up their morale—nor do they have to swallow any of their pride. They are "all set" for prosperity. They are making good money NOW—and they're going to make lots more soon!

This is not an experiment, but a proven, going business. Earnings limited only to your ability to grasp and follow instructions.

We want only men who stick strictly to the truth and who appreciate that steady applied effort is the only key to success. There is no investment required and no house-to-house canvassing. Interviews 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

A CONTRACT

WITH A CENTURY OF PROGRESS has been signed. Our newspaper advertising campaign on DEE'S NEW LEMON TOOTH PASTE will start this week. DEE'S LEMON TOOTH PASTE is one of the finest tooth pastes ever made, both as to flavor and quality. Our preliminary survey has given us practically 100% consumer approval.

We need men and women, and need them badly, with or without cars, full or part time, to call on drug stores, grocers, restaurants, etc.; also men and women to sell to their friends and acquaintances.

Build up a business for yourself NOW. Every user will repeat. This product passes all chemical tests. Cleans teeth thoroughly and leaves a most delightful taste in your mouth.

This is an opportunity to make REAL MONEY at once.

Call at our downtown office for full particulars. Out of town salesmen write for information.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY

There is a shortage of good used cars, as is evidenced by the steady demand which has reduced our own stock. It follows that good used cars will command higher prices. Now is the time to buy, while our selection is good and prices still at low levels.

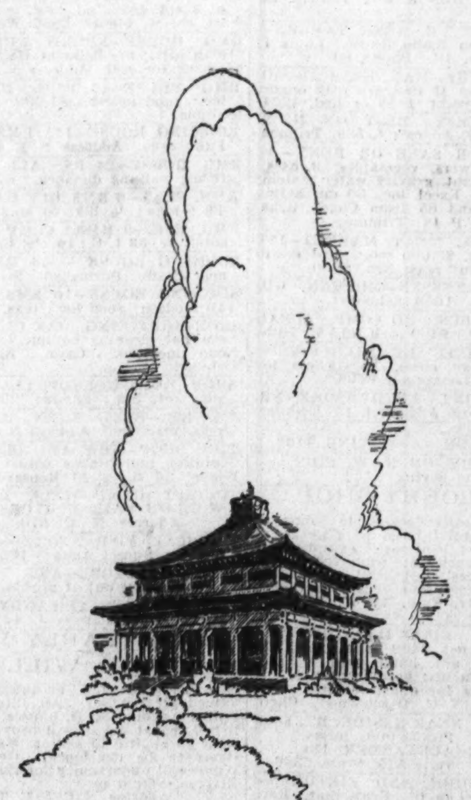
They're coming to the Fair but they don't know where they'll stay!



THE GOLDEN TEMPLE OF JEHOL

This reproduction of a famous Lama temple is made of 28,000 pieces of lacquered wood, put together without nails. It houses a rare laughing Buddha. The temple was made in China and brought to Chicago for the Century of Progress Exposition.

THOUSANDS of families in the five central states wouldn't think of missing A Century of Progress. Even now they are making plans for everything—including places to stay while they're here.

Here's a golden opportunity for landlords who have furnished apartments to rent! Families who plan to bring the children will want homelike quarters. So will the families who plan to come together in one party. Club groups, convention delegates, and vacationers generally, all who have more than a few days to stay, also are live prospects.

Most of these families are strangers to Chicago. But practically all of them know the Chicago Tribune! Throughout the states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and Wisconsin, the Tribune has more circulation, daily and Sunday, than any other Chicago newspaper!

Furthermore, these Tribune families outside of Chicago are the leaders in their communities—people who have the inclination to come to Chicago and the time and money to spend.

Now is the time to start advertising your apartments to these live prospects! Build up a profitable list of reservations among the out-of-town readers of the Tribune, and at the same time, reach far more families in Chicago and suburbs than read any other Chicago newspaper!

SIDNEY SMITH
NOT A LEAF STIRRING - NOT A PEBBLE FALLING - NOT A SOUND OF ANY SORT - LITTLE WOULD ANY STRANGER, PASSING THIS WAY, BELIEVE THAT BEHIND THOSE BOULDERS, PILED HIGH AGAINST THE LITTLE CAVE, ARE MILLIONS IN GOLD AND SILVER HIDDEN THERE BY RED RIGGLES AND HIS LIEUTENANT.
AND LITTLE DO THOSE MOUNTAIN DESPERADOES KNOW THAT HIDING IN THAT VERY CAVE ARE CHESTER AND HIS NEW-FOUND PAL - THEY ARE NOW THE MASTERS OF THIS TREASURE AND ITS PRISONERS AS WELL, THEIR WAY TO FREEDOM BLOCKED BY GOLD -
GEE WHIZ - LOOK AT THE PILE -
THAT CAN'T ALL BE MONEY - CAN IT?
AS THEIR EYES BECOME ACCUSTOMED TO THE GLOOMY SHADOWS OF THE CAVE - AND NO FURTHER SOUNDS OF THE BANDITS ARE HEARD OUTSIDE - THE TWO BOYS CAUTIOUSLY LIGHT MATCHES AND EXPLORE THEIR NEW HIDE-OUT - BEHIND THEM - BLACK AND FORBIDDING, THE PASSAGE-WAY SEEMED TO STRETCH ON AND ON INTO THE MOUNTAIN - CHESTER THREW A STONE INTO THE CAVERN, AND IT SEEMED TO ROLL AND ECHO ENDLESSLY - BUT BEFORE THEM - GOLD! STACKS OF IT - BAGS OF IT! ROLLS OF IT!
WHERE DO YOU SUPPOSE THEY GOT IT?
I'LL TELL YOU WHERE THEY GOT IT - THEY STOLE IT -
GEE WHIZ - JUST TRY TO LIFT ONE SACK - I CAN'T EVEN BUDGE IT -
I DON'T KNOW WHETHER IT'S GOLD OR SILVER - OR WHAT IT IS - LET'S OPEN ONE OF THESE SACKS AND SEE - WHAT DO YOU SUPPOSE IT IS - DOLLARS - PENNIES OR WHAT - WE'LL TRY THIS LITTLE BAG FIRST - IT'S MONEY WHATEVER IT IS -
AND THIS IS THE TREASURE THAT RED RIGGLES AND HIS GANG RESCUED FROM THEIR SHACK, WHICH THE TWO BOYS HAD SET FIRE TO, TRYING TO ESCAPE - REMEMBER HOW CHESTER AND HIS PAL HIDING IN THE CAVE, SAW THE BANDITS PRY UP THE FLOOR BOARDS OF THE OLD CABIN? THEN THEY MOVED THEIR BOOTY, PUT IT IN THE VERY SAME CAVE WHERE THE BOYS WERE CONCEALED, AND BLOCKED UP THE OPENING WITH BOULDERS - GOLD AND SILVER - EVERY BIT OF IT - HOLD UP THE MATCH A LITTLE - LOOK HOW IT GLITTERS - GOOD NIGHT - YOU WOULDN'T THINK THERE WAS EVER SO MUCH MONEY IN THE WORLD -
JUST FEEL IT - LET IT RUN THROUGH YOUR FINGERS - GEE - A WHOLE FORTUNE RIGHT HERE UNDER OUR FEET - GEE - DOESN'T IT SHINE - EVEN IN THIS DIM LIGHT -
GEE - WOULDN'T MY FATHER LIKE TO GET HIS HANDS ON THIS - I'LL BET EVEN UNCLE BIM HASN'T GOT THIS MUCH MONEY -
BOY - COULD YOU BUY SOME SWELL PONIES WITH THAT - AND A SPANISH SADDLE - AND SILVER SPURS - GEE - IF THAT WAS ONLY MINE - I COULD BUY THE BIGGEST RANCH AROUND HERE WITH IT -
IF IT WAS MINE - JUST THINK OF PLAYING SANTA CLAUS WITH ALL THIS MONEY - I COULD BUY TOYS FOR ALL THE POOR KIDS IN THE WORLD - AND COULD I GET MAMA ALL THE JEWELRY SHE WANTED - I'D GET PAPA THAT NEW CAR HE ALWAYS WANTED -
COME ON - GIMME A LIFT - WE HAVE TO HURRY BEFORE THOSE FELLOWS GET BACK - YOU KNOW -
GEE - A $20.00 GOLD PIECE - JUST LIKE UNCLE BIM GAVE ME - AND THERE ARE HUNDREDS OF THEM HERE -
NOW HELP ME OPEN THIS STRONG BOX - AND WE'LL SEE WHAT'S IN IT - IF WE CAN JUST GET THE NEWS ABOUT THIS TO THE SHERIFF - I'LL BET THERE'LL BE A BIG REWARD OUT - HERE LET ME HIT IT WITH THIS ROCK -
LOOK AT THAT STACK OF TEN DOLLAR BILLS - THERE MUST BE $50,000. - IN THIS CHEST - NOW YOU KNOW WHERE WE ARE - DON'T YOU? WE ARE IN A REGULAR ROBBERS' DEN - THIS IS THE MONEY THEY STOLE WHEN THEY HELD UP THE EXPRESS -
DO YOU MEAN THEY ARE TRAIN ROBBERS?
SURE - THAT'S WHAT THEY ARE - REGULAR TRAIN ROBBERS - BANDITS - OUT-LAWS - AND DO YOU WANT TO KNOW HOW I KNOW? BECAUSE I SAW THEM HOLD UP THAT TRAIN - AND THAT'S THE REASON THEY KIDNAPED ME - SO I WOULDN'T BE ABLE TO TELL ON THEM - IF THEY COME BACK TO CATCH US NOW IT WILL BE JUST TOO BAD -
TO BE CONTINUED -

FRIENDS OF THE GREAT UNSEEN AUDIENCE — THE WIMSI, LAUNCHED LAST WEEK AND LADEN WITH SUPPLIES FOR THE JOURNEY TO THE WILDS OF AFRICA, HAS WEIGHED ANCHOR AND IS ON HER WAY WITH YOUR ANNOUNCER, CAPT. SKEEZIX, FIRST MATE SPUD, AND CREW WHIMPY, DOWN THE CREEK, INTO THE RIVER — AND WHO KNOWS WHERE?
GOLLY, IT SEEMS GOOD TO BE ON OUR WAY!
I THOUGHT THE TIME WOULD NEVER COME, WHIMPY.
AN' IT'S ALL DOWN HILL TO THE OCEAN!
WIMSI
GEE, SKEEZIX, I FORGOT THESE RAPIDS.
THEY OUGHT TO HAVE SOME SIGNS UP, SPUD
AN' WE OUGHT TO HAVE THOUGHT TO PUT SOME BRAKES ON WIMSI.
IT TAKES A LOT OF WATER TO PUT US THROUGH THESE LOCKS.
WHAT OF IT? THEY'VE GOT PLENTY.
AN' THERE'S PLENTY MORE BETWEEN HERE AN' AFRICA.
THERE'S THE BIG RIVER!
A THOUSAND MILES LONG AN' NO TRAFFIC COPS.
AN' PLENTY OF PARKIN' SPACE.
WOW, A STEM WINDER!
NO IT ISN'T, IT'S A STERN WHEELER.
IF SHE WAS GOIN' OUR WAY WE'D GET A TOW.
GO EASY, WHIMPY.
THESE BIG BOATS WEAR BAD RUTS IN THE RIVER.
NOW WE'LL DRAW CUTS TO SEE WHO TAKES THE FIRST WATCH.
WE'RE DRIFTIN' PAST A TOWN.
THEY'VE GOT A SEARCHLIGHT ON US.
GO TO SLEEP, YOU KIDS. THAT SPOTLIGHT IS FOR ME.
WEREN'T WE IN LUCK TO HIT THIS ISLAND JUST AT BREAKFAST TIME!
I'LL BET TOM SAWYER AN' HUCK FINN STOPPED HERE.
GEE! WE'RE WAY UP ABOVE THE HOUSETOPS.
I DIDN'T KNOW THIS WAS AN ELEVATED RIVER, SKEEZIX.
YOU'RE ON THE LEVEE, SILLY.
WIMSI
LOOK FELLAS, A HITCH—HIKER.

Little Orphan Annie
AW, GEE WHIZ- I GET TO FEELIN' AWFUL LONESOME, SOMETIMES-
I S'POSE, AFTER ALL THESE YEARS, I OUGHT TO BE USED TO BEIN' JUST AN ORPHAN- STILL, WHEN I SEE OTHER KIDS WITH REAL PARENTS---
COURSE I'D NEVER LET ON- I'M NO SOFTY- I DON'T EVEN LET MYSELF THINK ABOUT IT, VERY OFTEN-
HUH! LISTEN TO THAT YOWLIN'- I KNOW HIM, AND IT'S A CINCH HE EARNED ALL HE GOT- HE'S THE KIND THAT DOESN'T 'PRECIATE HIS FOLKS-
BAW! YEOW! I'LL RUN AWAY-
SHUX! WHY SHOULD I FEEL SORRY FOR MYSELF? I'M NOT TH' ONLY ONE ON EARTH, WHO ISN'T 'ZACTLY SATISFIED WITH EVERYTHING-
LEAPIN' LIZARDS! DID YOU EVER SEE SUCH PRETTY WILD-FLOWERS, SANDY? THOUSANDS AN' THOUSANDS OF 'EM-
COURSE I'LL BE CAREFUL NOT TO PULL UP ANY OF 'EM- BUT PICKIN' TH' BLOSSOMS DOESN'T HURT 'EM, AND THEY'LL MAKE A SWELL BOUQUET FOR MRS. FUTILE-
SHE'S AWFUL GOOD TO ME- WHY, I GUESS SHE'S ALMOST AS GOOD TO ME AS IF SHE WAS MY REAL MAMA- AND SHE HASN'T ANYONE ELSE TO 'MEMBER HER, ON "MOTHER'S DAY"-
GUESS WHAT I'VE GOT FOR YOU, MRS. FUTILE-LAND O' GRACIOUS ANNIE- SOMETHING FOR ME? WHAT COULD IT BE?
A BOUQUET- ER, YOU KNOW TO-DAY IS "MOTHER'S DAY"-
ANNIE! FLOWERS- WHY, THOSE ARE THE FIRST FLOWERS ANY BODY EVER GAVE ME SINCE I WAS JUST A GIRL-
WHY, MRS. FUTILE- YOU'RE CRYIN'- I'M AWFUL SORRY- DON'T YOU LIKE TH' FLOWERS?
LIKE THEM CHILD? OF COURSE I DO- BUT HOW CAN YOU UNDERSTAND? YOU'VE NEVER WANTED SOME ONE, WHO WAS REALLY YOURS, ALL YOUR LIFE, AND THEN FOUND SUCH A ONE-
I DO TOO UNDERSTAND- GEE- WHAT A DUMMY I'VE BEEN-

WELL, WELL- IF THERE ISN'T OLD EMORY GRIT, THE SCISSORS-GRINDER-
HOWDY, EMORY- KEEPIN' BUSY?
NEVER SEEN ME OTHERWISE BUT BUSY, DIDJA? NEVER WAS ONE TO LOAF- NOT ME-
AIN'T HAD A VACATION IN FORTY YEAR, AND PROUD OF IT- GOT NO PATIENCE WITH LOAFERS, I AIN'T-
THERE'S CHARLEY CHITTER- HE GETS ALONG WITH LESS WORK THAN ANY BIRD I EVER SAW-
HE'S NOT AFRAID OF A JOB, BUT HE SAYS NO JOB WILL EVER GET THE BEST OF HIM-
NOTHIN' EVER SEEMS TO WORRY CHARLEY- WHAT'S HE UP TO, NOW-
GREAT SCOTT- A TEN DOLLAR BILL-
AND IT WAS JUST LYIN' THERE, ALL TH' TIME-
YEP- AS I WAS SAYIN'- I'VE GOT NO USE FOR SO-CALLED EASY GOIN' FELLERS- HARD WORK THAT'S THE TICKET-
HUMPH- EMORY NEVER SAW THAT TEN SPOT. LYIN' THERE RIGHT IN FRONT OF HIM- KEEPIN' YOUR NOSE TO THE GRIND STONE IS O.K., BUT IT DOESN'T HURT TO LOOK AROUND, NOW AND THEN-

THE HIGHWAY'S RIGHT UP HERE ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE FENCE - WE'LL LEAVE 'IM THERE.
BELIEVING THAT STEVE, THE TRAMP, WAS DYING - AND NOT WANTING TO HAVE A DEAD MAN ON THEIR HANDS, THE TWO MOUNTAIN OUTLAWS WHO TOOK STEVE TO THEIR SHACK, REMOVED HIM TO THE SIDE OF A WELL-TRAVELLED STATE HIGHWAY AND LEFT HIM — TO BE FOUND AND PICKED UP BY PASSERS-BY.
GREASY - THAT WAS A GREAT IDEA!
LAYIN' THAT TRAMP'S CARCASS ALONG SIDE THE STATE HIGHWAY WAS A GREAT IDEA, GREASY - WHEN YOU THOUGHT THAT UP, YU WERE USIN' YER NOODLE! NOW THAT TAKES HIM OFF OUR HANDS.
SI, SENOR, ZE GRINGO HE NO GOOD TO US, DEAD.
IF HE'D ONLY BEEN ABLE TO TELL US MORE ABOUT THAT RICH OLD GUY THAT LIVES UP ON THE CLIFF! HE MUMBLED SOMETHIN' ABOUT A KID, TOO, AND A LOT OF MONEY - BUT I COULDN'T MAKE HEADS OR TAILS OF IT.
ME NO SAVEE EITHER. HE SAY WATCH OUT FOR DETECTIVE HUMPH!
MEANWHILE - AFTER BEING PICKED UP FROM THE ROADSIDE - THANKS TO A GOOD SAMARITAN, STEVE FINDS HIMSELF WITHIN THE WHITE WALLS OF A HOSPITAL CONSIDERABLY IMPROVED BUT EXTREMELY WORRIED AND MIGHTY NERVOUS.
CHEE - I GOTTA GIT OUTTA HERE! I GOTTA GIT OUT! IF IT'S EVER DISCOVERED WHO I AM - - - I'M SUNK!
BUT I WANT TO GET UP - I TELL YOU - - I AIN'T STAYIN' HERE NO MORE - WHERE'S ME CLOTHES?
OH - INTERNE! INTERNE!
YOU'RE A SICK MAN AND YOU'RE STAYING RIGHT HERE - UNDERSTAND? EASY NOW - LIE DOWN THAT NIGHT
SO DEY TINK DEY CAN KEEP ME HERE - - LIKE DIS - - EH? WELL I'LL SHOW 'EM - - DEY HID ME CLOTHES HERE IN DIS CLOSET BUT I'LL FIND 'EM.
HURRIEDLY DONNING HIS TATTERED CLOTHES, THE TRAMP CAREFULLY RAISES THE WINDOW, TAKES ONE LAST LOOK AROUND AND —
NO-NO - YOU CAN'T GET UP - GET BACK TO BED! YOU'RE A SICK MAN - -
OH YEAH? TAKE A TASTE OF THIS TELEPHONE RECEIVER AND DECIDE WHO'S SICK!
STAND WHERE YA'RE, DOC! I HAD A KNIFE HID IN DE LINING OF DIS COAT AND I CAN LAY IT STRAIGHT BETWEEN YER EYES FROM WHERE I STAND!
YEAH?
YOU! TRACY!
YEAH, IT'S ME, STEVE! - AND JUST TICKLED TO DEATH TO SEE YOU! I READ ABOUT A WOUNDED TRAMP BEING PICKED UP ALONG THE ROADSIDE OUT HERE - AS I WAS ON THE TRAIN GOING EAST. I TOOK THE NEXT TRAIN BACK AND WAS JUST COMING UP THE HOSPITAL WALK WHEN I SAW YOU RAISE THAT FIRE-ESCAPE WINDOW - YOU KNOW, EVER SINCE YOU LEAPED OVER THAT CLIFF AND WE WERE UNABLE TO FIND ANY TRACES OF YOU IN THE VALLEY BELOW, I'D BEEN WORRIED.
BUT I'M A SICK MAN - I CAN'T LEAVE THE HOSPITAL - DON'T WORRY - YOU'RE NOT GOING TO LEAVE THE HOSPITAL - YOU'RE JUST GOING TO GRADUATE TO A BIGGER ONE - IN THE FEDERAL PENITENTIARY!
STICK OUT YOUR MITTS!

HEART TROUBLE ME EYE! HER HEART AIN'T NEAR WHERE SHE'S COMPLAININ' OF THE PAIN, KAYO
THAT'S JUST WHAT'S THE TROUBLE. MY HEART'S MOVED!
HUMMM! HAVE YOU FOLLOWED THE DIET I PRESCRIBED FOR YOU ON YOUR LAST VISIT, MRS. MULLINS?
CERTAINLY, DOCTOR.
ARE YOU SURE YOU ATE EVERYTHING I ORDERED
EVERY-THING!
NOTHING ELSE?
NOTHING WHATSOEVER, DOCTOR.
EXCEPT OF COURSE MY REGULAR MEALS!
CERTAINLY I KNOW YOU TOLD ME IT WAS JUST A CASE OF STUMMICK ACHE AND A LITTLE SODY WOULD CURE IT- WHAT OF IT?
WELL, I DON'T SEE WHY YOU HAD TO GO PAY A DOCTOR MY LAST TWO BUCKS TO TELL YOU THE SAME THING, SUGAR.
YOU GO IN AND GET SOME GROCERIES, WILLIAM, I DON'T FEEL EQUAL TO ARGUING WITH NO DUMB CLERKS TODAY.
VERY WELL. MY DEAR LITTLE GIRL.
COME PET- WE ARE GOING TO DO OUR MARKETING ELSEWHERE
OKAY.
I TOLD THE GROCER I'D PAY HIM FOR THEM GROCERIES NEXT WEDNESDAY AND HE SAID I COULD COME GET THEM THEN WHEN I PAID FOR THEM
SUCH A NERVE!
HEY YOU!
BUT MY DEAR SIR- I DON'T KNOW WHAT YOU'RE TALKING ABOUT! I ORDERED NO BANANAS.
LISTEN YOU PAY ME FOR THAT BUNCH OF BANANAS RIGHT NOW OR I'LL—
WHAT NOW, MRS. MULLINS ANOTHER ATTACK OF INDIGESTION??

"Is there, when the winds are singing
In the happy summer time,-
When the raptured air is ringing
With earth's music heavenward springing,
Forest chirp, and village chime,-
Is there, of the sounds that float
Unsighingly, a single note
Half so sweet and clear and wild
As the laughter of a child!"

French Travel Togs Can Stay or Go

Several-Wraps Outfit Choice of Ultra Smart

Summer Suits Take Trio of Blouses; Patterned Tweeds Supplant Plain.

By BETTINA BEDWELL

PARIS.—(Special.)—One of the big reasons why women stay home is travel clothes. The magnetism of far horizons that pulls the hearts of us all fails to spark when most of us are faced with that Alpine problem of special clothes. We can wangle the trip all right, but a trunk full of clothes that will be useless at home is just too much. The blithe burbling of the clothes scientists these many seasons has turned heaps of women away from the poster-hung office of the travel agency, and this turning back has brought about new ways of traveling and new rules for dressing.

Today there are no such things as genuine travel clothes. Only one-half of one per cent of the women who are style-conscious travel enough to indulge in such things. Nobody but a clothes fanatic is going to spend time and energy on outfits to wear so rarely.

Modern Travel.

And in addition to that the means of getting around the world have changed mightily. Ocean liners turn themselves into sunny beaches at the top, while their interior life is given over to the pursuits we follow at home—movies, bridge, dancing, and what not. Trains imitate hotels and do it well, and street clothes do perfectly for the highways of the air.

Going-away clothes, therefore, are chosen out of the army of casual sports clothes that are on tap as daytime styles everywhere. One keeps a weather eye out for materials that are immune to wrinkles, and that's about all.

The practical topcoat made of tweed is an essential of the long trip, but a coat like this ripens and improves with age and can be worn at home as well as abroad. The cut of such coats remains about the same year after year; that is, mannish and buttoned up, with a comfortable collar and pockets. Parisiennes like their topcoats of plain piece dyed tweed when they have to wear them a long time, but checkered or other small patterned tweed is a bit smarter this summer.

For Trip-wise Women.

The suit or the jacket ensemble is another essential of travel, and it is rather imperative to have one this season whether you go or stay put. The trip-wise woman often picks the suit because it is easy to achieve transformations with blouses, but you can do wonders with a simple dress and a jacket if you equip yourself with scarfs, lingerie sets, gloves, and such details in plenty.

One of the greatest transformation tricks of the season is the jacket. Ultra-smart women in Paris are going in more and more for the one dress, several wraps ensemble. One well cut, simple dress can do with a swagger jacket, a bolero, and a cape, and they don't have to match. A crash jacket, an organdy bolero and a silk cape will make one dress good for most occasions on shore and are a real boon to the limited wardrobe.

The suit this summer should have at least a trio of blouses, especially for travel. Something knitted in wool or cotton accord-

Below: Augustabernard uses bone buttons to fasten a coat dress of silk crash. A little standing collar, a big taffeta bow, and shoulder points are additional notes of chic.

Romans Really Knew How to Make Salads

The Piquancy of Side Dish Increases When It Is Prepared at the Table.

By MARY MEADE.

ANTONINUS (or was it Aurelian?) was bored. Too many parties were calling for too many clean togas and far too much high eating. That banquet, for instance, last night at Augustus'! No keeping a figure with that sort of fare! And as for preserving a sensitive palate . . !

Now, if there were only (mused Antoninus to himself) something to be done with crisp green herbs . . . some sort of dressing. Olive oil, say, and a squirt of lemon. Then just a hint of salt and spices. Why, that was it—he'd try it!

So, tucking back his toga, he set to work, eyes gleaming hopefully. A great bowl, first, and a fork. Then oil, lemon juice, and spices. Now the crisp herbs to be tossed and turned. Finally the try-out. And how that food-weary soul must have smiled as he lifted from the bowl before him that essense of piquancy—the world's first salad!

Centuries of Salads.

And since then—centuries of salads! Legions of strange taste-ticklers have joined the ranks. Beast, bird, and fish, not to mention platoons of fruits and vegetables are elbowing for recognition.

Yet with all this competition, where gourmets gather and palates need thumping, Roman salads still reign supreme . . . and the hand that stirs the bowl rules the feast!

So try it. Fresh salad-bowl salads may, by a stretch of the imagination, be prepared in the kitchen and imported to the table. But I hope yours isn't. An ex-football captain and a crack life-guard I know both delight in officiating behind their own salad bowls—so you see it can be a man's job. A few rehearsals in the kitchen and any husband can do it. Or if husbands are at a premium a bachelor lady may perform the feat and treat supper friends or luncheon guests in this most epicurean style.

The system is simple. First the bowl. It should be large and chilled and it prefers to be gayly colored and designed. On one side of the salad maker are the salad greens heaped invitingly on a platter. On the other side stand the oil and vinegar, previously measured and residing, if you have such, in one of these delightful double-barreled and cross-stemmed cruets designed to hold both oil and vinegar without spilling one as the other streams out. There, too, are assorted condiments, each in its own nubby little shaker—marked neatly to avoid confusion.

A Suspicion of Garlic.

Now for the action. Place a wee bit of cut garlic on the prongs of a fork and run it merrily about in the cool bowl. Just a piquant suspicion of a taste—no more. Then pour in the oil and the vinegar.

Add what experience will soon teach you is the perfect proportion of seasonings. Then briskly, but as silently as you know how, whip all these together with a fork. When the dressing is well mixed, drop in the greens, a few at a time, and toss expertly over and over till every little crinkle glistens with oil. Now, with the aid of a salad fork and spoon—lovely wooden sets of them come

Should Child of 3 or 4 Attend Nursery School or Stay Home?

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

I CAN still see the little blond relative of mine finishing his poem of the wild adventures of the mouse family. After many verses he wound up with, minus a front tooth:

"'Home ith the beththt!' thaid the five littul mith."

So, we decided yesterday about the 2 year olds: That home is the best place for them, better than the best nursery school. As The Five Little Mice also felt!

But what are the advantages and disadvantages of home and the nursery school for the 3 year old and the 4 year old? What decision should parents come to who have money and leisure for their

Let It Be Out of Sight, Out of Mind For All the Old Loves

By DORIS BLAKE.

CLINGING to memories of an old love at the risk of making a failure of their marriage, it appears, is a commoner habit than we realized. A recent disclosure made by a wife who robbed the first three years of her marriage of happiness by keeping alive an old flame in her heart brought out a number of similar experiences from readers.

"Women," says one Awakened Wife, "certainly can make trouble for themselves beyond all human calculation. Here was I married to a man worth his weight in gold. Yet he never did a turn for me, never gave me a hug or kiss, but I was off in dreamland with at pleasantly low prices—lift out a serving around, letting each drain an instant over the bowl before transferring it to the waiting salad plate.

So that's our pattern in general. But "greens" may mean anything: "seasonings" come in wide varieties; and French dressing is just as orthodox done with lemon juice as with vinegar. So let's wax specific.

ROMAN SALAD.

1 medium head lettuce
1 bunch watercress
12 small red radishes
1 clove garlic
(French dressing)
1 tablespoon vinegar
3 tablespoons oil
¾ teaspoon salt
⅓ teaspoon paprika
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
Dash of pepper

Shred and crisp the lettuce. Clean and pick the leaves from the cress and chill. Scrub the radishes, cut them in thin crosswise slices, and crisp in cold water. Plant the bit of cut garlic firmly on the prong of a fork and have it ready. Chill a good sized salad bowl. Now take to the table the bowl, fork with garlic, a salad fork and spoon, and the vegetables gayly arranged on a cold platter. Pour the oil and vinegar into separate cruets and have them at hand. Place the seasonings in a small dish or if you are an expert eye-measurer place the shakers on the table.

Then to serve. Blend the vinegar, oil, and seasonings vigorously with a fork and when well mixed drop in the salad ingredients and toss lightly till coated with dressing. Drain out and serve up for a festive supper or a knowing little luncheon.

But now begins the fun, for our watercress-lettuce-radish combination is only one of the many bright thoughts an agile imagination will express. Bright substitutions or additions are tender asparagus tips, thin sliced beets, pepper rings, chopped pimiento, sliced stuffed olives, sliced hard cooked eggs, or chopped celery tops. Or, if you long not so much for vegetables, cut up fruits, minced fish, or diced meat may any of them have a place in a perfect salad bowl experience.

MORE SALAD BOWL SALADS.

1. This one adds a peanut flavor that is a bit out of the usual. Simply blend shredded cabbage, slivers of green pepper, diced celery, and chopped peanuts in desired proportions and dress in the salad bowl as directed above.

2. Another variation calls for cucumber, green pepper, onion, tomato, and radish all sliced very thin and tossed together in the chilled salad bowl. Use lemon juice French dressing made as directed for the vinegar dressing above.

3. Or shred raw carrots and blend them with cubed tomatoes, finely minced onion, and shredded lettuce. Toss in French dressing in a salad bowl.

4. Diced beets, minced onions, and shredded cabbage, with a little lettuce for lightness, make another delectable salad-bowl salad.

ITALIAN SPRING SALAD.

Celery, cut small
Shredded escarole or romaine
Ripe tomatoes, cut in bits
Diced hard cooked eggs
Grated parmesan cheese
French dressing
A salad bowl

Toss the celery, shredded escarole or romaine, tomatoes, and bits of egg in the French dressing in the usual salad bowl style. The cheese should have been added to the dressing during its mixing.

TANGY VEAL SALAD.

1½ cups finely diced cooked veal
2 tablespoons minced pimiento
1 green pepper, chopped fine
2-3 cup cooked string beans, cut small
French dressing, made with a dash of cayenne
A salad bowl

Prepare the French dressing in the salad bowl, which has been lightly rubbed with garlic. Toss the other ingredients in it. Serve with an accompanying curl of lettuce.

CRESS AND PINEAPPLE SALAD.

Pineapple tidbits or sliced pineapple, cut small
Water cress
French dressing made with lemon juice

Prepare the pineapple and drain. Add the crisp watercress sprigs and toss in the salad bowl in French dressing which has been made with lemon juice.

BEAN SALAD.

(Which Is Much Better Than It Sounds.)

3 cups boiled navy beans, well seasoned
½ cup sliced red radishes
2-3 cup shredded crisp lettuce
¼ teaspoon onion juice
Ripe olives
Water cress
A salad bowl
French dressing

Prepare the French dressing at the table in a salad bowl which may have been lightly rubbed with a bruised garlic clove. Add the beans, lettuce, onion juice, and radishes. Add two ripe olives and a sprig of cress to each plate as you serve it.

Salad Dressing with Mineral Oil.

1 cup mineral oil.
1 egg yolk.
½ teaspoon mustard.
Pinch of salt.
Little pepper.

Mix the egg yolk with the salt, pepper, and mustard in a cup with an egg beater. To this add slowly, drop by drop, the mineral oil. If the dressing should be too thick it may be diluted with white distilled vinegar. If a tart taste is desired add six teaspoons of lemon juice, or an amount of vinegar that will give the required tartness. This dressing should be flavored to taste, just as is any mayonnaise. It may be used freely and the caloric content disregarded.

OUT OF SIGHT, OUT OF MIND FOR THE OLD LOVES

that old flame. The wonder is my husband stood for my coldness. But I got my awakening when the old flame bobbed up and I got a glimpse of him in the light of realism. My dreams of him had been bred on pure fancy—only the kind of thing that a woman with not enough to do and a husband who doesn't bat her over the head to put some sense there has the time to enjoy. The old flame proved a low cad, I'll explain, without burdening you with the details of his caddishness."

Old Flame Proves to Be Totally Without Glamour.

The trend of all the volunteer communications shows the old flame, if not caddish, at least dull and totally without the glamour an idle woman's fancy crowns him with. Indicating that if any other married women are moping around hankering after a love now out of the running, perhaps looking up this old flame and seeing him in a comparative light with the husband at their sides, they'd come out of their dreams quickly. The illusion would be dispelled, as in M. C.'s case:

"I had been married four years," Mrs. M. C. tells, "to a man who is good and kind. I will admit we had misunderstandings, quarrels, but as I look back on them now I see that they were largely due to my not being able to forget my first love. Not forgetting him, I did not try to adapt myself to this man I married. I could not make him feel that in me he had the true friend and sweetheart he hoped for. He knew about this first love, whom I shall call Bob.

"Many were the times when I yearned so for Bob that I thought it would be worth most anything just to be able to see him. I surely felt that no grief or trouble of any kind could be as great as the bondage of being unable to forget a love that could not be.

Invitation Reveals Character of Old Friend.

"Meanwhile rumors had reached me that Bob was running wild. I refused to believe them. I felt that people did not understand him, had never given him a chance.

"It so happened that I ran into him accidentally one day. He was with his wife. He married a year later than I did. I was completely surprised a week later to get a letter from Bob. Then he phoned me and asked me to attend a party—but without my husband. He said he could promise me one grand time. His wife would not be there. My husband wouldn't be—so what was to prevent us from having fun.

"The invitation was a shock to me. Bob knew me as a person to whom honor came before love. I would not have thought of cheating on my husband, no matter how disloyal my thoughts may have been to him all the time. I didn't think of this then as disloyalty to tell the truth. I had myself visualized as a sort of martyr. I felt pretty hurt that Bob should think the years had changed me and my ideals. I took his phone call as an insult.

"All the years I had thought that Bob, no matter what other faults he had, would be true to any one whom he really loved, and besides I did not care if he was weak in other ways—I loved him for himself alone. However, when I found out how he would think nothing of cheating on his wife (whom he was supposed to love very deeply, as he made several sacrifices in order to marry her), and that he would not hesitate to place me, who had been one of his most loyal friends, where my reputation could be attacked, I realized what a fool I had been. The man had no conscience, no morals, no character.

Looks Back Regretfully on the Wasted Years.

"I sat down and thought the thing out and came to the conclusion of what I really wanted out of life—not a cheap love affair with an old flame, for that is what it would have eventually turned out to be if I had gone with him; not a wild, furtive life, but a peaceful, orderly, and respectable life where I would not be afraid to look any one in the face.

"On looking back I see how foolish I had been and how many years of happiness I might have possessed if I only had been able to drive him out of my thoughts long before, and if I had not been so blind and weak as to always think and yearn for him and be ever willing to help him in any way I could if he ever needed it.

"I do not know whether in this long tirade your reader will be able to find anything of help to herself, but I sincerely hope that she does, because I for one know what hell on earth it is for one to feel she is in love with one whom she thinks that if things had been different she might have married. I hope she wakes up before she loses everything that can make her life worth while—her kind husband, home, respectability, and contentment.

"If in her case the man she loves is all that is good and fine, then there is this to consider. Under her present condition, if she had a chance, what must she undergo to get him. Is all the sacrifice worth it, and would the broken lives which would be a sure result of her fight for him be worth what she would attain in the end? And does she think that she herself could come out of all that unscarred? MRS. M. C."

MARY MEADE PRESENTS:

PASTRY

DATE PIE

Is Even Better Than It Sounds

¾ cup pitted dates
2 cups milk
2 eggs, well beaten
⅓ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon nutmeg

Cook the dates for about 20 minutes with the milk in the top of a double boiler. Press them through a sieve and add the egg and seasonings. Turn this date custard into an unbaked pie shell and bake in a moderately hot oven (375° F.) for 12 minutes. Then reduce the heat and continue baking in a moderate oven (350° F.) until firm (inserted knife comes out clean).

Clip on the dotted line, mount on a card; mounted, the recipe just fits the new Mary Meade Recipe File . . . If you haven't one of these files, you may obtain one (containing 133 delightful recipes) at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn Street. Price 26 cents. By mail, 34 cents.

Problem of the Nursery School and Child of 3

Mrs. Bevans Lists Advantages of Group Activity, and of the Home.

children? Or those who live in moderate circumstances? Or those who both have to go to work?

Listing Child's Needs at This Age.

Perhaps, instead of trying to answer these questions, it would be more helpful to doubtful parents if we listed here the various things the child at this age needs, and to what extent the home can supply these needs. Let us do it in a businesslike way:

1. One of the essential conditions of a child's life is a sense of security and affection. Many psychologists tell us that an absence of this can often develop in a child a feeling of unsureness which, in turn, is the basis for shyness and our old friend—or enemy—the inferiority complex. The home, naturally, is the only and indeed the ideal place for the child to get this sense of security and affection. The nursery school does not attempt to supply this, but rather, as one writer puts it, to "extend the child's sense of security in his own world." [The italics are mine.]

2. Companionship. The child needs the companionship of children of his own age. Those only a year older or younger can only partly satisfy him. In the home, therefore, where there is more than one child, the need is not fully met. The nursery school answers this need, for children are grouped according to age, or should be, and they therefore have the companionship of their peers.

Furniture Scaled to Their Size.

3. Playthings. Children need furniture and fixtures scaled to their size, space to be rambunctious, "messy," and noisy in; and—most important of all—the proper toys and playthings. At this age this means: Sandboxes, toys that are simple and strong, tools to develop skills, and blocks, and so forth, to develop imagination— slides, swings, and other apparatus to develop sureness and daring. The average home can supply some of this, more than you realize unless the will is there, but not all, whereas the nursery school can supply it 100 per cent.

4. The proper handling and development of the child. Mothers vary in their knowledge of handling children. Some have an intuitive knowledge, others are completely at sea, while still others can learn by diligent study and observation. Sometimes unless we are closely in touch with our children we are not even conscious of their deep needs, or else we are too busy with our other duties to feed their hunger.

The expert and sympathetic nursery school teacher knows all children and handles each one differently, according to his needs. A knowledge of the child's background, family life, his physical makeup, and so forth, are taken into account. Also, there is an impersonal or dispassionate quality about her management that a mother can rarely achieve. She is too centered on one child, too involved in the whole family picture to sound, sometimes, the impersonal note which has its healthy reaction in evenness of temper.

Serene Atmosphere Is Helpful to Child.

Stoddard says: "One of the greatest assets of the nursery school is a serenity and lack of undue strain which, even with knowledge and good will, it is not always possible to maintain within the home." Don't we know it?

In the home the child and his activities have to fit in, to a greater or less degree, with the routine of the home and to the demands of other members of the family.

The nursery school, because of its specially trained teachers, can supply the child's naturally thirsty and creative mind with opportunities for development that the untrained mother may not be sufficiently conscious of. Spontaneous, simple dramatics, oral expression, music, color, drawing, the study of nature and animals, all are creative and enriching—a realization of the potential qualities in a child.

Both Nursery School and Home Are Needed.

In conclusion we might sum up by saying:

[a] That there are definite advantages in the fine nursery school that even the most ideal home conditions and the most intelligent and understanding parents cannot supply.

And on the other hand:

[b] That there are definite advantages in the home that even the most ideal nursery schools cannot supply.

Therefore:

[c] A half day at a nursery school and the remainder of the day at home is an ideal combination, under ordinary circumstances.

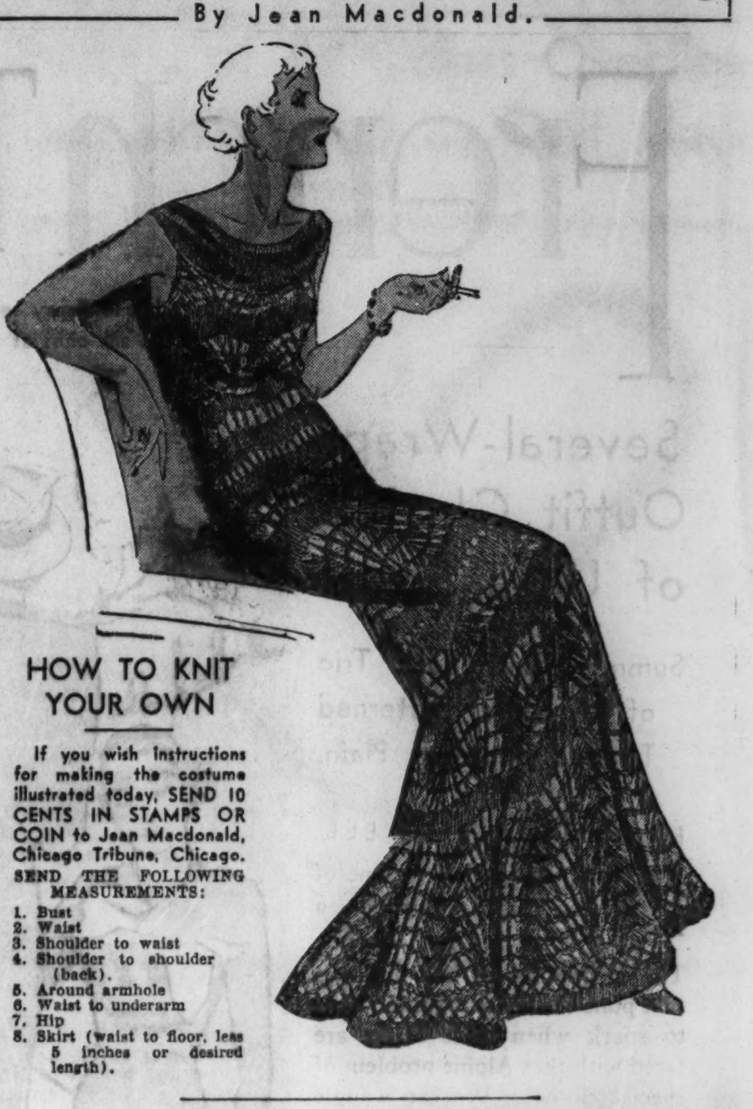
NEWER COVERS FOR DRESSES WATERPROOF

IT'S just about time for the winter wardrobe to be packed away, and just about time to invest in some of the new dress covers. Particularly worth while are the new waterproof shoulder seam covers to be slipped over gowns as they hang in the closet. They come in all colors, in a durable fabric, and protect the shoulders and bodices of dresses or coats hung too close together.

Fashionable Summer Ensemble Can Be Knit from Humble String

By Jean Macdonald.



HOW TO KNIT YOUR OWN

If you wish instructions for making the costume illustrated today, SEND 10 CENTS IN STAMPS OR COIN to Jean Macdonald, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. SEND THE FOLLOWING MEASUREMENTS:

1. Bust
2. Waist
3. Shoulder to waist
4. Shoulder to shoulder (back).
5. Around armhole
6. Waist to underarm
7. Hip
8. Skirt (waist to floor, less 5 inches or desired length).

THERE is no limit to the lengths string will reach since it has become an integral part of feminine dress. There is nothing that cannot be made with the fine yarns and threads on the market today, from smart, well fitting and durable day wear to the filmiest of evening gowns. The fashionable woman's wardrobe runs the gamut of heavy wools through boucles to string, linen, rayon and mercerized threads, and cotton, as is illustrated today by a lovely Mallorca blue evening dress. This dress is an outstanding example of what can be done with string. The fine threads give the same real lace effect as the finest of French handmade laces.

The graceful fullness of the skirt, the slim lines from waist to knees, and the flattering bertha collar form a most desirable ensemble for the warmest summer evening. It may also be knitted as an afternoon dress by shortening the skirt. A rich velvet girdle at the waist that matches the slip and contrasts with the gown would afford another Parisian touch.

Made on a No. 5 circular needle and a pair of No. 3 straight needles (for a medium knitter), this new evening dress may be completed in ten days, though the slow worker will find a bit more time necessary. Laundering is a remarkable feature of this string. It washes easily, and in the drying the only conditioning necessary is laying the garment out flat and pinning it down, because string does not stretch.

The slenderest purse can afford it and the smartest dancing party welcomes it.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Sally Asks You to Place Your Discarded Garden Tools at Disposal of the Destitute That They May Help Themselves.

By Sally Joy Brown.

THE "back to the soil" movement which started in the White House is spreading in ever-widening circles. Cities and their suburbs are utilizing available soil and forcing it to bring forth its riches to supply the needs of the destitute. The federal move to provide employment and at the same time improve our natural resources is being echoed throughout the country. Various communities are putting their unemployed members to work raising crops and preserving them for food for the coming months.

Thus men are provided with healthy work and a feeling of partnership in the common enterprise, vacant lots are magically transformed from disreputable eyesores to living green fields of vitamins A, B, and C.

One of the local groups which have taken up this idea has appealed to me thus:

"Dear Miss Brown: Would it be possible to secure some discarded garden implements through your column? This mission for homeless and destitute men has been donated a liberal portion of ground to utilize as we see fit in the raising of vegetables for our use. We have in our three institutions several hundred persons—men, women, and children—whom we supply with food, clothing, and shelter independent of the organized reliefs. If equipment could be secured there are sufficient men available here to produce the greater part of our needs in garden produce.

"Thanking you for many past favors, D. W. C."

We have also received numerous requests for similar tools from individuals who have decided to inhabit the small houses formerly used only for vacations in county districts. Living in the city is expensive when one is without income, and small properties are being rehabilitated and put to use. So if you have any old rakes or hoes, or anything else of use to gardeners, please pass them on and help these people help themselves.

"Dear Miss Brown: I know a young girl who is absolutely destitute. She recently left the county hospital after a serious operation and since that time has been living with me. I am unable to provide more than a home and nourishing food and she is badly in need of clothing, including dresses, size 18 or 20, and shoes size 4½C. I am able to sew and would be happy to make over anything offered. "MRS. B. E."

Won't you help Mrs. E. take care of this girl?

"Dear Miss Brown: I have seven goldfish of three different species I should like to give to anyone interested in having them. MRS. C. A."

Here's a nice offer for someone who'd like to acquire such pets. Write to Mrs. A. in care of this office. Letters will be forwarded to her for selection, and the recipient will be notified. Please do not telephone.

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I have been a patient in a tuberculosis sanitarium for some time, and have reached the end of my financial resources. I am unable to purchase razor blades, and I thought perhaps one of your readers might have a straight edged razor he no longer needs. Sincerely, W. J. F."

Mr. F. writes from a hospital in Wisconsin.

Here's a note from a director of one of our large public shelters for men. Perhaps you can help him:

"Dear Miss Brown: Our shelters are full of men with much time on their hands. Some of the more active ones will be out playing games on empty lots, such as soft ball, volley ball, and horseshoes. Others will continue their reading and card playing and passive games such as checkers, dominoes and chess. Cards wear out quickly. Other games lose parts, jig saw puzzles especially.

"Twenty-five thousand men can use a vast quantity of material but the kindness and generosity of our many friends has been of great assistance to us in our efforts to provide some means of time occupation in these long empty days of idleness.

"Our needs include everything that any one uses to occupy his leisure time. So when spring cleaning this season, if there should be anything laying around that you wish to dispose of, say the word and we will be glad to call for it. Very sincerely yours, G. F. P."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am partially deaf, but was trained in a special school and am able to play the cornet. I was a member of the school band, but the instruments were the property of the school and since graduation I have been unable to play. I'm 18 years of age and there aren't many things I can do because of my handicap, but I'm sure I could get work with a band if I had a cornet. J. T."

This young man lives several hundred miles from Chicago.

"Dear Sally: My little boy, who has been very ill, has been begging for a train. My husband is in a tuberculosis hospital, and I have no extra money, not even enough to buy the toy my son so often asks for. He's only 3½ and just doesn't understand why he can't have one. MRS. M. M."

I'm sure some of our readers have some discarded toys on hand; if so, won't you please let me send you Mrs. M.'s address?

New Spring Lingerie Has Gone Merrily Feminine

Dainty Ruffles Flutter from Nightdresses

Lace Trimmed Sets and Combination Garments Ideal for Trousseaux.

By Rhea Seeger.

SOME of the new spring showings of lingerie remind you of certain sentimental valentines. With bow knots, lace that frills from falling sleeve ruffles, satin sashes and sheer materials, it's no time to hunt for tailored simple things. The doubt grows larger on every shopping trip concerning the chance of finding any of the former dull stuff in any shop or store in town.

Spring lingerie is as new and as merrily different as it has been in years. You will find soft pink nightgowns edged with innocent looking net flounces, sleeves of abbreviated net circles, and lovely transparent net yokes. Ruffles have settled on practically every new spring nightie—even some of the less masculine pajamas have ruffles. The one piece of important underlayer totally neglected by the rufflers is the costume slip . . . for no other reason than that some part of the silhouette must be smooth and unwrinkled for the dresses that are beruffled from waistline to hemline.

Trick new slips are now priced for battle scarred allowances that have been nursed through fits of depression, financial anemia, and hectic bank holidays. For that matter, all the newest undergarments have price tags that are positively unbelievable.

Dainty Flowered Gowns with Posy Wreaths.

The daintiest of flowered nightgowns, made with coy young sleeve ruffles, a hem ruffle, and two wreaths of pink posies, can belong to any small budgeteer. The same fetching model is available in sky blue and white, with the smallest of nosegays printed in soft pastel tints against the plain colored background.

Slip and panties, carefully matched one to the other as to silk, lace trimming, and bias seams, are delightful get-togethers that make summer dressing problems vanish. A complicated model to describe is the costume slip made in one piece with well designed panties. The costume slip has a deep shadow hem and every seam has been cut on the bias, likewise the plain tailored panties. The top of the slip fits like a brassiere and can be worn with all your black frocks that have cowl necklines.

One store has the grandest collection of superlatively fashioned white silk crêpe costume slips on display, really outstanding numbers that are finds for the revealing fashionable cotton frocks. Most of these slips are made with simple fagoted bandings around the brassiere top. Most of them have shadow hems and all of them are fashioned in the fitted bias manner. You also can find some lovely lace trimmed slips, with the top of the "bra" edged with narrow val lace, and the center chest section decorated with fine handwork, usually a spray of flowers embroidered in silks.

Fit Flawlessly Under Most Clinging Gowns.

Somebody should take a couple of weeks and write a volume about pants and panties. You can find the shortest, briefest, scantiest things ever devised. You can find sheer numbers trimmed with bound edges. You can find gleaming satins in white, flesh, and pastel colors, skillfully cut and fashioned to fit flawlessly under the most clinging gowns. You can find silk mesh affairs that can be crushed in one hand, and, last but not least, you will discover all the trick new affairs of rubberized silk and satin disrespectfully called "Gandhi pants."

These smooth numbers double for all foundation garments. Some of them have garters, others do not. Some are mere confiners of misplaced bulges, and some pinch hit for brassieres, panties, and corsets, being a long, smooth, all-in-one, such as illustrated in sketch No. 6. This model can be selected in tea rose pink, flesh, and black satin with a "bra" of ecru Alençon lace.

Even though you haven't the slightest wish to swish down the middle aisle with any of your cavaliers, May is the month to buy lingerie for trousseaux or for spring and summer wardrobes. Some of the moderately priced new things, seldom found in such profusion, have been sketched.

Exquisite Garments from a Chicago Collection.

No. 1 shows the back of one of the most eye-filling nightgowns of the season. The garment has an amazingly low price tag and could be used as a delightful dance dress in case of need. Flesh colored silk is made just like an evening gown with fluttering shoulder bretelles, and then laced down the back to form a deep V is a pale blue velvet sash that ties in a bow and trails on the floor.

No. 2 is another sheer nightgown with a deep yoke of Alençon lace. Petals of the blue triple voile form the interesting shoulder caps, and the lace turns over in the back to form lapels.

No. 3 is the fresh, young, gay printed silk nightgown, either in white, blue or flesh, made with ruffled sleeves, a hem ruffle, and two wreaths of matching posies over the shoulders.

No. 4 shows the costume slip with fitted panties to match. Both are trimmed in ecru Alençon lace.

No. 5 is a lovely turquoise blue satin nightgown contrasted with matching blue chiffon. The flounce is slit to the knees at both sides and the deep yoke of chiffon is appliqued with satin flowers.

No. 6, the newest rubberized satin skin fitting all-in-one, is the perfect supersmooth foundation garment for small silhouettes from 32 to 36.

No. 7 is the trick combination of bias cut shadow hemmed costume slip and matching bias cut panties.

No. 8 shows the two newest trifles, also for sapling-slim shoppers. At the left is a rubber and silk crêpe pantie that lots of modern mermaids wear under swim suits as well as under dance frocks. At the right is the two-way stretch rubber girdle with a frill of silk mesh that doubles briefly for panties.

Every model sketched is tagged with moderate price marks and is from a collection of new spring lingerie featuring all the small details, such as satin adjustable straps, new trimmings, and contrasts of color and materials.

French Travel Outfits Possess New Versatility

ing to where you're going, something in dark checkers or gay stripes, and a plain material blouse that will contrast with your suit in color.

Many of the most distinguished women in Paris are wearing the slightly different topcoat shown at the center both for traveling and for practical occasions. The coat is from Madeleine Vionnet and is made of clear black and white checkered tweed. In these colors it serves with simple dark silk frocks on cool days, and is inimitable for a trip. This coat has a standing collar that joins its revers and it fastens on three ball buttons of green prystal. The black leather belt is fastened with three silver slides and the ample sleeves are three-quarter length with a slanting tuck near the bottom.

The black slouch fabric hat is from Reboux. The slip-on gloves are of white piqué. To be correctly gloved, such a coat needs also a pair of black suede or kid slip-ons and several pair of white washable gloves.

Linen and Silk Ensemble for Town and Travel.

In the upper left hand corner is shown a Lucile Paray ensemble that is smart for town and for the traveler during halts. The simple dress is made of navy blue silk crêpe. At the back of the blouse are two wide set-on bias bands that make a V, with unstitched loops just below the shoulders. The bands are stitched to below the hipline with two sets of loops. These bands become scarf ends at the neckline in front and have rough white linen ends tacked inside them to make the knotted scarf.

The knee length coat is of rough white linen and is fastened at the neck by the bow of the dress, or may be worn open. The sleeves and patch pockets are corded. Lucile Paray makes another coat just like this in dark blue and thus gives the ensemble a very wide scope of usefulness.

Across the way on the right is a little French number that gives good service to the traveler and the stay at home. It is a coat dress from Augustabernard and is made of a silk crash in natural string color. It buttons up the front on honest bone buttons and gets its chic from its little standing collar and big yellow string and black taffeta tie and the points on the shoulders.

Stunning Color Combination from Jane Regny Salon.

Sketched at the lower left is a smart Jane Regny suit that can go anywhere in chic. The plain skirt and longish loose jacket are made of checked tweed in light and dark gray. The pockets are set in under the front panels of the jacket, which has no fastenings. The skirt buttons up the center front just below the waistline on bone buttons. The short sleeved blouse is made of Bordeaux red rough silk and buttons down the back. This combination of color—Bordeaux red and gray—is stunning, and in addition Regny makes a shirt of dark gray linen to complete the suit.

The lady reclining on the lower right is going away via the P. L. M. in a Goupy jacket ensemble. The chemisier dress is made of green and grege checkered semi-sheer wool, with the skirt quite simple and tubelike. The jacket is green and collarless, with black buttons that can fasten it up to the neck or can be left unbuttoned to make big revers as sketched. This jacket comes slightly below the black leather belt, and its sleeves are buttoned up to the elbows on black buttons. The sailor hat is made of the same stuff as the dress. See it hanging up?

Youthful Styles for Spring Chic in Every Detail

When Made at Home, the Cost of Pretty Clothes Always Pleasingly Low.

By Clotilde.

IF you wish to appear slender you can't do better than make a dress by pattern No. 3129. The deep scalloped yoke is pretty and slenderizing, while the similar skirt treatment has a tendency to narrow the hip line. Still another detail that makes for slenderness is the draped bodice with its rather deep V.

The waist extends below the removable belt to the scalloped edge and forms a yoke effect to the two piece circular skirt. At the center front of the yoke is a slashed opening, and through this is inserted a knotted tie. This is an attractive detail and is especially pretty if the tie is made of the dress material—assuming that the yoke and sleeves will be of a contrasting color.

The long sleeves are in one piece, and are gathered into narrow bands at the wrists. These bands are concealed by turned-back cuffs of the dress material, finished with a scalloped edge. If you prefer, you can make short sleeves, and finish these with scalloped edges.

The skirt is quite full at the bottom, measuring for size 36, about 2⅝ yards.

Scalloped edges are not difficult to do, but like any work that is well done, time has to be taken to do the work carefully. Three-quarter inch wide strips of true bias should be cut and sewed on by hand. Take a narrow seam, and clip the depth of the seam at the corners. Make a tight turning and hem down over the first sewing.

The scalloped edges are turned in an even seam's width and basted down over the waist and skirt. These edges should be overcast together on the wrong side and stitched from the right side twice—once close to the edge, and then ¼ inch above.

A navy blue silk crêpe with a plain toning silk, or a beige would be smart.

Jumper type dresses are fine for small girls, and the one made by pattern No. 3375 is especially attractive looking. It's typically French in its shoulders, turn-over collar, and prettily grouped skirt plaits, and it isn't a bit hard to make.

Linen, piqué, broadcloth, and wool challis are ideal materials for the jumper, with a tiny checkered batiste for the guimpe, and the cuffs and collar of organdy. Perhaps you will prefer short sleeves, and in this pattern they are gathered into narrow bands. A yellow piqué jumper, with white Swiss, dotted in yellow for the guimpe, or blue linen with blue and white dimity will either one be adorable.

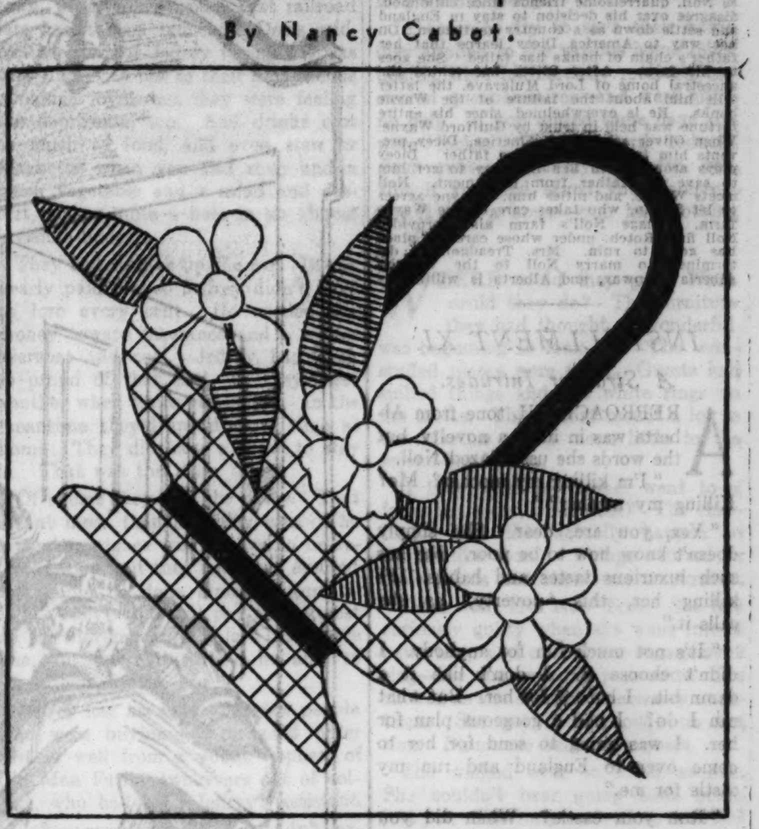
Pattern No. 3401 is for a simple but smart one piece dress, easy to make and to wear. Back and front are each cut in one piece, and at the neck in front there is a slash. This is bound and finished to close. An attractively shaped collar finishes the neck, and the short sleeves are shirred across the top, gathered at the bottom, and set into narrow bands. There are grouped tucks front and back that make the dress fit well at the waist, and a removable belt of the dress material finishes it.

Hyacinth blue crinkled silk crêpe made the original dress, and other colors such as carrot-red, spring green, gray and lovely printed crêpes are other suggestions.

Flowers of All Colors Overflow Graceful Basket in Quilt Block

By Nancy Cabot.



FLOWER BASKET.

AN interesting new basket design is the "Flower Basket," helping to fill the constant and growing demand for floral quilt patterns. Flowers in sprays, clusters, baskets, or urns are ever popular and ever beautiful. In this illustration the basket is cut and pieced of a checked material. It may be quite as appropriately pieced of a plain material, but with a handle of darker or contrasting color. Naturally the leaves are green, but the posies themselves may be made of any and all colors.

The Uphill Road

By Rupert Hughes

The Story So Far:

Dicey Wayne and Oliver Treadgold, known as Noll, quarrelsome friends since childhood, disagree over his decision to stay in England and settle down as a country gentleman. On her way to America Dicey learns that her father's chain of banks has failed. She goes to his farm. After Oliver has rented the ancestral home of Lord Mulgrave, the latter tells him about the failure of the Wayne banks. He is overwhelmed, since his entire fortune was held in trust by Guilford Wayne. When Oliver returns to America, Dicey prevents him from annoying her father. Dicey plays around with Ben Laraway to get him to save her father from indictment. Noll meets Wayne, and pities him. Wayne agrees to let Stefan, who takes care of the Wayne farm, manage Noll's farm also, provided Noll fires Rotch, under whose care his place has gone to ruin. Mrs. Treadgold is determined to marry Noll to the wealthy Alberta Shipway, and Alberta is willing.

INSTALLMENT XI.

A Stranger Intrudes.

A REPROACHFUL tone from Alberta was in itself a novelty, but the words she used dazed Noll.

"I'm killing my mother? Me? Killing my mother?"

"Yes, you are, dear. She simply doesn't know how to be poor. She has such luxurious tastes and habits. It's killing her, this 'poverty,' as she calls it."

"It's not much fun for anybody. I didn't choose it. I don't like it a damn bit. I hate it for her. But what can I do? I had a gorgeous plan for her. I was going to send for her to come over to England and run my castle for me."

"Run your castle? When did you have a castle in England?"

"I thought I had one there, but it turned out to be in Spain. I was never any good at geography—or finance, either. Anyway, I had paid a hundred pounds down and signed a preliminary contract to take it."

"How perfectly too marvelous! Tell me about it."

"There was a white peacock. There were white swans, too; but you expect swans and white ones. A white peacock, though! And it walked up what had been an ancient private chapel that had fallen over in ruins."

"Ruins! How I love ruins."

"You ought to love me then for I'm ruins."

"I do."

This was so unexpected and direct that he did not know how to handle it, so he pretended not to have heard it. Alberta went on:

"Your mother was crying over what you suffer more than her own hardships. You're killing her, Noll. Why don't you take that castle and take your mother over with you? Get her out of this hell hole of America."

"It's a beautiful thought, Alberta, but I can't afford to think it. Where in hell could I get money enough even for the steamer fare?"

Alberta kept a silence that cried louder than words. Then, seeing that it got her nowhere, she said:

"I'd like to live in that castle, Noll. Your mother and I get along beautifully together."

"I don't quite get you."

"You could," she whimpered, pouring sirup out of her eyes. Noll got her. He gasped:

"My God, Alberta! Are you proposing marriage to me?"

"It's leap year, isn't it?"

Noll was as confused as an 1830 virgin hearing her first proposal. He wanted to whimper: "Ask mama."

"Think it over," said Alberta and was gone.

Noll had to leave the house and get out into the woods to laugh. Yet when he got there, he did not laugh. It was another of those numerous farcical things that ought to be funny, but are not quite.

HE had read numberless stories, seen no end of plays in which the beautiful heroine married some unloved man in order to save her father from poverty or disgrace. But here was the wild parody on all of them. Giving the women the vote and the prerogatives of men had turned the world so topsy-turvy that it was possible for a mother to want her son to marry a rich woman in order to save the family from ruin. He tried to laugh it off but the glum thought insisted:

"What's so funny about it after all?"

In marrying Alberta, he would not be faithless to his love, for he had no true love. He would not be selling his soul for luxury or ease in preference to honest work. There simply was no work. There were no jobs to be had anywhere, no wages of any sort. Eight or ten million Americans were out of a job and those that had jobs were working on part time.

He wandered about the thicket. He sank to an old log and lighted a pipe and held counsel with himself. Looking into space with unfocused eyes he dreamed himself marrying Alberta, he imagined the honeymoon, the life with her in an English castle, Mulgrave Towers. Those foreigners did not object to a man marrying for money. They were older and wiser than the Americans—suddenly he could see Dicey's scorn, hear Dicey's outspoken contempt.

In his letter Mulgrave had asked Noll if he had married Dicey yet! What could be a sillier question? And yet a life with Dicey as his wife would be as exciting as a cloying life with Alberta would be deadly. Dicey and he would probably slaughter each other before the honeymoon was over. But there would be no dull moments.

He tried to imagine a honeymoon with Dicey, to picture her melting in his arms and swooning with amorous bliss. It was simply unimaginable. But marrying Alberta would be all too imaginable.

The newspapers were still full of Wayne. They excoriated him. They repeated that the grand jury was considering his case and might report an indictment at any moment. Anonymous letters filled his mail, demanding fortunes, threatening bullets, bombshells, infernal machines. There seemed to be a safety in numbers for nothing happened but hard words. Dicey thought of her father's assailants as mad dogs and wanted to kill them all. But she could not go to them and none of them had come to her—yet.

Suddenly the hatred in the air seemed to be soothed by the long awaited snow. It came in a gentle sift all night, all day. The black mud, the weeds, the bare trees and rocks, and all the nakedness and emaciation of nature were clothed in white and blessed in the white beautitude of snow. When Noll struck out for the Wayne farm to borrow a piece of equipment from Stefan, all his dogs followed. But the war with the Wayne pack had never ended and he drove them home for fear of a battle at the boundary wall. When he reached the wall and vaulted it, he looked back across the pasture to make sure that no dog was with him. He started off up the hill and noted a spatter of little tracks dotting the broad sole marks he had left and only then looked down to find that the corgi was at his heels.

Noll loved him for his incorrigible fidelity. It had been a bitter blow to Paddy when he crossed the ocean to find a pack of barbarian dogs claiming his master's love. His master was not what he had been led to believe; but Paddy, though deceived, did not feel that he was absolved from being a one man dog, just because his master was not a one dog man.

Noll ordered him back to the home grounds, but Paddy, pretending not to understand, tried clownish diversions, groveling appeals, stark disobedience. Noll explained:

"You'll be torn to pieces over here. Go on home, I tell you!"

He had finally to pick the corgi up, set him down on the other side of the wall and forbid him to follow. Then he climbed the Wayne hill and vanished into the woods. Every time he looked back he saw Paddy sitting on the wall, waiting, making a feint at following, pleading to be called. Noll pushed on, childishly reveling in the privilege of setting the first footprints in the new snow.

SUDDENLY he was struck in the back of the head by a huge snowball that broke and sent a fragment down his neck. As he danced and squirmed wondering who dared grow so familiar, another shell struck him.

He stooped and beat together a white grenade and wrung it hard, but when he looked about for the hidden assassin he caught sight of Dicey, at work on another snowball. Something withheld him from giving her the full power and accuracy of his aim.

She looked astonishingly pretty in the snow. It was like the gauze that softens the camera for the moving picture jades. Noll could hardly so much as pitch the snowball at her and he made it miss. Jinka pursued it and worried it. The snow was like catnip to him. But Dicey was offended:

"In the good old days you used to flatter me by throwing at me as hard as you could, and when I put ice down your neck, you put ice down my neck."

"That's as near the Golden Rule as we ever came."

"But I liked it. I love to fight you."

"Anything to oblige you, sister."

He made up a huge soft football of snow and pursued her through an orchard. He caught her finally but the snow was jiggled away and he had just enough left to push down her back. She fought him hard—as hard as she could, lacking the old time hatred of him. But when he had her in his arms and held her fast so that she could not escape, it seemed suddenly far worse than childish to send ice sliding down her spine. The thought of her long spine strangely thrilled him. He could feel that she was strong and lithe inside her heavy coat. Inside there she must be very white and beautiful. Her cheeks were as red as her lips. He could not help kissing her.

SHE straightened and stared at him, astounded, not knowing how angry she ought to be. She questioned her very senses:

"Did you kiss me?"

"Yes, and I'll do it again."

"You dare!"

"Don't brothers and sisters kiss?"

There was something more diplomatic than convincing about this interpretation, but she accepted it rather than profane the benediction of the snow with a wrangle.

"O! All right. Here's mine."

She kissed Noll sisterly, but he was more troubled than before. She said:

"And now that you're here, Brother Oliver, won't you do me a great favor?"

"An errand to run already?"

"Sort of. Won't you go to the house and have a little visit with father? He's so sick of talking only to a fool girl. You're a fool man but he loves you. He got a batch of threatening anonymous letters today, and some not anonymous. He is crushed with misery at being so hated. Won't you go talk with him?"

"Why, of course. I'd love to. You keep out of sight and I'll go to the door and ask for him, as if it were my own idea."

"That's wonderful. I'll do something for you some time. If your mother wants to talk to me, for instance." She broke into a laugh and Noll laughed, but sadly. Why must women war so incessantly on women?

Dicey squeezed his arm and said:

"Run along and talk to father. I'll keep out of the room, but I'll be blessing you."

Noll jogged through the orchard, and through the stable yard, and past the garage to the house, rang the bell and formally asked Haddon for Mr. Wayne. Haddon was pleasantly shocked. Wayne was delighted:

"Noll! There you are, my boy. Mighty nice of you to call. And you're thrice welcome. The snow shuts me in, smothers me a little. Come into the living room. This hall is ice cold. I'll shut the door."

Noll had a thought that Dicey would probably be sitting out in that ice cold hall, but she had assigned him to a rôle, and he said politely:

"I was immensely interested in what you were telling me about finance and politics. I wanted to hear more."

Noll only pretended to listen to what the banker was saying. His mind was shuttling from theory to theory as to what was implied by the dumbfounding fact that he had kissed Dicey Wayne and had found her a woman capable of being loved, and of loving fiercely. She had been only a handsome cat in his eyes, her romances mere flirtations, dissipations which he had assumed to be at best a reckless, unscrupulous hunt for new sensations. Suddenly she had been delivered into his arms as a warm, fond body, a luscious lipped woman who could be loved with a holy love. It terrified him. He tried to shake off his excitement and listen to her father, who was saying:

"I've shed tears of blood over what my country has suffered. It's like a battlefield filled with mangled dead and with wounded soldiers calling for help. I was one of the generals and I lost my battle and I've got to take the blame, and the curses, and reproaches of the people I'd have died to save. But this horrible thing mustn't happen again. Such a ghastly defeat—and it broke right in on such a glorious victory! We were bragging that we were going to end poverty forever; and we made it universal. They said they were going to abolish poverty and it was a typographical error; they abolished prosperity."

The door bell rang sharply, there was a noise in the hall, an angry barking of dogs, the menacing snarl of the wolfhound, Jinka's yip, Dicey's sharp angry protests, and against her expostulations the strange gnarring sound of a human voice hardly human, more nearly that of a wild animal, a gorilla in mad wrath. Then a scream of terror and rage from Dicey. Noll ran to the living room door and flung it open. Wayne lumbered after him. But Noll, when he saw what he saw in the hall and heard what he heard, closed the door after him and held the knob fast against Wayne's efforts to turn it.

Opposite Noll and leaning against the front door, holding it shut against the pack of dogs outside who were leaping at the iron grill protecting the glass, stood a man who looked to be an escaped maniac.

In his hand he held a pistol. With it he threatened the big wolfhound struggling against Dicey's grip on his collar. While the hound's lips twitched back from his long white fangs, in his throat there was the whirring snarl of a rattlesnake's death warrant. Jinka, with the courage of a lion and the menace of a lap dog, dashed at the invader and, evading his kicks, tried in vain to force his little teeth into the man's ankles.

BEFORE Noll could ask a question the answer was given in the hoarse words of the stranger:

"I want to see Wayne. I'm goin' to see Wayne. I'll kill anybody or any dog that stops me. I'll kill Wayne like a dog unless he gives me back the money he stole off me. Tell him John Garside wants to see him."

As Dicey hung all her weight backward on the wolfhound's straining neck, her voice was flung from her body as it was flung about with Gilhooley's plunges:

"You can't see my father, Mr. John Garside. He never stole anybody's money. Go on away before my dog tears you to pieces. I can't hold him."

"I ain't afraid of your dog or anything. I'll stop him with a bullet the first jump he makes and I got plenty more bullets—the last of 'em for myself if I don't get what I came for."

Noll had never seen an insane man, but he had always felt that he would be uneasy in the presence of one. He was. He had always been diffident, too, in the presence of loaded weapons. But something in him, conceit, or snobbery, or something, had always made the fear of showing fear his supreme fear. He might be a coward, but he would never seem to be one. In the presence of Dicey Wayne especially he would have died rather than betray terror. But he had come upon the situation so abruptly that he could not at once adjust his wits to it. Dicey was trying to get rid of the stranger without bloodshed. She was repeating:

"I tell you my father is not here. He's in New York."

"That's a lie, lady! I just came from New York and I just saw him through the window. He's in that room and I'm going into it." He turned to Noll, "Get out of my way, young fella, or I'll drill you."

Noll tried to laugh the man down and to overawe him with a deep bass voice at the same time. He got the effects completely mixed:

"Ha, ha, ha! put up that popgun or I'll—I'll——"

He really could not imagine what he could do if Garside did not put up the popgun. If he let it pop—Noll could feel holes going through him in all sorts of inconvenient places. But there was Dicey—always on the spot at the wrong time, damn her! And now he had to die to spite her! The wild man sneered at Noll's threat:

"Well, what'll you do if I don't put up the pistol? You pink faced pansy! What'll you do?"

This was pretty bad. Noll had been called nearly everything, but never a pansy. He lowered his voice to its deepest bass:

"Pull that trigger and see. You couldn't hit anything anyway, you dirty bastard!"

"No? Try me once, sweetheart. One step more and——"

The pistol barrel swung from the wolfhound to Noll. He could see into it. It was the least attractive sight he had ever seen—and it would be perhaps the very last. Yet a man can't degrade himself to worshiping and obeying a mere leaden pill. The important thing is that he shall not go out in vain.

NOLL remembered his days at football. He had never been a power player, but his speed had given him occasional success with flying tackles. They were against the rules this year, but so was this pistol play. Holding fast to the door knob with one hand back of him to keep Wayne from walking into danger, Noll crouched, braced his feet and figured in a rattled way that if the bullet caught him in mid-air it might kill him, but it could not stop him. It was only a .22 he imagined. His impetus would carry him over on the opposing player in a smothering crash that would smear him on the floor. He hoped that his last strength would be spent in fastening his arms about the arms of the man that carried the ball. Then Dicey could do the rest, Dicey and the dog.

But Dicey, seeing what Noll was planning, was shrieking:

"Noll! No, no!"

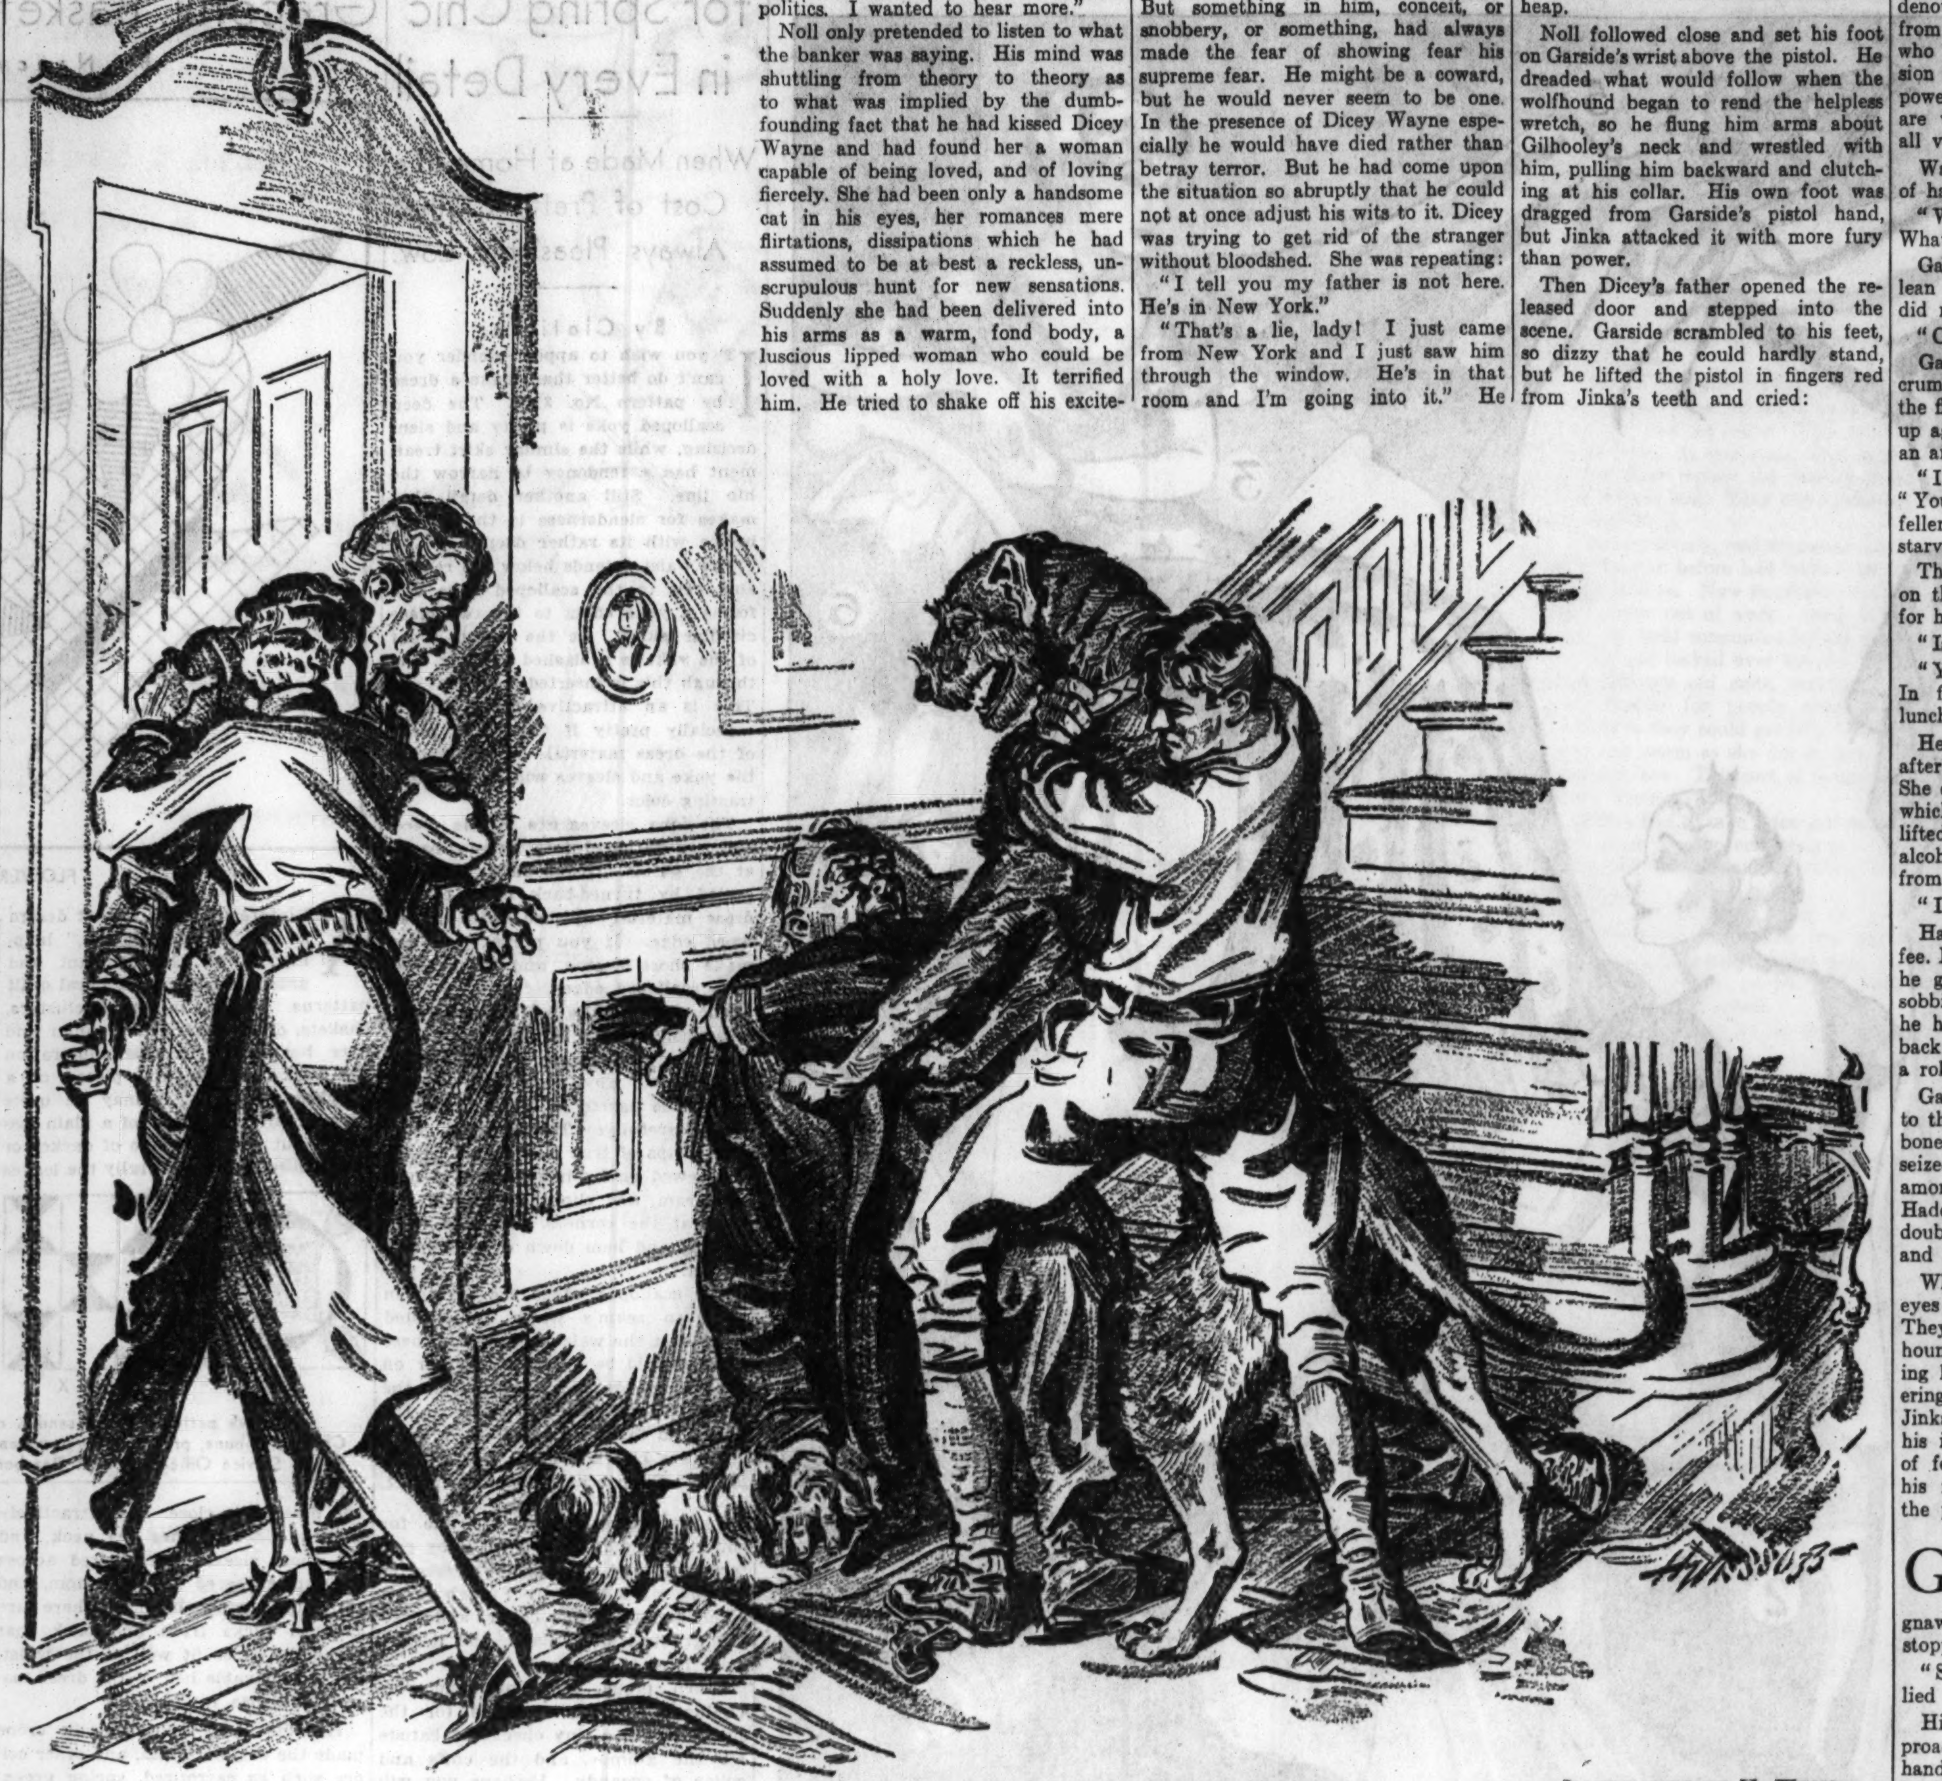
"It's all right, Dicey. You nab him the minute I jump him."

Instead Dicey let the wolfhound go with a cry, fairly hurled him at the man. Gilhooley lengthened in a huge black upward slant for the throat. The pistol swung his way and barked.

Few people can hit anything with a pistol, especially a flying target. Garside's shot struck the floor and ricocheted with a shriek. Gilhooley erect was taller than Garside and his paws struck the man's chest and knocked him against the door where he slithered sidewise, sprawled. Gilhooley just missed the side slash with his dagger teeth that would have made red rags of the man's throat, smashed into the door above the head of his fallen enemy, and bounced back in a heap.

Noll followed close and set his foot on Garside's wrist above the pistol. He dreaded what would follow when the wolfhound began to rend the helpless wretch, so he flung him arms about Gilhooley's neck and wrestled with him, pulling him backward and clutching at his collar. His own foot was dragged from Garside's pistol hand, but Jinka attacked it with more fury than power.

Then Dicey's father opened the released door and stepped into the scene. Garside scrambled to his feet, so dizzy that he could hardly stand, but he lifted the pistol in fingers red from Jinka's teeth and cried:



So he flung his arms about Gilhooley's neck and wrestled with him.

ILLUSTRATION BY H. WESSO.

"Wayne, you'll never rob another——"

Dicey sprang at his arm, caught his elbow, clutched at his hand and clung to it, her palm over the pistol muzzle. Garside struck her in the right breast with his left fist, and a cry of pain escaped her. She sank her teeth in Garside's wrist. His fingers opened and the pistol fell to the hard floor. It emptied one cartridge between the legs of the raging Jinka.

THE sound of the bullet splintering the weatherboarding gave the note of death, but only as a grisly thought. While Jinka rushed at the bullet hole and gnawed at it, Wayne stooped and picked up the pistol, put it in his pocket, and towered over Garside in burly power.

But Garside with a little sob fainted.

This gave Dicey time to go to the rescue of Noll. One of his sleeves was in ribbons and the bared arm was caught in Gilhooley's furious teeth. At Dicey's shriek of reproach the dog froze, his jaws relaxed, he cowered under the threat of her uplifted hand, though he could almost have nipped it off at a bite. Dicey petted Noll's shoulder and pointed to his sleeve and said:

"To think that you would treat my dear friend so, my brother! O, I am so ashamed I could die!"

Gilhooley groveled, whined and moaned with remorse, imploring forgiveness. He licked Noll's feet and tried to reach the toothmarks that had not quite broken the skin. He wanted to erase them with his tongue. Noll defended him and petted him, saying:

"Grand old Gilhooley. If it hadn't been for him, I shouldn't be here. I'd be a little angel on a cloud. You can always count on the Irish in a fight."

Gilhooley crept close to his new attorney to escape from the condemnation of his goddess. But Jinka, whether because Dicey had scolded Gilhooley or because Noll was praising him, darted at him in wrath and had to be restrained from trying to lose his short teeth in Gilhooley's shag. The contrite Gilhooley shuddered before the Pekingese, and Dicey had to tuck Jinka under her left arm to quiet him.

Dicey had been so frantic over Noll that she had forgotten Garside for the moment. The sound of the voices and the snap of the pistol had brought Haddon from the pantry; and Stefan came bursting through the dogs outside the door. He felt disgraced to his dying day for being absent.

Wayne was kneeling over Garside, trying to revive him. Stefan did it instantly by lifting the man's feet high in the air and sending the blood into his head. Having swooned like a woman, Garside began to weep like one. Stefan picked him up easily, carried him to a couch in the living room. Everybody followed to learn who and what he was and why he was there.

Dicey stared at Garside as if he were a venomous, but craven reptile, a crocodile that weeps when its jaws miss its prey. Wayne saw in him one of the firebrands flaring up all over America of late, congenital malcontents, eloquent political paranoiacs who see tyranny and conspiracy everywhere, denounce all success as direct robbery from the pockets of the unsuccessful; who denounce the cruelty and oppression of the gentlest rulers, yet when in power out-czar the czars. All crimes are virtues when they commit them, all virtues crimes in others.

Wayne braced himself for a torrent of hatred, but spoke calmly:

"Well, sir, you wanted to see me. What can I do for you?"

Garside wept feebly and wrung his lean hands, beat his sharp knees, and did not answer.

"Come, come, speak up!"

Garside tried to, but gasped and crumpled like a jointed puppet, slid to the floor. Stefan knelt and picked him up again, finding him light as a child, an armful of bones.

"I been thinkin' on it," Stefan said. "You know what's a matter wit' this feller? He's hungry. He's pooty near starve to death."

This threw a sudden and gentle light on the poor man. Every heart ached for him. Dicey turned to Haddon:

"Is there some coffee, some food?"

"Yes, miss. I'll fetch some at once. In fact, I was about to announce luncheon when this—this——"

He hurried to the kitchen, Dicey hot after him as far as the dining room. She came back with a pony of brandy, which she set to Garside's lips as Noll lifted his rolling head. At the whiff of alcohol, he came to life and recoiled from the glass:

"I don't drink. Never learned how!"

Haddon came in with a cup of coffee. Dicey took it and held it for him; he gulped and panted over it, fairly sobbing the coffee down. By the time he had emptied the cup Haddon was back with a chop and green peas and a roll.

Garside stared, put a trembling hand to the plate, snatched the chop by the bone and ravening it. His free hand seized the fork and shoved the peas in among his teeth with the meat, while Haddon held the plate close, in a double regret for such bad manners and such pitiful need.

While Garside wolfed the food his eyes rolled wildly with animal jealousy. They discovered that the big wolfhound, held back by Stefan, was whining like a starveling, his nostrils shivering as if he had never been fed. And Jinka, even Jinka, who always forgot his imperial grandeur in the presence of food, was sitting up and begging, his flopping forepaws trying to hide the plumpness beneath.

GARSIDE had to smile at the picture. With infinite unselfishness he plucked from the bone he was gnawing a morsel for Jinka, but Dicey stopped him and groaned:

"Shame on you, Jinka, you fat-bellied little glutton!"

His majesty slunk away with a reproachful glare. Garside was about to hand the well cleaned chopbone to Gilhooley, but Dicey stopped him:

"It's dangerous. It might splinter in his throat."

Garside laughed: "He wouldn't have done much better with me. This depression hasn't left much more meat on my bones than I left on this one. We had a dog but we had to give him up. Couldn't afford to feed him. Nice dog, too—like one of the children."

"Won't you have another chop?" said Dicey.

"I better not. Dangerous to eat too hearty after a long fast."

He picked up the roll, was about to set his teeth in it, but paused, caressed it, asked:

"Would you mind if I took this home to the wife?"

This hurt. Dicey groaned. Wayne dropped into a chair.

"Who are you anyway?"

A look of wrath narrowed the man's eyes. "Just one of your victims, just one of the thousands that put their trust in you. It makes me laugh to think how we poor fools denied ourselves everything for years so as to pile up millions to you to steal."

Wayne's face turned white and red as if it had been spit upon. Dicey moved to her father, stood by him and spoke for him:

"Mr. Garside, my father never stole a penny from you or anybody else. He's as poor as you are."

"Looks like it," said Garside, indicating the room, the butler, the china, and the silver. All these evidences of distress to the Waynes were Persian opulence to Garside. Dicey had not seen and could not imagine the barren lodgings of the Garside family, but she said:

"This is my father's old farmhouse. It's comfortable, but we couldn't sell it for anything, or get a cent for the furniture. We may not look it to you, but we're as poor as church mice."

"Church mice, maybe, but did you ever see the ratholes where some of us hardworking folks have to raise our children. Did you?"

"But my father's not to blame. If he had his wish, you would live in a palace. It would be better for him. He worked as hard as you did. He was as honest as you could have been. He has lost all he had and he owes millions."

"Rats! You're still eating, aren't you?"

"Yes, but we owe——"

"You owe! But they won't let me owe! I got four children, Miss, and my wife's mother and my own and my wife and me. Two of the children are sickly and ought to go south or somewheres, or we'll lose 'em. My wife is poorly. We're all like me, and look at me! We've been living mainly on flour and water. This is the first piece of meat I've seen in weeks. There hasn't been an egg or a vegetable in our house since I don't know when. The only coffee I've had has been in the bread lines."

"I CAN'T tell you how sorry I am," Dicey persisted. "But it's not my father's fault."

"Then whose fault is it?"

"I don't know. Whose fault is it that my father is a pauper and treated like a criminal? They're trying to put him in jail. And they may yet."

"Well, he'll be certain of his board and lodgings, won't he? If I hadn't a big family I'd take his ticket."

"You were going to take his life."

"Well, Miss, you go through what I've gone through and see if it don't affect your brain a little. I never knew what poverty was, or riches either. I've worked since I was a boy. Didn't mind that. Glad to get the work. Always had a good job and never wasted my money on liquor or tobacco, poolrooms, or fancy clothes or fancy women. I never wasted a cent in my life!"

"Got married early, raised children, lived plain. The wife was a saver, too. We always put away our money against a rainy day, so as to send the children to college and give them advantages when they grew up.

"Seemed like it was the only dissipation we ever had, going over the little old bank book and watching the money grow. Then the hard times came and I lost my job and couldn't get another one any place. We didn't want to touch our savings. We went hungry instead. If we'd drawn it all and spent it living high for a while we'd have gotten something out of it, but when the Wayne chain went, everything went, all our lean years, all our hopes for the future, in one day, the whole life savings gone like water poured down a sink. We'd skimped and scraped and we never got any good out of our money. We got in late on the charity funds. They're giving out fast. I got sick and the wife fell and sprained her back and our landlord lost the building we lived in and we were turned out with no cash to pay in advance for anything decent. The butcher and the baker and the groceryman wouldn't give me any credit.

"Do you know what we've been living on lately?—a grocery order for a dollar and a half once a week. Seven of us have to live on it, and they don't know how much longer they can give us that."

DICEY closed her eyes and shoved her hand against her left side to hold down her heartache. Garside went on:

"And you call yourselves paupers! You with your butlers! And chops for luncheon! I had thousands of dollars saved up—thousands of dollars. Every one of 'em meant sweat and self-denial, and every one of 'em was to protect the wife and me in our old age and give the children a good start—and now we're panhandlers. And what's to become of us next week, next month?"

Dicey had no answer for this or for any other of the world problems. Garside went on:

"Well, when I got to thinking about you, Wayne, and how you'd juggled millions and pretended to go broke so as not to risk the millions you've held out on us, I got to thinking of those thousands of dollars that I can't touch a nickel of, and I said to myself:

"'You call yourself a man and you let a burglar like that steal the bread out of your children's mouths, and you don't do anything about it.'

"Maybe I'm crazy. Who wouldn't be? Maybe I'm a criminal, but I'm only going after my own."

MORTGAGE

Doris and Jeffrey Bought the House When Times Were Good and They Both Had Jobs; They Got New Furniture, a Car, Hired a Maid; Then Came the Crash and a Desperate Chapter in Their Lives.

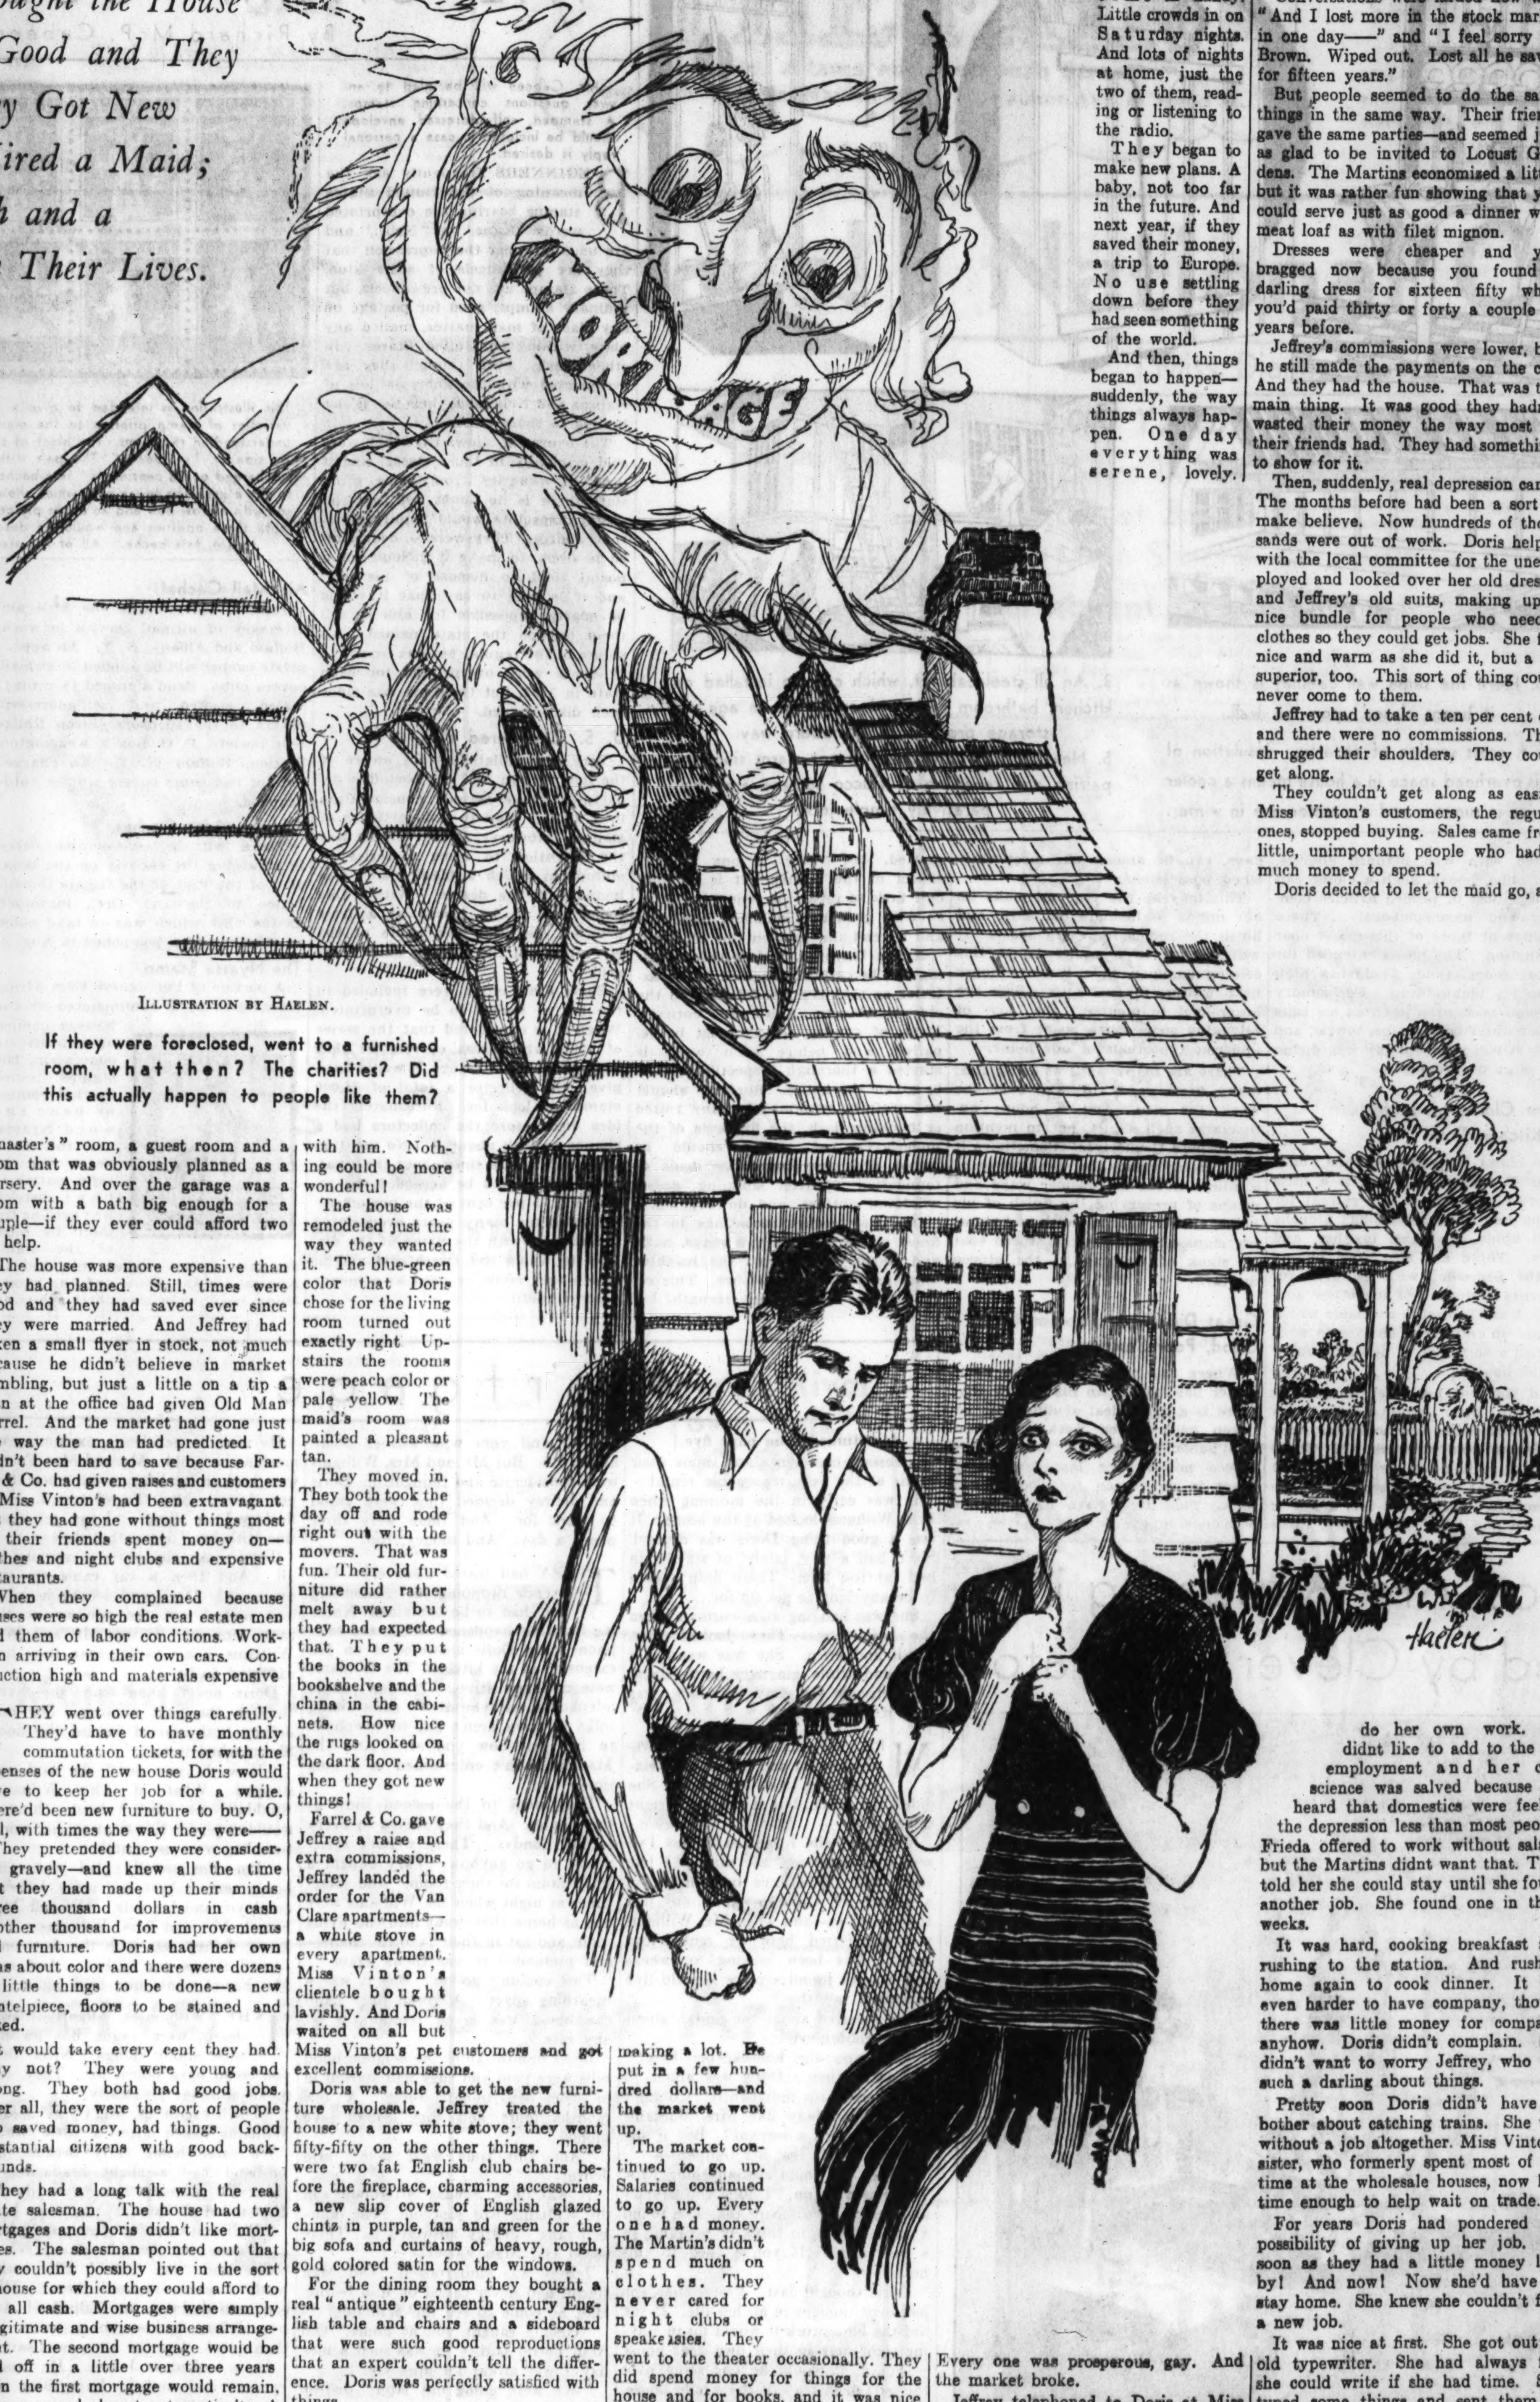

ILLUSTRATION BY HAELEN.

If they were foreclosed, went to a furnished room, what then? The charities? Did this actually happen to people like them?

EVERYTHING was just right. Not a flaw anywhere. Doris couldn't find one, anyhow.

In the first place, she actually was married to Jeffrey. For that, Doris felt, perfection was a slight understatement. It was marvelous, waking up in the morning feeling that something grand was happening—and then remembering that she was married to Jeffrey.

She felt, and told Jeffrey, too, that she had known from the first minute she saw him that she was going to marry him. Actually she hadn't been quite so confident. What if he hadn't fallen in love with her? Or hadn't been able to marry? But Jeffrey had fallen in love with Doris at precisely the same moment she had fallen in love with him, which was one minute after Maude Harris introduced them. And Jeffrey had not only been able to marry, but desired nothing as much as marriage.

Doris had a nice, snug feeling of the world being a glorious place. She couldn't have made a grander place if she had planned everything herself! It wasn't only marriage. Everything else, too. Jobs, for one thing.

There was Jeffrey's job. Being head of the stove department in a wholesale hardware company might not sound wonderful to some people. But Jeffrey had worked up from order clerk and now he had his own office with "Jeffrey Martin" in gold letters on the door. His department was growing and his job was growing with it. Not that his salary was so awfully large, but he had doubled it in four years And Old Man Farrel, who owned Farrel & Co., seemed to like him and said so That was a lot.

And there was Doris' job. Jeffrey was too level headed to object to his wife working. They agreed that in a few years, when they had a home ready, they would settle down and have babies. Now there was no reason why she had to stay home all day. Doris was with Miss Vinton, and Miss Vinton's was that most correct decorating shop on Madison avenue which always had those amusing novelties in the window and introduced fads in furniture a season before the more "commercial" shops even found out about them.

It was far more fun meeting Miss Vinton's customers and advising about lamps and dressing tables than it was staying at home in a three room apartment.

As soon as they were married, Doris and Jeffrey took the apartment. It was only a makeshift. They wanted a real home. They came from small towns where homes were important.

The days were as beautiful as Doris had dreamed them. In the morning she got breakfast and, after Jeffrey left, she had a whole hour to straighten things up and get dressed. Miss Vinton's customers seldom appeared before ten

At night Doris usually had time to wash up a bit before Jeffrey came home. Sometimes they cooked dinner, but there were so many good restaurants in the neighborhood that they usually ate out, at little Italian restaurants or in Greenwich Village places they found amusing. Later they'd go to a movie or to the theater—half price tickets at Gray's—or some one would drop in or, best of all, they'd stay at home and read. It was exactly what Doris wanted out of life. Some day, a home and babies.

Doris never knew whether it was she or Jeffrey who had the idea that "some day" was too far away. Suddenly, neither of them was satisfied with the three room apartment. The bedroom was too small. The closets were inadequate. It was too noisy. A flat wheel on a surface car beat into their ears. A hundred city noises disturbed them. They wanted more substantial furniture. A real home.

THEY made a surprising discovery—the same discovery that thousands of other young people make every year. They wanted a little house. A bit of land with it. Their own.

Immediately the real estate sections of the newspapers became important. And reading real estate was only a step to house hunting.

On Saturday and Sunday afternoons they made excursions into the suburbs. They wanted a little house. Preferably white. And a garden already planted. A big living room. Not farther than a half hour's train ride. And not too long a walk after you get off the train.

It's funny about houses. Either they are absolute strangers you don't care about, or you find exactly the house you're looking for. At first all the houses were strangers. Rooms too small. No trees.

Then they found exactly the house they had been looking for! It was of white clapboard with green shutters It had been nicely kept up, the garden was lovely and there were big trees with places for a hammock and for afternoon tea underneath them, as perfectly planned as if they had grown the trees themselves.

The living room was large and there were bookshelves on each side of the mantel. There were corner cabinets in the dining room and the kitchen was modern and complete. There was an attached garage. They couldn't afford a car, but it would be nice to have it

Three bedrooms and a bath were over the main part of the house, a "master's" room, a guest room and a room that was obviously planned as a nursery. And over the garage was a room with a bath big enough for a couple—if they ever could afford two in help.

The house was more expensive than they had planned. Still, times were good and they had saved ever since they were married. And Jeffrey had taken a small flyer in stock, not much because he didn't believe in market gambling, but just a little on a tip a man at the office had given Old Man Farrel. And the market had gone just the way the man had predicted. It hadn't been hard to save because Farrel & Co. had given raises and customers at Miss Vinton's had been extravagant but they had gone without things most of their friends spent money on—clothes and night clubs and expensive restaurants.

When they complained because houses were so high the real estate men told them of labor conditions. Workmen arriving in their own cars. Construction high and materials expensive

THEY went over things carefully. They'd have to have monthly commutation tickets, for with the expenses of the new house Doris would have to keep her job for a while. There'd been new furniture to buy. O, well, with times the way they were——

They pretended they were considering gravely—and knew all the time that they had made up their minds Three thousand dollars in cash Another thousand for improvements and furniture. Doris had her own ideas about color and there were dozens of little things to be done—a new mantelpiece, floors to be stained and waxed.

It would take every cent they had. Why not? They were young and strong. They both had good jobs. After all, they were the sort of people who saved money, had things. Good substantial citizens with good backgrounds.

They had a long talk with the real estate salesman. The house had two mortgages and Doris didn't like mortgages. The salesman pointed out that they couldn't possibly live in the sort o house for which they could afford to pay all cash. Mortgages were simply legitimate and wise business arrangement. The second mortgage would be paid off in a little over three years Then the first mortgage would remain, to be renewed almost automatically. A small renewal fee and interest twice a year. That was all there was to it No other expenses but coal and taxes—and even in Locust Gardens taxes weren't high.

Buying the house was exciting. They met the original owners in the little real estate office and after much talk of apportioning taxes and insurance every one signed names and Jeffrey gave them a certified check.

Having the mortgages transferred was no trouble. A most polite man in the bond and mortgage company gave them more papers—Doris couldn't understand them, but Jeffrey seemed to know what they meant—and they signed their names again.

Doris remembered a picture in a book her father had had when she was a little girl. In the picture was a little cottage and over it was a great hairy, grasping hand with claws for nails—and the hand was marked "Mortgage."

"Nonsense," smiled Jeffrey, when Doris told him about it. "A mortgage is a very good business arrangement. I spoke to Old Man Farrel and he said that buying a house was a sensible thing to do and that the mortgage was all right. He likes men to have responsibilities.

So Doris put the picture of "Mortgage" out of her mind. There were nicer things to think about. They owned their own home! Married to Jeffrey and living in a perfect home with him. Nothing could be more wonderful!

The house was remodeled just the way they wanted it. The blue-green color that Doris chose for the living room turned out exactly right Upstairs the rooms were peach color or pale yellow The maid's room was painted a pleasant tan.

They moved in. They both took the day off and rode right out with the movers. That was fun. Their old furniture did rather melt away but they had expected that. They put the books in the bookshelve and the china in the cabinets. How nice the rugs looked on the dark floor. And when they got new things!

Farrel & Co. gave Jeffrey a raise and extra commissions, Jeffrey landed the order for the Van Clare apartments—a white stove in every apartment. Miss Vinton's clientele bought lavishly. And Doris waited on all but Miss Vinton's pet customers and got excellent commissions.

Doris was able to get the new furniture wholesale. Jeffrey treated the house to a new white stove; they went fifty-fifty on the other things. There were two fat English club chairs before the fireplace, charming accessories, a new slip cover of English glazed chintz in purple, tan and green for the big sofa and curtains of heavy, rough, gold colored satin for the windows.

For the dining room they bought a real "antique" eighteenth century English table and chairs and a sideboard that were such good reproductions that an expert couldn't tell the difference. Doris was perfectly satisfied with things.

THE only trouble was that after she had worked all day she was too tired to get dinner—and there were no restaurants in Locust Gardens. It was no fun eating in town and then going home. And in the morning it was hard to get up early, cook breakfast, and rush for a train. They really needed a maid. And they had the room.

They got new furniture for their bedroom and put their old set in the room over the garage. And they found the nicest maid you'd want to see. Named Frieda. Round faced and smiling. A good cook, too. She did the washing and that saved money. It was nice, getting up and eating a peaceful breakfast. And coming home to a dinner all ready to serve.

They bought a new set of furniture for the guest room. It would be easy to have company now that they had a maid. Life wove itself into exactly as beautiful a pattern as Doris had hoped it would. Guests came out for weekends, the Faradays or that amusing young Bittner from Jeffrey's office, or Miss Glenn, who designed that lovely new china. And they met some of their neighbors; the Patricks who lived in the English house on the corner, and the Fergusons, in the red brick, who had the cute little baby. And they spoke to half a dozen more.

Jeffrey got another tip on the market. He didn't believe in taking a chance with much money, but every one was making a lot. He put in a few hundred dollars—and the market went up.

The market continued to go up. Salaries continued to go up. Every one had money. The Martin's didn't spend much on clothes. They never cared for night clubs or speakeasies. They went to the theater occasionally. They did spend money for things for the house and for books, and it was nice to be able to bring home treats—caviar or imported cheeses.

Jeffrey decided they needed a car. He could make the first payment with money he had made in the market and the other payments from his salary, which wasn't bad for a man of his age. Doris wanted a car, too, but she hesitated a little.

"Now that the house is furnished I think we ought to begin to save," she said.

"We really ought to," agreed Jeffrey. "And as soon as the car is paid for——"

IT was a nice car. A coupe. Not in the money class and you knew at a glance how much it had cost, but it had a good pick-up and Jeffrey felt it would go up to seventy if he ever let it out. He got it up to sixty-two on a back road.

Doris gave a comfortable sigh of relief. Now they could take things easy—and save money, too. A perfectly grand little house, complete from lamps to maid's room shower curtain. A garden that was beginning to look like a German color print. A trim little maid to do the housework. A car. Good jobs. And the most perfect and understanding husband in the world! You couldn't ask for more. Doris felt she wouldn't have dared ask for even that much.

Week-ends with guests in. Picnic suppers at the beach and golf at one of the semi-public links—the car did come in handy. Little crowds in on Saturday nights. And lots of nights at home, just the two of them, reading or listening to the radio.

They began to make new plans. A baby, not too far in the future. And next year, if they saved their money, a trip to Europe. No use settling down before they had seen something of the world.

And then, things began to happen—suddenly, the way things always happen. One day everything was serene, lovely. Every one was prosperous, gay. And the market broke.

Jeffrey telephoned to Doris at Miss Vinton's. She had just sold some georgette lamp shades of a peculiarly difficult shade to a peculiarly difficult cutomer, so she couldn't understand at first.

"It can't affect us," she said.

"Not much," agreed Jeffrey. "I telephoned to my broker that I was sending down some more money to protect the stock I've got. I don't think it will be serious."

It was serious. Jeffrey added more money. He didn't have any more cash and he didn't dare borrow on his salary. He was wiped out.

Doris knew how badly he felt. But what did it matter? He had already taken his profits for the payment on the car and for garden furniture. Didn't they still have the house and the car and their jobs—and each other? Speculating had been silly, anyhow. Luckily, not much of their money had come from it. They were well out of it.

But they weren't out of it, for the market affected other people. People didn't buy so many stoves. Jeffrey's salary was generous, but commissions were cut; there could be no trip to Europe. It was good they had the other things.

Curiously, Miss Vinton's customers continued to buy useless decorations, even while they talked of stock market losses. It was another six months before Doris noticed that there was more talk of losses and less buying.

Conversations were larded now with "And I lost more in the stock market in one day——" and "I feel sorry for Brown. Wiped out. Lost all he saved for fifteen years."

But people seemed to do the same things in the same way. Their friends gave the same parties—and seemed just as glad to be invited to Locust Gardens. The Martins economised a little, but it was rather fun showing that you could serve just as good a dinner with meat loaf as with filet mignon.

Dresses were cheaper and you bragged now because you found a darling dress for sixteen fifty when you'd paid thirty or forty a couple of years before.

Jeffrey's commissions were lower, but he still made the payments on the car. And they had the house. That was the main thing. It was good they hadn't wasted their money the way most of their friends had. They had something to show for it.

Then, suddenly, real depression came The months before had been a sort of make believe. Now hundreds of thousands were out of work. Doris helped with the local committee for the unemployed and looked over her old dresses and Jeffrey's old suits, making up a nice bundle for people who needed clothes so they could get jobs. She felt nice and warm as she did it, but a bit superior, too. This sort of thing could never come to them.

Jeffrey had to take a ten per cent cut and there were no commissions. They shrugged their shoulders. They could get along.

They couldn't get along as easily Miss Vinton's customers, the regular ones, stopped buying. Sales came from little, unimportant people who hadn't much money to spend.

Doris decided to let the maid go, and do her own work. She didnt like to add to the unemployment and her conscience was salved because she heard that domestics were feeling the depression less than most people. Frieda offered to work without salary, but the Martins didnt want that. They told her she could stay until she found another job. She found one in three weeks.

It was hard, cooking breakfast and rushing to the station. And rushing home again to cook dinner. It was even harder to have company, though there was little money for company, anyhow. Doris didn't complain. She didn't want to worry Jeffrey, who was such a darling about things.

Pretty soon Doris didn't have to bother about catching trains. She was without a job altogether. Miss Vinton's sister, who formerly spent most of her time at the wholesale houses, now had time enough to help wait on trade.

For years Doris had pondered the possibility of giving up her job. As soon as they had a little money laid by! And now! Now she'd have to stay home. She knew she couldn't find a new job.

It was nice at first. She got out an old typewriter. She had always felt she could write if she had time. She typed some things and sent them to the magazines. They came back with amazing promptness. This was no time, obviously, to try to break into print

SHE tried to give Jeffrey the things he liked best for breakfast—when they weren't too expensive. She spent a long time doing her shopping, going to the branch grocery stores frequently instead of to Meecham's where she had had a charge account ever since she moved to Locust Gardens. Was this what women who had no outside occupation did all day? She read a lot of things she had always intended reading and they didn't seem as interesting as the books she read at night with Jeffrey near. She almost wished she knew how to play bridge.

Jeffrey took another cut. He had long since given up eating lunch at the places he liked best, where he met men he knew, and had been going to second-rate lunch rooms. Now he hurried into a drug store for a sandwich and a cup of coffee. Which made him hungrier—but not quite as agreeable at night.

Doris learned a dozen ways to cook inexpensive cuts. "It took depression to make a good cook of me," she laughed, but she wasn't very happy about it.

They didn't have much company. Folks are eager to come to the suburbs when you're going to give them a grand meal and have a lot of other people in. And not at all eager when you're sure to be alone and the meals are the last word in economy.

"It's cheaper for people to eat in town, when you consider that railroad fare hasn't been reduced," Doris said. Neither she nor Jeffrey thought it was very funny. A few of their best friends remained loyal, but they were feeling the depression, too. And drinks cost as much as food, and even stew or spaghetti, when you add soup and a green vegetable and a salad and dessert, makes quite a hole in an almost invisible budget.

They had to give up the car. It was nearly paid for, so Jeffrey didn't have to lose every cent. He needed the money toward insurance and a winter overcoat and coal. Jeffrey had been so proud of that car! O, they'd get another when times got better. In the meantime they'd spend more time at home. They did have a home to stay in. That was the main thing.

Of course they had the home. That meant more than anything else. The second mortgage would have to be renewed soon, but they had been assured that could be done almost automatically. They could still pay the interest on the mortgages The last taxes were due, but they felt they'd be able to meet them before long.

Jeffrey lost his job! The few people who were buying stoves could order just as well from a young nephew of Old Man Farrel, two years out of college, who had been Jeffrey's assistant.

Jeffrey was dazed. He hadn't expected anything like that to happen. When he had heard men talking about losing jobs he had the feeling that something was wrong with them. If they had done their work well they wouldn't have been fired. He had been comfortable in the feeling that he'd never lose his job. He had even feared another cut, but he had been sure of something coming in. For food and household expenses, anyhow.

He'd get another job. Right away. He had always been a little impatient with men who, when let out of one job, couldn't find another—wouldn't turn to something different. Times were different now, of course. Even so, he felt certain he could find something.

Doris, who had taken for granted that she couldn't find another job, decided to get something—anything—to tide things over.

Jeffrey went to every firm he thought might be interested in a man who understood buying and selling of stoves. And then the selling of anything else. All of the firms were letting their own men go.

DORIS had no better luck. All the jobs she wanted were filled. She applied for jobs she knew she wouldn's like at all. They began reading the help wanted sections before the news the minute the newspaper arrived. They were dismayed to find how short they were.

They applied, a bit indiscriminatingly, for practically everything they had any hopes of being able to fill. And they laughed over "Sentimental Tommy," which they had read long ago, and the jobs he had applied for.

They didn't get jobs. They each went on a dozen fool's errands. A couple of men got fresh with Doris—she didn't think that happened any more except in sensational stories. She and Jeffrey both got several chances to sell, house to house, on commission. At first they both laughed—and then they tried a couple of things. Doris attempted to sell corsets, horribly embarrassed when she rang strange doorbells. She wasn't a good saleswoman, evidently, although she had made a very good living selling, not so long ago. She barely made her expenses now.

Jeffrey didn't fare much better. Folks didn't want to buy aluminum pots or automobile accessories from house to house canvassers. He even tried to get a job at Meecham's, the neighborhood grocery. Doris had said they never had enough clerks. They didn't need him.

The fine carcless nonchalance they had acquired fell away. They huddled together, frightened. Every new rebuff took hope and courage away. What could they do?

Could people tell by looking at them that they were afraid? Surely, these days you don't starve to death, if you're the sort of people who have a nice home. Why, they had had everything only a little while ago!

Isn't it funny how you can make money last when you try? How wasteful they had once been! Jars of caviar. The most expensive tea cakes. All sorts of accessories for the house. Later they had curtailed things and got down to inexpensive cuts of meat and fewer green vegetables. Now they ate stews if they had meat at all. And didn't buy magazines. And couldn't afford the movies.

No need to worry about entertaining now. They refused the few invitations that came to them because they didn't want any one to know how poor they were. And even a casual friend in to dinner was too great an extravagance—but folks don't come out to the suburbs unless they are invited or know they'll be well fed.

The first mortgage fell due. And there was a payment to be made on the second. Bravely Jeffrey and Doris went to see the firm who held the first mortgage, which had been so reassuring three years before. The attitude was changed now. The client who held the mortgage, a foreign missionary society, did not want to renew. Could Mr. and Mrs. Martin pay up the mortgage?

Doris and Jeffrey looked at each other in dismay. They couldn't even pay the interest. They had hoped that the most courteous company would renew the mortgage and hold further payments in abeyance. That wasn't the way things were done.

There they were! No jobs! No money! And probably no home!

They had each other. That was something. They did love each other a great deal. Even these weeks of worry hadn't diminished the fact. But they were both dismayed, irritable, nervous. They were finding out that love wasn't enough.

In order to try to save their home they applied to the various home relief boards, were indifferently received, answered questionnaires—and were given no help. If you rented these days you were lucky. The landlord reduced your rent—did everything for you. But if you had saved your money—put it into a house—you had nothing at all.

WHERE could they go? What could they do? The furniture they had thought so wonderful was beginning to look old. The overstuffed pieces were worn. Guests had spilled things and left white rings on the tables. Things that meant a lot to the Martins would mean little to the second-hand man.

If they were foreclosed, went to a furnished room, what then? The charities? Did this actually happen to people like them? Things whirred in their minds and there was no answer.

Doris went into New York. She felt curiously guilty when she went into a pawn shop and offered her engagement ring—her one valuable possession. She choked as she answered necessary questions. She got little enough on the ring. Diamonds had come down.

She walked over to Fifth avenue. She couldn't bear going back home just yet. The shops weren't so crowded as they had been, but at the book counters women were buying the latest novels, as Doris had done. At the perfume counters customers still lingered, trying to decide on scent, at twenty-five dollars, as they told the clerk how much cheaper they had bought it in Paris.

There was a sale of ties. Doris knew she shouldn't have spent a cent. But she knew what Jeffrey was going through, asking for jobs. It got to the heart of you, ate out your courage. She bought him a blue tie.

Her clothes were only a little shabby, but she could feel people looking at her—the way she had never thought about people looking. Did they suspect that Jeffrey and she had nothing—except each other. She had always smiled over things such as "you can't live on love." She knew how true they were now.

She went to Miss Vinton's. What if a difficult customer had come in—if they needed her for a big job, a country house? Miss Vinton was in the shop. There were no customers.

"We're nearly down to selling fancy paper match boxes and bridge tallys," Miss Vinton said.

Doris hadn't really dared hope there would be anything. She stopped in to see a couple of women she knew. She felt guilty about taking up their time, but she couldn't help hoping they might know of something. Both of the women had had cuts, know of no openings.

Doris hurried to the train, impelled suddenly to get home as quickly as possible. What if something had happened.

She stopped at the cheapest neighborhood chain store, bought a pound of meat for stewing and a can of peas. She had rice in the house. She hardly ever went to Meecham's now. They were expensive and, besides, she owed them a big bill. She hurried home.

Nothing had happened. Jeffrey was at home and despondent.

Nothing happened that week. Nor the next. Nor the next. The money from the ring dribbled away. Doris would go into New York, hating to spend money for the trip, look for jobs, hurry home in case . . . There was no news! No one had telephoned, excepting one day a man from the telephone company to say that unless the bill was paid the service would be disconnected.

The house would be gone soon and all the saving it represented. Not having a telephone would be one more marker on the way. To what? What could happen? They couldn't starve the way people did in the terrible stories in the newspapers. They were young, strong, eager to work. This was America!

A man from the mortgage company telephoned to them. Eagerly Jeffrey made an appointment with him. The man made a suggestion. If the house were rented the rent would pay the carrying charges and the house could be held on an open mortgage until—until times got better. They'd be without a home temporarily, but they'd be without it permanently if they were foreclosed. The hairy hand of "Mortgage" would grasp the little house unless renting proved practical.

THERE was a for rent sign on the front lawn. Doris expected some of the neighbors to say something about it. No one said anything. The Fergusons had been forced to give up their house—had moved away. The others were too interested in themselves—or didn't want to hear another hard luck story.

Doris was worried about Jeffrey. He had tried to be cheerful, but now, unless he was away trying various canvassing jobs—none of which had any possibilities—or answering advertisements—he would sit for hours in a chair by the window and not say a word. Not that she blamed him. It was discouraging. But he was all she had. She loved him so—couldn't bear to feel this thing come between them, to see him give way. She didn't know what to do.

When the cash grew too low to keep on at the chain stores Doris went back to Meecham's. When Mr. Meecham told her that he was sorry but she couldn't charge any more until she made a substantial payment on her bill she could hardly bring herself to tell Jeffrey about it.

They ate spaghetti now with just a suspicion of sauce on it. And cabbage. And beans and cereals and soup meat. And remembered the money they had squandered. Soon there wouldn't be enough money for a loaf of bread.

People looked at the house, made

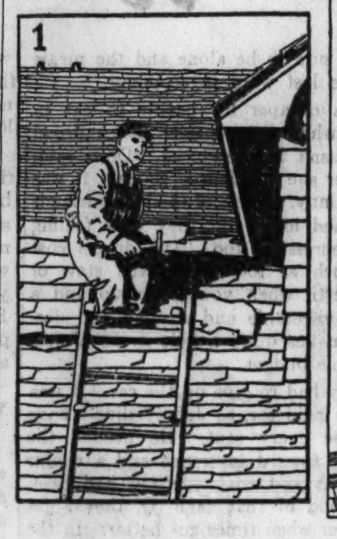
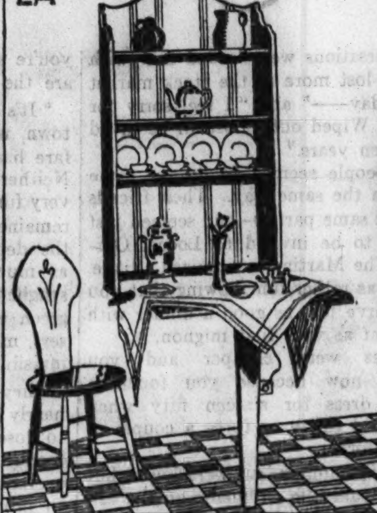
Spring Days Are Roofing Days for Large and Small Homes

Materials and Colors Ready for Every Taste

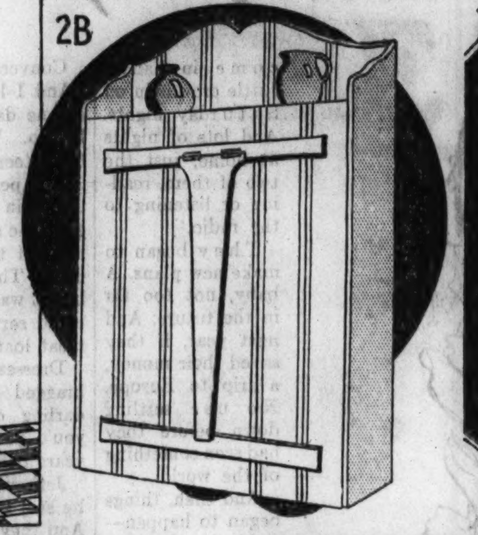
New Household Equipment Furnishes Extra Closet Space in Compact Unit.

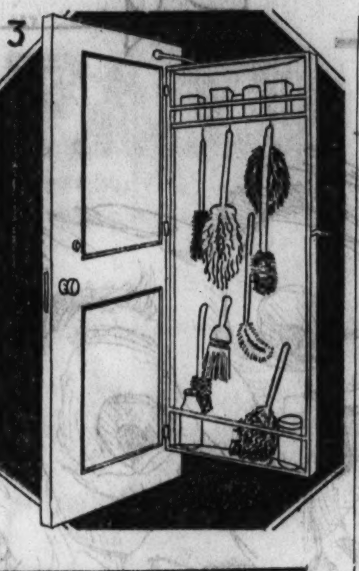


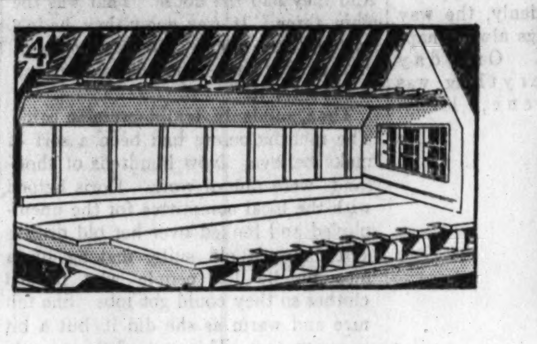


1. There are many enduring roof materials available today. Here composition shingles are being laid directly over old roof.

2A. A wall cabinet, easily made by the handy home man, is now opened as a breakfast table.

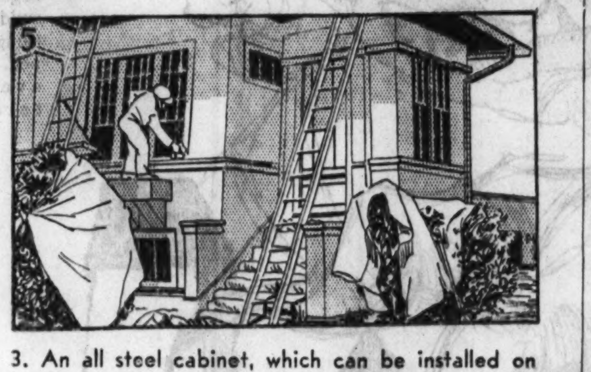






2B. Here the same wall cabinet is shown as it hangs closed upon the wall.

4. A cross section of an attic. Insulation of this overhead space in a house means a cooler house in summer and a warmer one in winter.



3. An all steel cabinet, which can be installed on kitchen, bathroom or any door, solves an age old storage problem in a modern way.

5. New breaks in stucco need not alarm since repairing and renewing of stucco surface are comparatively simple jobs.

By Louise Bargelt.

WISE as was King Solomon, we wouldn't all agree with him in his declaration that a leaky roof is better than a contentious human. Not if we have lived under such a roof.

We may struggle along with a quarrelsome soul and maintain a certain degree of cheerfulness and poise; but a roof that leaks and permits the rains of heaven to descend on our most cherished decorations and possessions—well, there is nothing really worse.

Every spring a certain number of home owners reach that desperate stage when they just have to do something about their roof. It has given due warning that it won't continue to function much longer in the role of stanch protector and friend. It may or may not have lasted a reasonably long time, but whether it has given generous or scant service, it is frankly in wornout state.

Sometimes an Old Roof Can Be Patched.

Sometimes, after due consultation with a good roofer, we can decide to patch up a roof which has seemed in a rather hopeless state. We can repair its leaks, replace any missing shingles, fix up the flashings, paint it or touch it up, and perhaps install some snow guards on it to keep the wintry snows and ice from sliding off and damaging pet plants and bushes.

Again, it may have passed the point where it seems advisable to repair it and reroofing appears the more sensible procedure to follow. In which case we can reroof with the same type of roofing we have had before, or we can choose a different type, finding perhaps among the host of enduring materials available some type more fitted to enhance the beauty of the home exterior and more capable of giving a longer and more satisfactory account of itself.

There are many types of material which can be counted on to be weather-tight, durable, and satisfactory. One can choose a roof to suit one's budget; but select as good a one as can be afforded. Not so conspicuous in color, either, that you will tire of it shortly. Roofs can be of handsomely blended colors, but they must be well blended, carefully chosen, and the surrounding houses and their roofs must sometimes be taken into consideration.

Often it is quite possible to allow the existing shingles or roof to remain and let the old one form a warm foundation for the new one. That is, if the old roof is in good shape and of the sort of material which will adopt itself to this method. However, if one selects a heavier type of new roof than the one already used a good architect or builder should be called in to examine the house and see if the rafters are sufficiently strong to carry the additional burden.

Any Season of the Year for Re-Roofing.

Some people prefer fall to spring for reroofing on account of the wear and tear to flowers and shrubs. Rainy weather is not so common in the fall, either. Still, one can reroof and people do reroof spring and summer and fall alike. It's more a question of when it becomes necessary. Then it is better to do it whatever the particular season happens to be.

In the layout today is a combination wall cabinet and breakfast table which would not be hard for any handy man around the house, or the town, to make. The idea is interesting, especially if one is fixing up a recreation room in basement or attic, or has a small place and is in dire need for extra accommodations of this kind.

In fact, the market fairly teems with breakfast combinations that fold up and out of sight in one form or another. There is space on the inside or the outside of a door which is unused. Here in this steel cabinet which makes an extra closet on the door we see a clever utilization of this same door space.

Fitted with well planned shelves, racks, clips, hooks, such a closet can harbor a host of needed articles compactly and inconspicuously. There are different types of this closet door combination. The closet intended for the bathroom stands 71 inches high and is 3½ inches deep. For sundry bathroom necessities such as ice bags and hot water bags, soaps, towels, and tissues it will relieve many a medicine chest of an oversupply!

Clever Closet Made for the Kitchen Door.

The closet for the kitchen door stands 71 inches high, but is a little deeper—4½ inches—a fine retreat for brooms and mops, cleaning utensils of all kinds, dustpans, brushes, and so on. There are also steel closets for the bedroom, with hangers for garments and shelves for other supplies. A steel closet is available which is made up entirely of shelves to meet a varied assortment of needs throughout the house.

And last but not least, there is a delightful little buffet-closet, with shelves and racks and hooks for every imaginable kind of drinkable! There is also a folding service table tucked away so that one can serve light refreshments. Besides all this a key is provided and lock. Drinkables, these days, can be among our most cherished possessions.

This may be the year we make up our minds to insulate our attic and finish the rooms for extra space. It will pay us in a cooler house this coming summer, in a warmer house next winter, in fuel bills which are lower—not to mention the joy of salvaging some extra space from the uppermost portions of our home.

There are many ways of doing this; many firms ready to take over the work for you. And a house appreciates such a gift, not to mention the owners themselves. Sometimes it becomes necessary for the owner of a stucco house to consider ways and means of preserving the finish of his home; that is, if it is oldish and showing signs of break in the stucco coat or signs of warping in the stucco mortar.

Great Difference Between Good, Poor Stucco.

Where this is the case, the home owner has learned to his sorrow that there is a great deal of difference between good stucco work and poor. The public has become much more stucco minded the last few years; there is no reason for poor stucco jobs. That they have happened on occasions in the past is to be regretted, but there is one hopeful aspect of the matter. It is no difficult task to repair or renew the stucco with good and enduring materials and so end the problem for all time.

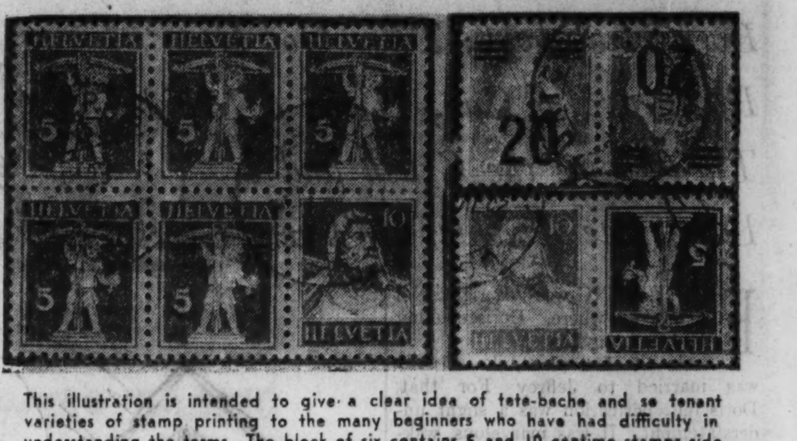
A fine textured, waterproof recoating can be carefully applied to the exterior so that the old defects and the old shabbiness disappear entirely. First, of course, cracks must be repaired, and before such work is started a thorough inspection should be given the house. Surfaces should be carefully examined for any rotted or buckling lath, the firmness of the underlayers of stucco should be tested, and close inspection made of foundation, corners, jamming, doors, windows, gutters, and downspouts.

One may secure recoatings in the finest shades: ivories and grays, buffs and warm creams, and the brighter tones as well, if one wishes. This recoating has tenacity and strength.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will be glad to answer questions concerning stamps. A stamped, self-addressed envelope should be inclosed in case a personal reply is desired.



This illustration is intended to give a clear idea of tete-beche and se tenant varieties of stamp printing to the many beginners who have had difficulty in understanding the terms. The block of six contains 5 and 10 centime stamps side by side or "se tenant." The pair with seated figure of Helvetia, 20 centime surcharged on 25 centime is "tete-beche"; that is, one is upside down in relation to the other. The lower pair, which shows William Tell on the 10 centime and his son with a cross-bow and an apple pierced by an arrow on the 5 centime combines both these oddities and would be described as a "pair, 5 and 10 centime, se tenant, tete-beche." All of the stamps are recent issues of Switzerland.

BEGINNERS frequently ask the meaning of the United States stamps bearing the overprinted words "Kans." or "Nebr.," and are usually under the impression that they are pre-cancels of some kind. These stamps are not pre-cancels, but ordinary stamps, good for postage on any class of mail matter, mailed any place within the United States. In other words, even though they are overprinted with the abbreviations of Kansas and Nebraska, their use is not limited to those states.

The overprint shows that they were sold originally in those states, and if used in quantity from some other state there is no doubt but that the postal inspectors would inquire about their source. They were so overprinted in order to make it difficult for a postal thief to dispose of his loot, and it is safe to say that it would be nearly impossible for him to sell them outside the state named. All values of the regular stamps from 1 to 10 cents were overprinted for each state in 1929, but their use has since been discontinued.

U. S. Considered Plan.

Very few philatelists are aware of the fact that in 1907 the postoffice department gave serious consideration to a similar plan to reduce thefts of stamps. However, at that time it was the intention to issue a series of stamps in which a blank panel was included in the design. Within this panel was to be placed at a later printing operation the name of the city at which the stamps were to be sold.

Some 6,000 cities were included in the list of names to be overprinted. When it is considered that the series of 1902, which was current at that time, included 13 values, it would have given the collector a total of 78,000 stamps to look for. Fortunately the idea died before the collectors had a chance to kick about it. No mention was made at the time about the treatment that would be accorded the remaining 75 per cent of the postoffices.

Mexico for many years overprinted her stamps with the name of the district in which they were sold and in which they could be used as a means against theft.

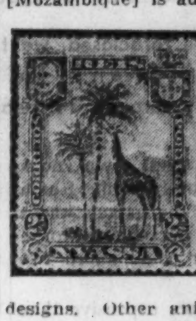
Air Mail Cachet.

June 1, 1933, marks the fifth anniversary of airmail service between Buffalo and Albany, N. Y. An appropriate cachet will be applied to airmail covers only. Send stamped [8 cents], sealed, stuffed and self-addressed covers to the sponsors—Bison Philatelic Society, P. O. Box 2, Kensington Station, Buffalo, N. Y. No charge, but for two cents covers will be autographed.

Old Ironsides Cachet.

There will be considerable delay in obtaining the cachets on the occasion of the visit of the frigate Constitution to Portland, Ore., inasmuch as the visit which was to take place in May has been postponed to Aug. 2.

The Nyassa Stamp.



A portion of Portuguese East Africa [Mozambique] is administered by the Nyassa company as a private concession. The stamps issued by that company bear the word Nyassa, and for many years the giraffe, native to that district, was used as the motif for most of the stamp designs. Other animals pictured by Nyassa are the zebra and the camel. Many boys make their first acquaintance with the strange birds and animals of the world when they see them on stamps.

Your Questions.

J. S. C.—St. Anthony has been the subject of three commemorative sets of stamps. Portugal in 1895 issued 15 values in four designs to honor the 700th anniversary of his birth. Each of these stamps has a prayer printed on the back. In 1931 Portugal issued six values, all different, to commemorate the 700th anniversary of his death, and in the same year Italy issued seven values for the same reason.

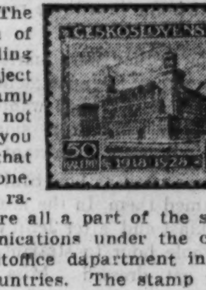
A. N. W.—The letters "R. O." overprinted on a Turkish stamp indicate that the stamp was thereby valid for use in Eastern Roumelia, then a part of Turkey and later a part of Bulgaria. The letters are the abbreviation for the French words "Roumelie Orientale." This district is now a part of Jugo-Slavia.

J. L. H.—The date of issue of the stamps for A Century of Progress has not been announced. In order to obtain "first day" cancellations it will be necessary for you to send your sealed and self-addressed covers or post cards under outside wrapper together with a money order to cover the cost of the stamps required to the postmaster at Chicago.

Portland Rose Festival.

Cachets may be obtained during the Portland Rose festival which lasts from June 8 to 11. The famous rose cachet will be applied in a different color each day. Send covers ready to go [either 3 cent or airmail stamps] to M. F. McCamley, Cachet Director, Festival Headquarters, 704 Oregonian building, Portland, Ore.

From Czechoslovakia.



This Czechoslovakian stamp of 1928 shows a view of the telephone exchange at Prague. The selection of this building as the subject of a stamp design is not odd when you consider that the telephone, telegraph, radio, etc., are all a part of the system of communications under the control of the postoffice department in most foreign countries. The stamp is one of a series issued to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the independence of that nation.

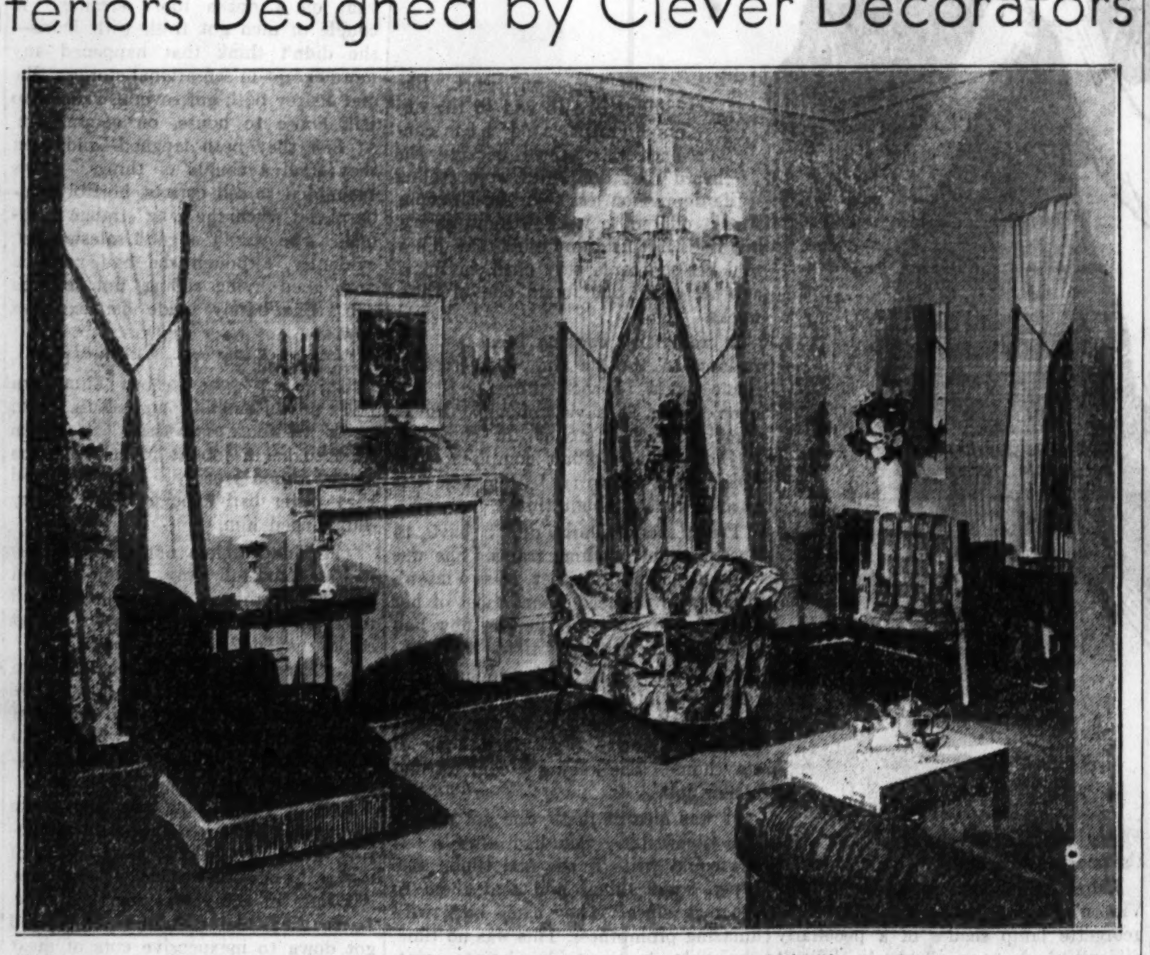
Touches of Victorian Elegance Are Appearing in Modern Interiors Designed by Clever Decorators

There's a Return to the Beauty and Dignity of a More Leisurely Era

By Edith Weigle.



What an intelligent decorator can achieve by the wise combining of the best of the Victorian with our present day furniture and accessories is seen in this charming and spacious living room displayed in the newly furnished budget house of a Chicago store. Although an air of quiet elegance has been created, prices have been kept down to the average person's spending power.

NOW that we're wearing perky little shoulder capes, voluminous sleeves a la Grandmother's day, amusing, tiny tilted-in-the-rear hats that are strongly 19th century in aspect, how about a few Victorian touches in the house to complete the idea? If you're really up to the minute 1933 your're just a wee bit Victorian both in your dress and in your home.

By this we don't for a minute mean there's a return to anti-macassars, hassocks and jig saw brackets. Heavens, no! Our smart decorators are merely taking the cream of the Victorian period, so to speak, and throwing away the eras, over-ornate, gingerbready things commonly associated with furniture of Queen Vic's age. They combine their gleanings from another century with modern backgrounds, with broadloom rugs, or new upholstery fabrics, or up to date, luxurious sofas, and the effects are charming.

One New York interior decorator is known for his Victorian rooms. In fact he has gone in so heavily for that sort of thing that he does practically nothing else. Others who do not favor an entire return to the late 1800's and early 1900's nevertheless succumb to the quaint charms of the ball and tassel fringe, for instance, or the gorgeous floral chintzes of those days, or the amusing glass and china ornaments, or the swag and tassel wallpaper with borders, or the dado. It's simply surprising to see the number of Victorian items we've adopted without knowing it.

In a most intriguing budget house of a large State street store are some fascinating interiors, no small ingredient of whose charm is their Victorian flavor. There's a bedroom almost every woman is sure to admire and want for her own. The walls are a delicious rose-pink with a dado of white, stenciled on with paint. [By the way, this is a touch that is easy to copy in your own home. It relieves the monotony of a solid color painted wall space and is ever so decorative.]

Almost one entire end of the room is occupied by a large window which is curtained in soft white dotted material over which the unusual draperies make a stunning contrast, for they are of deep, navy blue organdy with wide ruffles, looped back, and trimmed with pink moire ribbon. The effect is very lovely.

The carpet is an intriguing Victorian one: black background with roses in scatter design. This gayly patterned floor covering contains all the design in the room, as the walls are a plain, solid color, as are the draperies, also. The furniture is a simple mahogany design.

A Victorian influence is also felt in the living room of this interestingly decorated budget house. First of all, there are old fashioned white lace curtains at the windows—beautiful point lace panels that certainly give an air of elegance to the entire room. Over them in rich folds hang pure white glazed chintz draperies, caught back with scarlet cotton rope and lined with deep hems of scarlet glazed chintz which is turned back slightly to display the lovely color. There is wide inner hem or facing of the scarlet chintz across the bottoms of the draperies, also.

Before these windows, as shown in the picture today, are tall, graceful plant stands with tôle jars of trailing ivy.

Walls in this living room are a soft, indefinite gray and the broadloom rug shades of pink and deeper rose in a is of the same color, a shade deeper. The interesting thing about the rug is that it has a fringe of white on all four sides, thus taking away from the banal effect of the ordinary broadloom.

Balancing the love seat at the other side of the fireplace are a Biedermeier table and a comfortable lounge chair done in a deep brown homespun material and—pure Victorian—edged about the base with fringe trimming. We thought a pair of pale gray armchairs very chic. One is seen in the right background of the picture. The upholstery is put on in vertical ridges, and is a soft shade of gray-green with a small conventional design in a contrasting color.

On either side of one wide window are a pair of handsome empire tables on which are placed huge glass vases filled with large artificial white shell flowers, and above which hang extremely modern unframed mirrors. In front of the window is a fairly large leather-topped drum table of mahogany.

White accents occur in the lamp shades, window draperies, and the shades of the very lovely crystal Victorian chandelier. The side lights are electric tapers with silver Empire bracket mountings. And drawn up before the moire sofa is an unusually interesting white coffee table of modern feeling, with a gold border about the apron.

Over the mantle is hung a modern interpretation of a Victorian subject: a maiden with a nosegay of flowers in either hand. The frame is a silver metal.

Throughout the seven or eight rooms are other lovely touches of a vanished day, but for beauty and quiet elegance it is hard to equal this living room.

Mortgage

It was early in the morning when Mrs. Williams looked at the house. It was a good thing Doris was dressed. She'd had a way, lately, of staying in bed far too late. There didn't seem to be anything to get up for.

She was hanging glass curtains when the bell rang. They looked nice. Fresh and crisp. She was wearing a blue and white gingham house dress. Instinctively she felt her hair, was glad it was smooth.

MRS. WILLIAMS was comfortably round and in her early sixties. She liked the house. She didn't say much, but she said the right things.

"Most of the furnished homes I've seen are atrocious," she said. "I like this," and, "We have been living in a suburb of Chicago—there are just the two of us—and when Mr. Williams was transferred here we rented our home. I've been looking for weeks and haven't found a place I could live in until I saw this."

She inquired about the rental, about the neighborhood.

"Are you the housekeeper here?" she asked then. Doris was about to draw herself up indignantly. Couldn't even an old lady like Mrs. Williams tell she wasn't a servant? But if she said too much, lost her temper——

Before she could say anything Mrs. Williams went on, "I hope you haven't another position. Now that I've found a house I hate to think of breaking in a new maid. If you're used to this house——"

Doris thought fast. Faster than she had ever thought in all her life. If she did the housework it would mean staying right here in their own dear house—even if it would be one room over the garage instead of the whole house. And food and salary, too.

"I think that would be very nice," Doris answered. "I would like very much to work for you. I'm a good plain cook." Jeffrey couldn't stay and not do anything. "My husband is a chauffeur and looks after the garden or the furnace," she added.

"It's such a small place I hadn't thought of two in help," said Mrs. Williams. "But I do get nervous when Mr. Williams drives at night. If you aren't asking too much I'll speak to Mr. Williams about it. I'll bring him out right after dinner tonight."

Mrs. Williams left and Jeffrey came home. He was indignant and bewildered at first. And then there came over his face a look of peace that Doris hadn't seen in a long time.

"I've always thought house servants had the best of it," he said.

Mr. Williams liked the house. He agreed that the salary the couple wanted wasn't too high and that a man might come in handy.

The house was rented. They were engaged! The Williams were moving in in two days!

Doris and Jeffrey cleaned house. They moved some of their pet possessions into the room over the garage. It was a nice room with two windows and it had their old bedroom furniture.

Housework for some one else wasn't as pleasant as for yourself. Being a chauffeur wasn't as much fun as driving alone with your wife, especially at night, when you had to stay alone in the car and your wife was at home alone, too. But Mr. and Mrs. Williams were considerate and thoughtful. Doris and Jeffrey decided they were grand to work for. And there were three meals a day. And money, too!

THEY had feared discovery. Old friends dropping in. Something that had to be explained. Nothing like that happened. When the telephone rang Doris answered it on the extension in the kitchen. The Williams were not inquisitive. Very few people telephoned. If you aren't entertaining folks in town aren't apt to telephone to find out how you are. And the Martins hadn't entertained in a long time.

They went to the second show at the movies. And they stayed in every second Sunday. There weren't many places to go anyhow. They bought a small radio for their room. And sometimes at night when the Williams were not at home they went into the living room and sat in their favorite chairs—and pretended it was theirs again.

This couldn't go on. But it was a breathing space. A grand one. And the house was saved temporarily at any rate.

In six months all of the neighborhood bills were paid and they had started in on the department stores. A few months more and they could save money.

"And this time we'll save," said Jeffrey.

It was on a Sunday afternoon and the Williams' had gone out. The doorbell rang. Jeffrey answered it. There stood Old Man Farrel!

Jeffrey was embarrassed. Old Man Farrel had never called on him before. Had he come to see the Williams?

"Glad I caught you at home," Old Man Farrel said. "It was such a nice day I was afraid I'd miss you."

"We were going out later," Jeffrey answered, puzzled.

"I was going to telephone to ask you to come to the office for a conference but this is better. I wanted to get a glimpse of your home," Old Man Farrel went on.

"A conference?" asked Jeffrey.

"Yes," said Old Man Farrel. "I'm reorganizing. Got rid of all the deadwood. Cut down to about one-fourth, but they're all good. And that nephew doesn't know as much as a three year old puppy. I thought if you could come back . . . You have a position?"

"Yes," said Jeffrey, "I have. But——"

"That proves another point of mine," Old Man Farrel went on. "All these stories of depression! I've always said that a good man could get a job. I looked up one employé and found him living in an awful place and out of work. Not the kind of timber I want in my firm. You have a nice house here. Own it, don't you?"

"Yes," said Jeffrey. "Bought it four years ago."

"That's so," said Old Man Farrel. "I know what I'm doing now. We can talk details any day that's convenient for you."

Jeffrey nodded, speechless. He had no idea what to say.

"My wife's outside in the car," Old Man Farrel continued. "Is Mrs. Martin at home?"

"Yes, she is," said Jeffrey, "I'll tell her you're here. Won't you ask Mrs Farrel to come in."

He went to get Doris, explaining as much as he could. Mr. and Mrs. Farrel were both in the living room when they got down. Mrs. Farrel was a nice, fluttery little thing. "I can get along fine with her," Doris thought.

They spoke pleasantly of nothing at all. And then a car came up the driveway! Doris and Jeffrey heard it and looked out the window at the same moment. It was Mr. and Mrs. Williams, home earlier than they had expected to be.

Doris never knew how she lived through the next minutes. She and Jeffrey both started toward the door. She reached it first.

"How do you do!" she said and stopped. What if the Williams' wouldn't be nice about things—wouldn't play? She went on, her words tumbling over one another.

"I'm—I'm awfully glad you came home early. You can meet Jeffrey's employer and his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Farrel, Mr. and Mrs. Williams. You know, Jeffrey was with the firm until—until things got so bad. And now Mr. Farrel wants him back again."

THE Williamses, slightly bewildered, were vague but awfully nice about things. Nicer than you could have hoped for. They, too, spoke nothings pleasantly.

"You'll excuse us, won't you?" Mrs. Williams asked after a little while. "We came home early because my husband had a slight headache. I think I'll persuade him to lie down." She smiled at Doris.

"Will you come in after your guests have gone, my dear?" she said.

She said "my dear"! She hadn't made a scene—exposed them! They had been darlings, the Williams'! And now Jeffrey had a job—a better job than ever! And the house was saved!

Doris looked at Jeffrey. He caught her eye and smiled. Everything was all right again!

Her mind raced on. She saw the two of them back in their home—all of it—again. The hairy hand of "Mortgage" raised just a little. She was happier for Jeffrey than for herself. She saw him gay again and successful. But something was gone. And there would always be that little mouse of fear, nibbling.

But already it seemed to Doris that what they had gone through could never have happened here in America where everything is comfortable and safe and prosperous.

Are you lost in the tangle of the Paint Price Puzzle?

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PRODUCTS
SWP
GLOSS WHITE FOR OUTSIDE USE
THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS CO.

Only about 6 gallons of Sherwin-Williams SWP House Paint are needed to do the average 6-room house, two long-wearing coats. Cost of SWP House Paint, for the job (average) $16.30

To paint the same 6-room house with cheap paint will take 10 to 12 gallons. At the average "cheap" paint price, this will cost you from $18.90 to $22.00

SWP HOUSE PAINT

the most economical paint you can buy—

In 1-gallon cans, per gallon, $2.80

In 5-gallon cans, per gallon, $2.70

(All regular colors.)

SPECIAL OFFER

25c CAN OF S-W ENAMELOID

for 10c and coupon

18 beautiful colors

Sherwin-Williams Enameloid is the finest quick-drying enamel made. It produces the porcelain-like finish you have often admired on fine furniture. Easy to apply. Dries in about 4 hours. ¼ pint can enough for average chair. Use the coupon.

ENAMELOID
ORANGE

No wonder you're confused. All kinds of paint prices. All manner of wild claims. The question you want answered is: "What is the most economical paint to use?" Here is the correct answer:

That's the correct answer to the Paint Price Puzzle. Buy paint by its cost per job—not by price per gallon. Buy paint made and guaranteed by a manufacturer of known reliability. Cheap paint actually costs you more money than fine old SWP House Paint—the world's standard of paint quality for more than sixty years. Furthermore, SWP House Paint will wear two or three times as long as cheap paint. That's because it is all paint—90% film-forming solid matter that gives your property real protection.

Cheap paint usually contains from 50% to 66% water and other volatile substances which evaporate as soon as applied. That's why it can be sold at "cheap" per gallon prices.

These are times when you want full value for every dollar. Then avoid cheap paint. Come to our paint department and buy money-saving SWP House Paint and other quality-famous Sherwin-Williams Paint Products. You'll be many dollars ahead in the long run.

In the face of recent big price advances on diamonds, silver and platinum, this purchase was most fortunate! We could easily sell these for considerably more than our sale prices and still be under today's retail price levels. But, in accordance with a policy established over 50 years ago, when we make an unusual purchase the savings must be passed on to our patrons!

A RARE investment opportunity . . . you'll want to buy for brides, graduates and yourself! Higher market prices have already made it practically impossible to produce such beautifully crafted, superb quality at the prices for which we're selling these! Glowing words and elaborate descriptions couldn't begin to tell you what thrilling values, what exciting savings are in store for you.

Exciting Story, Fine Acting in Film About Submarines

This Talkie Is Breathtakingly Concerned with U-Boat Warfare and with the Men Who Went Down to the Sea in the World War.

By MAE TINEE.

GOOD MORNING!

The Good Book says something about blessed upon the mountains be the feet of those who come bringing good tidings. Well—here I come. "Hell Below" is in town. It's a good picture. You'll enjoy seeing it.

Now, by "enjoy" I don't mean you'll laugh yourself to death, though the narrative's stern whole IS tinctured with plenty comedy. But I DO mean that you'll find the story engrossing, be thrilled by the smashingly dramatic situations that are, withal, so believable and human, and thoroughly approve of the de luxe acting furnished by every member of the cast.

Concerned with Submarine Warfare.

"Hell Below" is breath-takingly concerned with submarine warfare and the lives of the men who went down to the sea with U boat 14. When, fathoms under water, a submarine meets with disaster THAT is hell below. And so—the title.

Perhaps you read "Pigboats," by Lieutenant Commander Edward Ellsberg? I didn't. Anyway, that's the book this picture was adapted from, and it must have been a yarn with plenty of meat on its bones.

Events take place during 1917 and 1918 and the story's locale is the allied navies' base in the Mediterranean, off the Italian coast. Submarine 14 is the boat in which your interest is most wrapped up. It chases and torpedoes German cruisers and is, on its work of destruction, constantly tailed by enemy pursuers.

Discovers His Girl Is Already Married.

Toler, the boat's commander, is a hard, grave man. "Dead Pan Toler," says a sailor. "If he was to smile you'd know it was a gas pain." A disciplinarian, Toler, but his dampening influence fails to put out the spirits of those two debonair young lieutenants under him, Thomas Knowlton and "Brick" Walters. Gay lads these, one of whom, Knowlton, falls in love with the commander's daughter while on shore leave in an Italian port town. . . .

Tom is to discover, alas, that Joan is married to an officer piti-

Senior Stars Bring Plays to Chicago Stage

World's Fair Period Is Clearing Drama's Sky; Hampden May Return.

By CHARLES COLLINS.

THE stars have begun to appear in the theatrical firmament, which has been overcast too long in this region—the elder stars of the drama with names that are resonant of high achievement in the art of acting, the heroes and heroines of the epic of the American stage before the movies, the talkies, the radio, and the economic woe came into history to diminish its stature.

Not many of these commanding figures of the footlights remain in active and brilliant practice of "the" profession, and when they are visible they arouse mixed emotions not immediately concerned with their current activity—a sentimental gratitude for the fine performances of their past, a friendly interest in their present, and a deep regret that their future lies on the downward slope of life. For they are a great race that is passing without much promise of a satisfactory posterity, and as they go

"The Piccoli," called the most famous puppet show in the world, begins an engagement at the Erlanger theater tomorrow night under the management of Vittorio Podrecca, an impresario from Rome. This picture shows one of the hundreds of large-sized dolls that are the actors in this entertainment.

Woes of Wedlock Furnish Plots for Two New Plays

By BURNS MANTLE.

NEW YORK.—(Special.)—You know, there are weeks and weeks when, if it were not for the persistent struggle of husbands and wives to hit upon some compromise that will permit them to go on living together under the same roof, there just wouldn't be any drama or probably any married life.

In this week's reflective stage adventures there are two major struggles. One is that of the Tom Cassidys, starting twenty years ago in New York and coming down to 1928, and the other that of the Mark Fourniers of Orleans, France.

The Cassidys come in under the title of "Hilda Cassidy," written by a husband and wife named Lieferant, and the Fourniers are represented by "Best Sellers," written by Edouard Bourdet, the "Captive" man, as "Vient de Paraitre" and put into English by Dorothy Cheston Bennett, wife of the late Arnold Bennett, which gives it a swell literary background.

Might Have Been "Tom and Hilda Cassidy."

The Cassidy play, which is the more stirring, might as reasonably have been called "Tom and Hilda Cassidy" were it not for the natural prejudice against husbands. It was just as hard for Tom, being a born cheater, to live with Hilda, a stanch conformist, as it was for Hilda to live with Tom. But martyred wives are more dramatic.

Tom had married Hilda in 1908, partly because she wanted him to and partly because her folks could give him an interest in their cigar store. He really loved Mamie Kimmel, who lived in the same tenement.

Later, when Tom discovered he still loved Mamie and went back to her, Hilda put a brave face on the situation. When she had a child, she said, that would keep Tom home.

But you never can tell about men. Ten years later, which would be in 1918, we find Tom advanced from bookmaking in the back room of the cigar store to bootlegging in the same back room. His daughter is 10 and he is devoted to her. But he still clings to Mamie, too.

Hilda Accepts the Odd Situation.

Hilda has come to accept the situation by now and ends by sending Tom to live with Mamie. If he loves her let him live with her. Which Tom does; but not for long. The police catch him

Now where do you suppose the big man got the little dolly? Zasu Pitts is inquiring and Slim Summerville is—or maybe isn't—answering. "Out All Night." On view at the Palace.

George M. Cohan, the most versatile man of the American stage, comes to the Grand Opera House this evening in the latest comedy from his pen, "Pigeons and People." In this scene he is in a huddle with Alney Alba, Eleanor Audley, Paul McGrath, Edward Nannery, and Walter Gilbert.

FRIENDS OF MUSIC PLAN CONCERTS

By EDWARD MOORE.

THE Chicago Friends of Music are planning something of considerable importance for music this summer. Wednesday, June 7, will be the date of the first of a series of twenty concerts at the Auditorium. The Chicago Symphony orchestra, augmented to 100 players and called the Century of Progress Festival orchestra, will play, Frederick A. Stock will direct, and soloists of high fame will participate.

Popular prices will prevail. Admission to the galleries will be twenty-five cents, to the balcony fifty cents, to the main floor seventy-five cents. Boxes will be $10 for gala nights and $6 for the popular concerts on Saturday evenings.

The opening concert was to have been on Sunday, June 4, but this date has been released to the Choir Directors' guild under Dr. George Tenney, who will direct an organization of over 200 choirs in "The Messiah," to be held in the court of the Hall of States at A Century of Progress. This is to be another unusual event. It is told that the solo parts will be sung by groups of fifty singers each, it being Mr. Stock's belief that

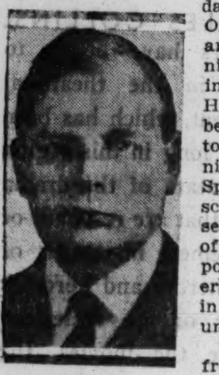
PROPHET OF NEW FAITH TO SPEAK AT SUNDAY CLUB

Dean Sperry's Views May Be Point of Union.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The annual visits of Dean Willard L. Sperry of the Harvard Divinity school at the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, are being recognized as increasingly significant. He speaks again before the club tonight. The significance of Dean Sperry is that his school is representative of one of the two possible points where liberal Christianity in the future may unite.



DEAN WILLARD L. SPERRY.

The other point frequently noted as such a possibility has been the "middle road" communion, the Church of England, which in America is the Episcopal church. Since the Lausanne conference on faith and order a few years ago, the Episcopal church has been seen to move from the middle road between Protestantism and Catholicism and to veer with increasing insistence toward the latter.

Laity Little Affected.

This has meant that liberal Protestantism has tended to seek some other possible ground upon which a reunion may be possible. It is true that many pastors of Protestant churches have sought and received Episcopal orders. But, although the movement of Protestant clergy toward the Episcopal church may be remarked, yet this movement is without a comparable lay movement in that direction. Seldom does a Protestant pastor who becomes an Episcopal clergyman ever influence members of his former congregation toward Episcopal confirmation, and it is frequently noted that history shows almost no pronounced movements in religion which did not draw both inspiration and energy from groups of laity and literally never from the clergy.

Thus today, when the lay mind is turning scientific, it is a fair prediction that its thought will take form in religion somewhere near religion's scientific center of gravity. Dean Sperry's school is coming to be known as one of that sort. His books on religion are possibly as widely read by laity as any being written today.

No Objective Picture of Jesus.

In Dean Sperry's Shaffer lectures at Yale on "Our Approach to Jesus," he said that it is just as impossible to construct an objective picture of Jesus or account of his teaching as it is to make an entirely objective picture of Washington or Lincoln.

Dean Sperry then argues that it is similarly impossible to make "the Jesus of history" the final authority in matters of faith. He continues by saying that the great interpretations of the Person of Christ have always been made in terms of some previously existing view of the world and of God.

With changed and changing understandings of the form of the universe, Dean Sperry argues that the traditional interpretations of the Person of Christ, known among theologians as "Christologies," are therefore unsatisfactory. He contends that recent scientific developments give ground for hope that before long there may be developed a philosophy of religion into which the full appreciation of the Jesus of history may satisfactorily be fitted.

RABBIS MEET TUESDAY

The 16th annual conference of the Chicago Rabbinical association will be held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Covenant club. The conference, as in the past, will be addressed by prominent scholars on subjects of vital concern to Judaism and Jewry. It will consist of the following four sessions:

Tuesday, 10:30 a. m.—Prof. Wilhelm Pauck of the Chicago Theological seminary, on "Newer Theological Movements in Germany"; Dr. Felix A. Levy of Temple Emanuel, on "Modern Philosophical Trends."

Tuesday, 2:30 p. m.—Prof. A. T. Olmstead of the University of Chicago, on "Direct and Indirect Light on the Old Testament." Discussion on this paper to be led by Dr. Julius Siegel of Humboldt Boulevard temple.

Wednesday, 11 a. m.—Samuel A. Goldsmith, executive director of the Jewish Charities of Chicago, on "Relation of Jewish Education to the Community Welfare Organization." Discussion on this paper will be led by Rabbi Samuel M. Blumenfield of the Board of Jewish Education.

Wednesday, 2:30 p. m.—Dr. A. M. Dushkin, executive director of the Board of Jewish Education, on "Purpose, Theories, and Application of Modern Jewish Education." Discussion on this paper will be led by Rabbi B. H. Birnbaum of the Logan Square congregation.

All the sessions of the conference will be free to the public. This gathering is being arranged by a committee of the Chicago Rabbinical association, of which Rabbi George Fox is chairman.

CHORUS OF 700 TO SING

Seven hundred choristers, in white cottas and surplices, will take the stage at Orchestra hall next Sunday afternoon, in which is termed one of the most unique musical programs presented in Chicago. The choristers will come from Episcopal churches over the city and the program will present musically the story of the Christian seasons.

Directing the concert will be Roger Tuttle, president of the Chicago Choirmasters' association and choir director of St. Bartholomew's church, Englewood. Stanley Martin, organist of the Sunday Evening club and of St. Mark's church, Evanston, will be at the organ. Robert Birch, organist and choir director of the Church of the Redeemer, Hyde Park, will play a fifteen minute program preceding the concert. Mr. Birch and A. J. Strohm of St. Paul's-by-the-Lake church, Rogers Park, will be at the grand pianos during the concert.

Chatham Young People Name Sam Barnett Head

Sam Barnett has been chosen president of the Chatham Young People's club for the ensuing year. Other officers picked: Vice president, Miss Elsie Rubin; corresponding secretary, Miss Sally Kahn; recording secretary, Miss Rose Slan. Future plans of the club include the organization of dancing and dramatic classes and a roof garden dance to be held in June.

250 GIRL SCOUTS TO GIVE FESTIVAL OF OLD ENGLAND

Thousands to Be in Other Events of Play Day.

Several thousand Girl Scouts and their parents will assemble Saturday in Calumet park, 98th street and the lake, for the annual spring Play Day of the Southeast district. Headlining the day's program is an Old English Country festival at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. This will conclude with the presentation of special honors to scouts.

The Golden Eaglet, highest award in Girl Scouting, will be given to six girls: Miss Emily Peterson and Miss Margaret Russell, Troop 36 of Christ Episcopal church; Miss Eleanor Baechle and Miss Eleanor Moninger, Troop 174 of the Avalon Park Community church; Miss Irma Mitton of Troop 65 of Bryn Mawr Community church, and Miss Elsie Teufel of Troop 72 of St. Paul's church on the Midway.

Gold Cord for Troop 36.

Troop 36 as a whole will be honored, gaining the gold cord to attach to its flag in recognition of being registered continuously for ten years. Mrs. John Hodges, 8046 Maryland avenue, is captain of the troop. Silver cords for five years of service will be awarded to Troops 6, 156, and 174, the former two meeting at Bryn Mawr Community church. The respective captains are Mrs. Hope U. Katman, 7310 Constance avenue; Mrs. Helen Clark, 7828 South Shore drive, and Mrs. R. J. Moninger, 8019 Dorchester avenue.

The awards will be presented by Mrs. Richard Bentley, chairman of badges and awards for the Chicago Regional council.

Registration will begin at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, with games filling up the morning. Then will come lunch and an hour for stunts and songs before the pageant starts.

250 Girls in Festival.

More than 250 girls from a score of troops will take part in the English festival, all of them in costume. The play was written by Mrs. Vernon Cooke and is directed by Miss Mary E. Chidlaw, field captain. Mrs. Thomas B. Stephenson is chairman of Play Day.

The queen and court ladies are drawn from Citizen troop 7, made up of older girls from all over the southeast district, which extends from 31st street to the south city limits and from Halsted street to the lake. Miss Chidlaw is the captain.

Miss Alice Hudelson is the queen. ART ASSOCIATION TO EXHIBIT WORK AT CLUB PARLEY

Guests at Tea Today Will Hear Lorado Taft.

The South Side Art association will hold its annual spring exhibition of members' work this week at Hotel Sherman during the annual convention there of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs. The association is the only art club in the federation. The exhibition will be formally opened at 3 o'clock this afternoon with a musical in the hotel's mezzanine galleries at which officers of the association and of the federation will be guests. There will be a greeting by Lorado Taft, honorary president, and Mrs. Aibion L. Headburg, president, will introduce Sondra Miller, dramatic soprano, in a musical program. Paintings and sculpture are included in the exhibition, which is a juried show.

Catholic Club Installs Officers.

Mrs. Joseph Gleason, 6617 Ingleside avenue, was inducted into the presidency of the South Side Catholic Woman's club at its spring luncheon Thursday at the Stevens hotel. Mrs. Gleason was elected to succeed Mrs. Earl R. Reynolds at the annual meeting May 4.

Other new officers are Mrs. M. J. Devaney, 8148 Champlain avenue, second vice president; Mrs. William Lusson, 7135 Woodlawn avenue, corresponding secretary; Mrs. James Allely, 7620 Paxton avenue, treasurer; Mrs. Charles J. Joyce, 718 West Garfield boulevard, chairman of American citizenship.

Paragraphs About People You May Know

IT won't be Ralph Spix's fault if the folks out in the Avalon-Calumet Gateway district aren't Century of Progress conscious. This 13 year old son of the Bruckhart Spixes, 1909 East 86th street, has just completed a model of Old Fort Dearborn that is a honey. It is about the size of a card table and nearly three feet tall. He is in the 8th grade of St. Felicitas school.

Janice Feldkamp, the new arrival at the 8041 Paxton avenue home of South Shore's gentleman plumber, appeared for the first time in any hemisphere on May 6, which was a Saturday. Now Wallie, the proud father, believes it's time to explode that axiom about Saturday's children working for a living. It appears that Mr. Feldkamp is going to have to work for a living for Saturday's children. Janice is looking forward to an introduction to her brothers, Skippy and Jack, being arranged by the charming Mrs. Wallie.

AWFULLY nice, we call it. What better day than April 16 could Ruth Marschall pick for her wedding day? Now it comes out that that is just what she and the lucky man, John E. 2 HIGH SCHOOLS TO GIVE ANNUAL MUSICAL SHOWS

Calumet and Tilden Technical High schools each are presenting their annual operettas at 8 o'clock Wednesday and Thursday evenings in their respective auditoriums.

Calumet has selected "O, Doctor," a drama of the land south of the Rio Grande, which will permit the school's mixed chorus to don brilliant costumes and sing Spanish lyrics. Tilden is presenting the Gilbert and Sullivan "Trial by Jury," and, preceding it, a musical vaudeville show.

Speaking parts in "O Doctor" will be taken by Dick Potter, Miss Mary Rockhold, Miss Helen Anderson, Samuel Silver, Robert Albright, Warren Tobecksen, Miss Mary Mitchell, Miss Dorothy Bruegemann, Miss Margaret Nystrom, Miss Ruth Fischer, Miss Willow Elsbury, Vincent Young, Robert Hulben, William Johnson, Hayden Smith, Frank Calagaris, William Schumaker, and Edward Swanson.

Miss Margaret Blood will direct the mixed chorus in the singing and Mrs. Helen Davidge is coaching the dancers in a ballet, "The Birth of Spring," in which Miss Rockhold, Miss Nina June Eckhardt, and Miss Marjorie Thurber will have leading rôles.

SOUTH SHORE "Y" PLANS DRIVE FOR 2,000 RECRUITS

A roll call for 2,000 supporting members of the South Shore Y. M. C. A. will be opened with a community mass meeting at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the gymnasium of St. John's Methodist Episcopal church, 74th street and Jeffery avenue.

ELMER M. WALSH.

The drive is being organized under the chairmanship of Elmer M. Walsh, member of the "Y" executive committee and former president of the South Bryn Mawr Improvement association. He hopes to see it finished within a week or 10 days, through the aid of civic, business men's, political, church, women's, and Y. M. C. A. organizations which have been asked to coöperate.

About 50 of these groups have been invited to join in the roll call, and if each takes and fills a small quota the success of the campaign will be assured in the easiest possible manner, according to Andrew J. Reed Jr., executive secretary of the South Shore "Y." An organization meeting last week saw representatives of a majority of the bodies pledge their aid.

This campaign, in contrast with previous ones, seeks no large donations. Its object is to enlist an army of supporting members at one dollar apiece.

A demonstration of the work of the "Y," including tumbling and singing, will form part of the massmeeting program.

100 VETERANS PATROL SOUTH PARK WAY AREA TO SPUR FAIR CLEANUP

The south side last week was introduced to a new kind of patrolman—the "beauty defender." Decked out in white, Sam Browne belts, light caps, white shirts, and dark ties, these beauty defenders set out to awaken the south side colored community to a keener realization of its responsibility to be spic and span for the World's Fair.

A corps of 100 Negroes, furnished by Dr. Martin H. Bickham from the relief rolls, is covering South Park way between 24th and 60th streets and Garfield boulevard between South Park and Michigan avenues, as well as Washington park. All are ex-service men, either commissioned or noncommissioned officers.

They are passing out cards inviting all who will to join the Blue Ribbon Honor club and help make and keep the district attractive. As a result of this a generous sprinkling of blue ribbon adorned lapels are making their appearance. Men are on duty from 6 a. m. to 10 p. m.

This campaign is the result of efforts by the Plan Beautiful and Dress Up for the World's Fair organization in the near south side, with the coöperation of Mayor Kelly and the south park board. Edgar G. Brown is director of the Plan Beautiful body.

Mr. Brown said that plans call for extending the campaign for the duration of the fair, and expressed the belief that it will be of lasting benefit to the district.

Another step forward in the plan beautiful campaign was reported by Mr. Brown with the planting of the last of 200 trees in the district near Madden park, 37th and Vernon avenue.

LOOMIS' NAME TO BE GIVEN TO HYDE PARK HALL

Retiring Principal Will Be Feted by Community.

His 28th and last year as principal at Hyde Park High school nearing its end, Dr. Hiram B. Loomis may look forward to next week end as one of the high spots in an eventful pedagogical life. It falls to his lot to be feted by his students, past and present, and by the community which knows him so well.

For years Dr. Loomis has been symbolic of the Stony Island avenue institution; at an assembly Friday noon his students will make certain of perpetuating that association when they name the school auditorium Loomis hall.

An open house for the entire community will be held at the school Friday evening after which there will be a short program in the newly named Loomis hall.

Luncheon on May 27.

Further festivities are planned for May 27, when educational leaders of the city will honor Dr. Loomis at a luncheon in the Congress hotel. Superintendent William J. Bogan will be the principal speaker. Others will include Aaron Kline, president of the Chicago Principals club, and Max W. Korshak, master in chancery, who will talk on the days when Dr. Loomis was at Medill High school before coming to the helm at Hyde Park in 1905.

Miss Jane Tunnell will represent the Hyde Park faculty, Arthur C. Cody will represent the alumni, and Charles Megan, president of the Chicago Bar association, will speak for the community. Dr. Loomis also will talk.

The evening open house will begin at 7 o'clock, with Dr. and Mrs. Loomis receiving their friends in the community.

Gilkey, Scherger to Speak.

Dean Charles W. Gilkey of the University of Chicago chapel and Dr. George L. Scherger of Armour institute are to be principal speakers of the program after the reception.

Two alumni who will furnish the musical part of the program are Earl Wilkie, tenor, and Miss Rosalind Ernest, cellist.

The evening program is under the auspices of the faculty and the Parent-Teacher association. Mrs. O. P. Henning and Mrs. B. Warren Brown are the retiring and incoming presidents, respectively, of the association.

A committee of 100 members is guiding the plans for the three tributes to the grand old man of Hyde Park. George L. Quilici is chairman and Henry Schultz is secretary of this body.

The nine assistant chairmen are: Mr. Cody, Donald K. Colvin, William B. Gemmill, Mr. Korshak, Maj. Reed G. Landis, Gordon Wanzer, Charles E. McGuire, Miss Agnes Stuart, and Miss Janet P. White, dean of girls.

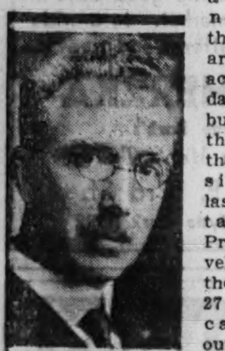
VAST FAIR NET HAS 4 STUDIOS, 72 PICKUP POINTS

W-G-N to Carry Opening by President.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

With the opening date for A Century of Progress pushed forward to a week from next Saturday, the fair grounds are seething with activity these days. One of the busiest sectors on the lake front is the radio division, speeding last minute details so that President Roosevelt's opening of the fair on May 27 may be broadcast throughout the nation and abroad. W-G-N, CBS, and NBC and other independent stations will carry the fair inaugural programs.



R. CALVERT HAWS.

The World's Fair radio system has been worked out along elaborate and well considered lines, under the direction of R. Calvert Haws, that give promise of the utmost efficiency and general satisfaction for both listeners and sponsors. There are four major studios on the grounds. These will be used for nation-wide broadcasts that are assured through contracts with sponsors. In addition there will be 72 points of pickup on the grounds, with commercial programs coming from some of these. Six hundred miles of wire have been laid on the grounds.

Public Address System Ready.

More than fifty fair programs a week are now heard on well over a hundred stations, extending from coast to coast and boundary to boundary. Among the better known speakers and entertainers on these programs ballyhooing the exposition are Burton Holmes, Carveth Wells, Dr. Allen D. Albert, Jean Paul King, Evelyn Renee, and Jill and Judy.

All the Chicago stations as well as the chains will have lines into the administration building, housing the nerve center of the fair's net. The exposition has no broadcasting station of its own, nor does it have an amplification unit. It has, however, a vast public address system, with loud speakers placed strategically over the grounds. These are grouped in seven zones. Thus that many programs might be picked up simultaneously from various spots on the grounds, broadcast by radio stations, and fed back to the fair crowds through the public address system.

Three Giant Studios.

Most of the broadcasts up to now have emanated from the working studio in the administration building, which has no facilities for spectators. By the opening date, however, three great studios in "Hollywood at the Fair" on Northerly island will be available for use. Studio X will have a stage 40 by 60 feet and will seat 2,000 persons. Studio Y, with a like stage, will accommodate 850, and Studio Z will take care of an audience of 450.

Many national advertisers are bringing their regular radio shows to the fair grounds, some to broadcast them all summer from the lake front, others for shorter periods. Singin' Sam, heard through W-G-N—CBS, will broadcast from a fair studio. Ben Bernie will broadcast both his commercial and sustaining programs from a casino on the island. A. & P. Gypsies will be heard regularly from the lakeside and Old Heidelberg inn, and the Vienna Garden café will present programs.

Others Are Negotiating.

Others with whom negotiations are under way are the Tuesday evening Eddie Guest-Koestner orchestra program, the Guy Lombardo-Burns and Allen show, the Contented hour, with Morgan Eastman's orchestra, the Ed Wynn show, and Vincent Lopez Sunday night broadcast. And there will be plenty of others.

The first broadcast on the opening day will come with the parade escorting the President to Soldiers' field at approximately 11 a. m., according to advance information. Then will follow the description of the "Salute to Nations," during which flags of the nations will be unfurled. President Roosevelt's dedicatory address will then be heard. Gov. Horner, Mayor Kelly, and Rufus C. Dawes, president of the exposition, will also speak.

4,000 Voices at Night.

In the evening the broadcast will start at approximately 8:15 o'clock with a broadcast by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Frederick Stock, with Lawrence Tibbett as soloist and a chorus of 4,000 voices from the court of the Hall of Science on the exposition grounds.

At 9 o'clock the lines will be switched to Harvard university for a description of activities in capturing a light beam from the star Arcturus, converting it into an electric impulse, and wiring it to Chicago, where this impulse will turn on a huge searchlight on the Sky Ride tower. That light, in turn, will turn on lights on buildings over the exposition grounds.

Amateur short wave transmitting equipment is being moved from the Administration building to spacious quarters in the Travel and Transport building. Code and telephone messages will be transmitted to other hams all over the world.

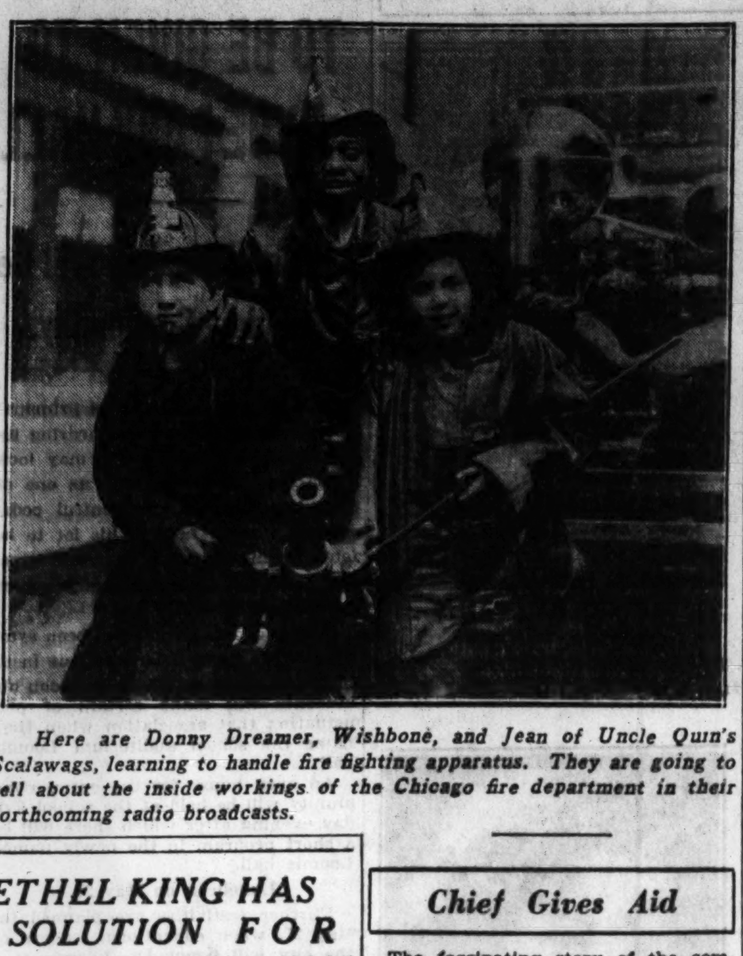
Girl Comedian Added to Evening in Paris Show

With comedy interpolations by Agnes Moorehead, melody and romance will be offered by Mary McCoy, soprano, Woods Willer, baritone, and Nat Shilkret and his orchestra in another presentation of "An Evening in Paris," from 8:30 to 9 p. m. tomorrow.

Appleberry to Be Heard with 2 Pals at 9 o'Clock

"Rube Appleberry," whose antics along with his pals, Manager Mac McConnell and Tommy Malloy, are broadcast over W-G-N three times a week, will be heard at 9 p. m. each Tuesday, Thursday and Friday in the future. This is a new schedule.

Young Fire Fighters of the Air



Here are Donny Dreamer, Wishbone, and Jean of Uncle Quin's Scalawags, learning to handle fire fighting apparatus. They are going to tell about the inside workings of the Chicago fire department in their forthcoming radio broadcasts.

ETHEL KING HAS SOLUTION FOR LOVE PROBLEMS

What should a young man do if the boss' daughter falls in love with him and he likes his job better than he likes the girl?

What should a young wife do when gossipy neighbors bear tales about her husband?

What would you do if the man who was in love with you lisped?

These and other questions of love and romance come to the attention of Ethel King Monday during the broadcast of the Heart to Heart club, heard at 8 o'clock Monday evenings from W-G-N.

Taken from letters written by listeners who are puzzled over problems of home and family, the questions are presented in dramatized form, and then submitted to Ethel King, whose remarkable sympathy and insight has already helped hundreds of women in settling their problems.

Listeners are invited to send in their own problems, which will either be dramatized over the air or answered personally by Miss King.

Dr. Albert to Talk on Fair Over W-G-N Friday

Dr. Allen D. Albert of A Century of Progress staff and former president of Rotary International, will address the Executives' club on W-G-N at 1 o'clock on Friday on the subject, "The Great Show."

Chief Gives Aid

The fascinating story of the complete workings of the Chicago fire department will be told for juvenile listeners during the next two weeks when "Donny Dreamer, Jean and Wishbone" become real firemen in their six o'clock programs from W-G-N.

Material for the adventures of the children has been supplied by Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan and his assistants. Uncle Quin and the youngsters have devoted several days to inspecting fire stations, the fire boat, and equipment.

In the course of nightly episodes the elaborate fire alarm system of the city will be explained, along with various anecdotes of famous fires, heroic exploits and engine house mascots.

HELEN ORNSTEIN AND ALLAN GRANT ON NEW SERIES

Helen Ornstein, Chicago Civic Opera contralto, will be heard in a program of songs with Allan Grant at 1 o'clock every Wednesday. Miss Ornstein made her debut in Milan, and was heard in leading contralto rôles with the Chicago opera. She has been singing on W-G-N in "Opera Miniatures."

Hal Kemp to Respond to Requests at Theater

In response to requests sent in by his Chicago radio audience, Hal Kemp and his band will play four popular tunes when the boys show for a week at the Chicago theater starting next Friday. Kemp's entire band will be at the theater. Miss Deane Janis, who sings on the air with Kemp's band, will be there to sing along with Skinnay Ennis and Saxy Dowell. The songs selected for the stage show are "Heart of Stone," "Happy Days Are Here Again," "I've Got a Date with an Angel," and a medley of the featured numbers from the movie "Forty-Second Street."

"HEADLINES OF OTHER DAYS" HAS 1ST ANNIVERSARY

Initial Broadcast Will Be Repeated Tuesday.

The 365th "Headlines of Other Days" will be heard over W-G-N at 9:35 o'clock on Tuesday evening. Just a year ago, on May 16, the first reminiscent headlines were put on the air, and those same headlines will be repeated by Quin Ryan on Tuesday—the story of Steve Brodie's jump off Brooklyn bridge.

Hundreds of thousands of suggestions have been sent in by listeners during the year, many of them concerning events that had already been reviewed. The headlines most suggested have been of the disaster of the steamer Eastland, the sinking of the Titanic, the Iroquois theater fire, the San Francisco earthquake, the Johnstown flood, and famous railroad wrecks. At the present time enough suggestions of famous headlines are reposing in the files to run another year.

Another of the good old songs of the days when father was a boy will be featured on the "High Spot of the Air" program on W-G-N at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening. "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" will be presented by the Chicagoans quartet and the orchestra. A special arrangement of the tune has been made by Al Wathall, W-G-N's staff arranger.

Other popular musical numbers will make up the program, which has Virginia Clark as hostess. Arthur Wright, young tenor, will offer "Let's Call It a Day," from the musical show "Strike Me Pink," and "I'm Falling in Love with Some One." Natalie Alt will sing themes from the musical comedy "The Student Prince," including a duet with Mr. Wright on "Deep in My Heart," "All Alone Monday," from the musical comedy "The Ramblers," and "Won't You Stay to Tea?"

An added feature of the program will be the playing of "Ragamuffin" by the double piano team, accompanied by the orchestra, with the quartet singing the chorus.

Paul L. Schroeder, state criminologist and director of the Institute for Juvenile Research, will be heard on W-G-N at 1:10 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, when he addresses the Rotary club at its weekly luncheon. Mr. Schroeder's subject is "Juvenile Delinquency."

DE PAUW UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT TO SPEAK OVER W-G-N TUESDAY

Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, president of De Pauw university at Greencastle, Ind., will speak from W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station at 6:30 Tuesday evening, on the subject, "De Pauw and A Century of Progress." De Pauw will celebrate its "Century of Progress" in 1937.

DR. G. B. OXNAM.
[Cammack Photo.]

Dr. Oxnam's address will be heard from the Towne room at the Knickerbocker hotel where it is expected more than 150 alumni of the institution will be gathered for their annual De Pauw banquet. Other speakers at the dinner will be Dr. Henry Boyer Longden, vice president of the university, and former Senator James E. Watson, who also will act as toastmaster.

BERNIE CUMMINS GETS OFFER TO MAKE A PICTURE

Bernie Cummins and his orchestra, heard nightly over W-G-N, have received an offer from a Hollywood producer to make a feature picture this summer. The movie magnate plans to build one of those big musical revue pictures featuring a rhythm dance orchestra and last week contracted Bernie in an effort to get the Trianon ballroom maestro to bring his orchestra to the coast during the summer months.

From the Aragon ballroom, where Wayne King and his orchestra broadcast their distinctive dance music through W-G-N, comes news of renewed activity of the "Goofus Clubs." When Wayne introduced that poular novelty tune "Goofus," many of King's listeners organized clubs. The Hinsdale club this year is building a huge float depicting the "goofus bird" which will be used in the annual Fourth of July celebration and parade in Hinsdale.

NORTHWESTERN CHOIR WILL SING NEXT WEDNESDAY

The Northwestern a cappella choir will present its annual W-G-N concert at 9:45 o'clock Wednesday, at which time this noted choral organization of 45 voices under the direction of Prof. Oliver S. Beltz, will sing a three part program. In the first group of songs are Palestrina's "Gloria Patri," and "Adoramus Te," and the traditional "Alta Trinita Peata." These will be followed by the Tschaikovski "O Praise the Name of the Lord." The third group of modern numbers includes "Sing We and Chant It," and "Fire, Fire, My Heart," by Morley and "The Lee Shore," by Coleridge-Taylor.

ROLLER SKATING CHAMPIONSHIPS GO TO 4 PARKS

Grand Crossing, White, Bessemer, Cornell Win.

Roller skating championships in the south parks were spread around over a wide territory, most of the parks breaking into the scoring, while the four titles were divided among as many parks. Mark White square won the junior girls' meet, while Grand Crossing took the intermediate crown in a two team race, which saw Palmer with 22 points to 29 for the winners.

The closest competition was among the intermediate boys. Cornell edged out in front with 15 points, while Ogden and Calumet had 12 each and Bessemer scored 11 points. Bessemer won the junior boys' meet, with Tuley second, 14 points to 12.

Coasting for distance—Won by Anna Goldikas [Davis]; Ann Dorus [White], second; Dolores Martin [Grand Crossing], third; Loraine Fergus [Grand Crossing], fourth.

Single skate race—Won by Irene Vascura [Gage]; Katherine Sulkowski [Mann], second; Vida Brooker [Calumet], third; Harriett Boynton [Mann], fourth.

Points: White, 12; Davis, 7; Gage, 7; Mann, 6; Russell, 5; Grand Crossing, 4; Bessemer, 3; Calumet, 3; Ogden, 1.

Five girls—Dorothy Cunningham and Helen Swierkos of Palmer and Gertrude Gustafson, Lottie Patarini, and Genevieve Morien of Grand Crossing—led the intermediate girls. Summaries:

100 yard dash—Won by Gertrude Gustafson; Mary Juhasz [Tuley], second; Lottie Patarini [Grand Crossing], third; Genevieve Morien [Grand Crossing], fourth.

Single skate race—Won by Dorothy Cunningham; Lottie Patarini, second; Helen Swierkos [Palmer], third; Frances Hamacek [Gage], fourth.

Half mile race—Won by Helen Swierkas; Genevieve Morien, second; Gertrude Gustafson, third; Harriett Boynton [Mann], fourth.

Relay—Won by Bessemer; White, second; Gage, third; Grand Crossing, fourth.

Points: Grand Crossing, 29; Palmer, 22; Bessemer, 7; Trumbull, 7; Tuley, 5; White, 5; Gage, 4.

Six Boys Dominate Meet.

Six boys from six parks dominated their junior meet. Edward Sobiceszczyk of Bessemer won both the coasting and 100 yard dash for 14 points. Next was William Tracy of Tuley with first in the single skate race and second at 100 yards for 12 points. George Spack made Gage third with 8 points by second in coasting and third in the dash.

Fuller's seven total was accounted for by William Gruhlke—second in the single skate race, fourth in the coasting and dash. John Izzi of Calumet was third in the coasting and John Barilla of Cornell likewise in the single skate event.

Intermediate stars were Frank Vojcak of Cornell, Guhlam Muthleb of Ogden, both with 12 points, and Walter Giza of Bessemer with 11 markers.

Summaries for Boys.

After a series of ties, both in preliminary and final rounds, the 105 pound boys' basketball crown has gone to Grand Crossing. What was to have been the finals found Grand Crossing tied with White and Calumet, which finished in that order in the playoff. Davis was the fourth finalist.

Boys on the Grand Crossing team were Nick Tamsiro, James Nudo, Fred Petrozz, Robert Morris, Joe Rocco, William Smith, and Carl Riffice.

SQUARE LEGION TO HEAR PARKER, DINE ON "SLUM"

Members of Square post No. 232 of the American Legion and their friends will observe Army night at a stag dinner at 6 o'clock tomorrow evening at the Midway Masonic temple, 6115 Cottage Grove avenue. The menu will consist of slumgullion and other famous army dishes.

The guest speaker will be Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, who will talk on "Our National Defenses." The Woodlawn post Legion band will play and there will be several vaudeville acts.

Square auxiliary unit will hold its annual memorial program on Friday night at Hamilton Park fieldhouse.

Capt. Werner Paul Gruhl, formerly of the German field artillery and the German air force, will be the speaker at Wednesday night's meeting of Eaton-Priddy post No. 111 at the Chatfield Bank building community room, 7936 Cottage Grove avenue.

This Week in the Garden

The hundreds of entries in the annual Flower Garden Honor Roll competition conducted by The Tribune will be judged as soon as weather permits the flush of spring bloom in the home gardens in Chicago and its suburbs. Results will be announced on completion of the judging.

Monday, May 15.

Young hardy chrysanthemum plants may be planted outdoors now. Give them a rich loam soil, in full sun, and good drainage. Plant about 16 inches apart. If the stock is to be bought, get the earliest varieties so they will bloom before frost. Good kinds include the following: Korean, Aladdin, September Queen, Carrie, Winnetka, and Wolverine. Stake the early peas.

Tuesday, May 16.

Be sure to finish making the lawn if a good strong stand of grass is expected. The seed should germinate within ten days.

A too rich soil for dahlias produces a heavy growth and a minimum of flowers. Set out dahlia plants after May 20, and plant the tubers June 1 to 15. Pinching off the side branches is necessary to obtain large flowers. Plant a few radishes in the slow growing rows of seeds.

Wednesday, May 17.

Plant all trees, shrubs, and perennials as soon as possible because late planted stock suffers in hot weather. Prune the trees and shrubs back to one-half of last year's growth, thin out all surplus wood, dead wood, and see that no roots are left mutilated.

Mulch all newly planted stock with coarse litter to conserve moisture. Water this stock whenever it requires it. Plant new stocks of clematis; see that the soil for these plants is a rich garden loam, well drained. Air the cold frames on all bright days, but remember that May 20 often marks the last frost.

Thursday, May 18.

Continue transplanting house plants which require attention. Buy a fern for house use and keep it in a north, well lighted window. This is the time that the amaryllis is in active growth. Plunge the potted plants in their pots in the garden and keep watered. An application of plant food occasionally will push them along. Dry off the bulbs when the leave turn yellow in autumn and rest until January when they revive.

Sow a row of portulaca along the walk as a spot of brightness during summer. It will grow easily from cuttings planted directly in the ground.

Friday, May 19.

Hardy water lilies can now be planted in the pools that have been prepared for them. Wait until the last week in May or the first week in June before planting tender tropical lilies. They like the water warm. One of the best for the small pool is the variety August Koch or Pink Pearl. Strong plants insure a heavy growth. Sow alyssum, mignonette, candytuft, phlox drummondi, and many other of the hardier annuals, but do not sow too thick and waste material. Make the seedbed fine and water after sowing to compact the soil about each individual seed.

Saturday, May 20.

Order window boxes preparatory to planting. These boxes should be a little smaller than the width of the window for ease in removal if it becomes necessary. Metal, self-watering boxes are excellent, for they eliminate the likelihood of drip injuring the floors or rugs.

When hoeing the strawberry bed, cut off the runners to keep the plants in bounds.

Get the spraying outfit ready for use.

Neighborhood Theaters

"Today We Live" is the Tivoli offering this week. The scene opens in England and goes back to war days. Glamorous Joan Crawford, as the heroine whose father has been killed in the war, leases her English home to an American [Gary Cooper]. Franchot Tone is her brother and Robert Young the man whom she has known since childhood—and who is conceded to be her future husband. She answers yes, but that is before she falls in love with the lanky Cooper. How the thread works out during the war is yours to find out.

Blondell Plays Lady Racketeer.

"Blondie Johnson" is something a bit different—all about a lady racketeer. And she has such fine ideas as to draw the admiration and, later, love of one of her male brethren in the business. Joan Blondell has the lead. Badly used by the world, she goes out to collect back dues from it. Chester Morris fits in like a glove as a leading male exponent of racketeering. Nice support from Allen Jenkins, Mae Busch, Joseph Cawthorne, Earl Foxe, and Claire Dodd. Not the greatest film you ever saw, but a clever one. At the Tower this week.

"State Fair" Is Good Medicine.

If you haven't seen "State Fair" you have a treat ahead. It is a wholesome, homely, comedy piece, with Will Rogers and Louise Dresser as shining lights. Whether or not you've been to a country fair, it's good medicine that you'll like. In addition to Ma and Pa and their exhibits, a thread of romance is woven about the youngsters, Janet Gaynor and Norman Foster. Said threads are Lew Ayres and Sally Eilers. Showing through Tuesday at the Maryland, Jeffery, and Grove.

Chorines Have Troubles.

"Girl Missing" is a light comedy melodrama having quite a bit to do with the troubles of a pair of chorines trying to get along in the world. They are Glenda Farrell and Mary Brian. The lead is taken by Ben Lyon, while support comes from an able group—Peggy Shannon, Guy Kibbe, Lyle Talbot. This movie is at the Harper through Tuesday, at the Shore Tuesday only, and at the Lexington Wednesday and Thursday.

Matrimonial Woes Furnish Two Play Plots

Dramatists Would Be in a Bad Way If Husband and Wife Quit Fighting.

selling cut liquor to the soldiers and send him to prison.

In 1928, which is the third section, Tom is back from prison, keen to see his 18 year old daughter and Hilda, too, but still loyal to Mamie. What's a fellow to do?

Then it develops that Tom's daughter has much of her father in her. She has decided to marry Marty O'Brien, a coming racketeer, and go to Ireland with him to help him smuggle back a bunch of sweepstake tickets. Tom is against this. He wants to save his daughter from the sort of life he had led her mother, but Hilda says no. She had given her husband to another woman because he loved her. Now she will give her daughter to an unworthy man for the same reason. A perfect genius for martyrdom is Hilda.

"Everything's Cold" Is Right.

Seeing there is nothing she can do about it, anyway, Hilda's decision is logical enough. She is putting on a meal for Tom at the play's end. "Everything is getting cold," she says. And everything is. Including the play, I fear.

"Hilda Cassidy" was written by Henry and Sylvia Lieferant, and worked over by a couple of others. In a summer tryout William Harrigan and Katherine Alexander played the Cassidys. Now they fall to Stella Adler and Howard Phillips.

First Novel Starts Ball Rolling.

In "Best Sellers," Mark and Jacqueline Fournier are modest folk, living quietly in Orleans, France, when Mark writes a book. "The Young Heart's Awakening," he calls it. He writes it in his off hours at the treasury, where he has a job, absorbing inspiration from a diary his wife has kept through a love affair she had, had before she met Mark.

Just for the excitement of the thing the Fourniers submit "The Young Heart's Awakening" for the Zola prize and, due to the intrigues of interested publishers who cannot agree on who shall win, the unknown Fournier is given the prize as the author of the best novel of the year.

Immediately Mark is signed up by a publisher. He gives up his job at the treasury and starts on a second novel. But now, without the diary, there is no more inspiration. Mark is a one book man. The publisher thereupon decides that there must be some sort of artificial stimulation. Let Jacqueline have another affair. Let her submit to the love of a rival novelist and start another diary.

Back to the Treasury for the Novelist.

Jacqueline is not enthusiastic about the arrangement, but she submits. Soon Mark is raging with jealousy and Jacqueline is falling seriously in love with her new friend. At which point Mark asserts himself, cancels his contract, takes Jacqueline back to Orleans and retrieves his job at the treasury.

A year later two novels and a play turn up based on the adventure—one by Fournier, who finds he can write again at the treasury; one by the impetuous rival, and the play by a third interested spectator.

The weakness of "Best Sellers" develops in the playing rather than the writing, which is light and graceful. Ernest Truex and Peggy Wood have been cast as the Fourniers. Ernest plays it for laughs and is lost after the first act. Miss Wood is lovely, but never entirely in character.

On Train When Told of Prize Award.

Maxwell Anderson was on a train speeding for Hollywood, where he has contracted to write two or three more scenarios, when a telegram informed him that his political propaganda play, "Both Your Houses," had won this year's Pulitzer prize as the best drama of the year. Anderson is one who would rather have been on a train than in New York at that moment. Of all the major playwrights he is probably the most reticent and retiring. He has always fought shy of publicity, even when it was good for his plays. They will probably try to give him some sort of party in Hollywood in honor of the award, but I shall be greatly surprised if he attends.

"Both Your Houses" could not be held on in New York to profit from the advertising attending the award. The Theater Guild, which produced it, had contracted to supply a certain number of attractions for the subscribers of the American Theater society in Philadelphia and was forced to fill in with the Anderson play.

It will be interesting to note the reaction of the Quakers to the play. "Both Your Houses" is fairly strong stuff in the way of propaganda and criticism, deriving its title from Mercutio's line in "Romeo and Juliet," "A plague o' both your houses!" It seeks to substitute the two major political parties for Montagues and Capulets and hold them up to shame and ridicule as being responsible for the election of cheaters and grafters to congress.

Has His Own Election Investigated.

The hero is a young school teacher representative elected from Nevada. In Washington, after he has had his own election investigated and discovered that even he is under definite obligation to certain interests, he seeks to defeat a deficiency bill in the committee on appropriations—a bill that has been loaded with $400,000,000 in graft items in order to assure its support by a majority of the representatives.

The crusader is more or less ignominiously defeated, but not until he has forcefully spoken his mind on the sins and subterfuges of the people's elected representatives. As propaganda the play is aimed at administrations preceding that of the Roosevelt new deal group, which slightly weakens its timeliness of attack.

HISTORIETTE

GRETA GARBO.

GRETA GARBO was born in Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 18, 1906, and is the daughter of Sven Gustafson, a small business man of Stockholm. She has an actor brother who still goes under the family name, Gustafson. Her one sister is dead. [If you know your Stockholm, Greta's home was at 32 Blekengegaten street.] After the decease of her father when she was 14, she was variously employed in a department store, as lather girl in a barber shop, and as a hat model.

Her pictures in ads secured her a screen test, and she appeared in a comedy called "Erick, the Tramp." She was on the stage for a time before she came to the attention of Mauritz Stiller, a Swedish film director. He changed her name to Garbo and under his direction she appeared in "Countess Elizabeth Dolina" and in "The Atonement of Gosta Berling." This picture won contracts with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for both director and actress.

Miss Garbo's first American rôle was in "The Torrent." She was immediately popular, and you admired her in "The Temptress," "Flesh and the Devil," "Love," "Wild Orchids," "The Mysterious Lady," "The Divine Woman" and other silents. Her best known talkies are "Anna Christie," "Romance," "Inspiration," and "Susan Lenox, Her Fall and Rise."

Miss Garbo is 5 feet, 6 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, and has blond hair and green eyes. She courts privacy and never goes out in society. She is fond of boating and loves to read. She has just returned to Hollywood from a long vacation in Sweden and is due soon to make another picture.

Stage History of Jack Pearl, Now a "Baron"

JACK PEARL, the "Baron Munchausen" of radio fame, who was one of the stage's outstanding comedians prior to his weekly querying of "Vas you dere, Sharlie?" had a typical Horatio Alger poverty-to-success career. Pearl will again entertain theatergoers when he appears with Paul Whiteman and his band, the Boswell sisters, and Burns and Allen in the William Morris stage production that will inaugurate the Oriental theater's new policy as a house of legitimate attractions next Friday night.

Pearl was born in New York's east side ghetto. Forced to work at an early age, he got a job as errand boy for a razor blade manufacturer. He soon tired of this, and became a professional applauder for a music publishing house. It was his task to sit in the audience of New York's movie theaters and applaud the musical offerings published by his concern. He became too vociferous and was ejected from the theater by an usher.

At this point Pearl decided to become an actor, contending that actors merely had to look and act funny. The first man he encountered was Gus Edwards, who was then featuring Eddie Cantor, Georgie Jessel and the Duncan sisters. When Edwards refused him employment he teamed up with Herman Timberg, at that time a leading vaudevillian. One day Danny Murphy, the German comedian in the troupe, became ill and Pearl was called in to fill the part despite the fact that he had never used a German dialect before. He was a success from the start and was soon a featured personality, sponsored by the man who had first turned him down—Gus Edwards.

Subsequently he left vaudeville and joined with a third rate stock company, playing first in "Seven Hours in New York." He was stranded in the middle west soon after the show's closing. He joined with Ben Bard later, and together they played burlesque theaters. J. J. Shubert saw him in the "Powder Puff Revue" and Pearl began to rise. He was featured in many Broadway revues, including "The Whirl of New York," "Artists and Models" and "Pleasure Bound" and the Ziegfeld "Follies."

HOLLYWOOD HAPPENINGS

By George Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Special.]—Dorothy Peterson is now doing her twentieth part in motion pictures, in "Hold Me Tonight," but it is her first film part in which she does not portray a mother. She plays a department store personnel manager. Miss Peterson once lived in Zion City, Ill., and worked in a department store in Chicago till she got her first stage rôle.

Robert Emmet O'Connor says he has skipped more ships [in movies] than any other dry land sailor who never even stepped on a seagoing gangplank professionally. He's now captaining a Mississippi river steamboat in "Bed of Roses" with Constance Bennett at R. K. O. It recalls the career of Thomas Jackson, who came out from New York to play the soft spoken detective in "Broadway," and went into the movies in the same part, with a sequence of eighteen rôles as a soft spoken dick. Jackson finally snapped out of his police clothes only to wear a skipper's uniform as a ship captain, and now he's headed back for the police force again.

The oil portrait of herself which Mrs. Norman Kerry refused to accept, or to pay for, until a jury directed her to pay Artist A. M. Ury a judgment of $3,464.61, was ordered to be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for funds to apply against the judgment. The difference Mr. and Mrs. Kerry will have to make up themselves. Mrs. Kerry protested in court that the painting showed a woman older, plumper, and with longer hands than hers.

Allan Dinehart, playing a lead with Richard Dix and Elizabeth Allen in "Ad Man" at Radio-RKO, spends his spare time writing a stage play which is intended for Broadway this fall [if he can place it]. Dinehart has written the plays, "The Patsy," "Apple Sauce," and "In Love with Love" in the past.

It's all right; Stuart Walker, the drama coach and director, says stage fright is a characteristic of good actors.

Friends of Music Plan Concert Series

Symphony Orchestra, Augmented to 100, to Give Popular Price Programs.

By Edward Moore.

he can thereby dispense with artificial amplification.

Wagner, Strauss on First Program.

Mr. Stock, who is president of the Chicago Friends of Music as well as conductor of the orchestra, has appointed Claire Dux and John Alden Carpenter as a program committee with himself, and the results of their deliberations are shown in the programs of the first week, or half week. The opening night will be a concert of music by the two Richards, Wagner and Strauss, and Mme. Dux, one of the greatest of lieder singers, will be the soloist, singing two groups of Strauss songs. Of Wagner, Mr. Stock will conduct the March of Homage, the "Flying Dutchmen" Overture, the Bacchanale and Finale of the "Tannhäuser" Overture, the "Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walküre," and Siegfried's Death Music and the Finale of "Die Götterdämmerung." Of Strauss he will augment Mme. Dux's songs with "Till Eulenspiegel."

The next night, Thursday, will be devoted to Tschaikowsky, with a brilliant pianist, Rudolph Ganz, as soloist. He will play the First Concerto. The orchestral part of the program will be the Polonaise from "Eugene Onegin," the Fifth Symphony, and the Waltz of the Flowers from the "Casse-Noisette" Suite.

Dance Combined with Concert Music.

Friday will have a novel program in that the second half of the concert will be of ballet, the dance as well as the music. It will include the dances from Borodin's opera, "Prince Igor," and Ravel's "Bolero." Saturday, the popular night, will consist of the overture to Nicolai's "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Goldmark's "Rustic Wedding" Symphony, the suite from Glazounow's ballet, "Ruses d'Amour," and Johann Strauss' "Wine, Woman, and Song" Waltz.

Choral music will have an important part on later programs. Among the groups to appear, but those datings have not yet been fixed, are the North Shore Festival chorus, the A Cappella choir, the Apollo Musical club, and the Swedish Choral society.

Mr. Stock is general musical director of the series, but he does not intend to do all the conducting. Eric De Lamarter has been appointed associate conductor, and there will be a number of guest conductors. Rudolph Ganz, Isaac van Grove, and Henry Weber, all of Chicago, are already on the list, and negotiations are pending with Pierre Monteux of France, Albert Coates of England and Russia, and Henry Hadley of New York.

Another Series Given at the Fair.

Hand in hand with the Auditorium series is another series to be given at A Century of Progress, also under the direction of the Friends of Music. These are volunteer programs and are to be free. Mrs. Marx Oberndorfer has been selected by the Friends of Music as their representatives to arrange these entertainments. Any group wishing to appear under these auspices is invited to communicate with the Chicago Friends of Music, 104 South Michigan avenue.

Among the organizations that have signified a desire to be represented are members of the Fifty Per Cent Enrollment club of the Friends of Music, organizations which subscribed fifty per cent of their membership as members of the Friends of Music. Among them are the Chicago Business Men's orchestra, Chicago Music association, Chicago Artists' association, Civic Opera company of Wilmette, Crescendo Musical club, Chicago Mendelssohn club, Chicago District of Illinois Federation of Music Clubs, Des Plaines Music club, Lake View Musical club, Mu Phi Epsilon sorority, the Melodists, Musicians' Club of Women, Swedish Choral club, Tuesday Art and Travel club, Woman's Symphony orchestra of Chicago, and the Edgewater Drama Study club.

Episcopal Choir Boys in Sacred Concert.

For the first time in Chicago the combined boy choir of the Episcopal church in the diocese of Chicago will present a sacred concert at Orchestra hall this afternoon. More than 550 boys and men, all vested, representing approximately twenty choirs and churches of Chicago and suburbs, will appear.

The director will be Roger Tuttle, president of the Chicago Choirmasters' Association of Episcopal Boy Choirs. He is the choirmaster of St. Bartholomew's church.

The program will be made up of representative selections of the complete church calendar year. Advent season will be represented by "And the Glory of the Lord" from Handel's "Messiah"; Christmas season by two arrangements of carols and by the "March of the Wise Men," written for men's voices by Harvey Gaul. Gounod's "Gallia" will have an important part of the program, with the soprano solo parts sung by boys.

Accompaniments will be played on the organ and two pianos by Stanley Martin of St. Mark's church, Evanston; Robert Birch of the Church of the Redeemer, and Albert J. Strohm of St. Paul's-by-the-Lake. Prior to the concert a fifteen minute organ recital will be played by Mr. Birch.

News of Interest to Music Lovers.

Gabriel Pierné's "The Children's Crusade" will be sung by the Apollo Musical club and 500 children from the Junior high schools of Chicago at Orchestra hall next Friday night under the direction of Edgar Nelson. Those who heard it given at the North Shore festival in Evanston a few years ago will remember it as a charming and melodious work based upon a legend of the middle ages and having to do with the pilgrimage of a great throng of children to the Holy Land.

The children's choruses form an important part of the work. Two soprano voices sing the parts of Allain, a blind girl, and her companion, Allys. The tenor, or "narrator," carries the tale along and there is an old sailor who tells the children a story, sung by the baritone. Four women's voices are heard off stage announcing the "forthsetting" and encouraging the children from time to time throughout the work.

The soloists will be Mabel Sharp Herdien and Olive June Lacey, sopranos; Arthur Kraft, tenor, and Theodore Harrison, baritone. The Little Symphony orchestra will play the score. The young choristers come from the Von Steuben, Amundsen, Kelvyn Park, Foreman, and Sullivan Junior High schools. They were taught their parts by the music teachers for their respective schools, then brought together for a rehearsal with Miss Mary Farrell, supervisor of junior high school music. After this they were turned over to Mr. Nelson, with whom they have been working ever since.

Mario Fiorella will appear as Figaro in Rossini's "The Barber of Seville" at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium tonight. His associates in the performance will be Bernice Ripley as Rosina, Luigi Ruffino as Almaviva, that splendid veteran, Vittorio Trevisan, as Dr. Bartolo, Giuseppe Mantovani as Don Basilio, and others. Dino Bigalli will conduct.

Delegates of the National Federation of Music Clubs on their way to the biennial convention in Minneapolis will be entertained Saturday by a committee of the Illinois federation, of which Mrs. William S. Ridgly is president and Mrs. Louis E. Yager is general chairman. A tour of A Century of Progress and luncheon on the grounds, an organ recital by Arthur Dunham at the Methodist temple, a banquet at the Stevens hotel, and a concert program in charge of Frank Laird Waller in which Amy Neill, violinist; Cara Verson, pianist; Roger S Hille, tenor, and the Y. M. C. A. hotel chorus directed by Jacques Homier will participate, are among the scheduled events.

The Chicago Little Opera of Central Y. M. C. A. will present "The Yeoman of the Guard," by Gilbert and Sullivan, in the association auditorium on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings of this week. Clare John Thomas will be the director.

Social Satire by Novello Is Hit in London

Comedy About Girls Who Want to Meet Royalty Amuses Britons.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—At just about this time every year want ads begin to appear in a few very select morning newspapers announcing that "lady of title will chaperon debutante through season."

Such tutelage is scarcely of any benefit to London society girls, nor to daughters of old English county families who are sent to London at their "coming out" for presentation at court. To families of real position in the English heirarchy the presentation ritual comes as a matter of course, an essential perhaps, but no great shakes in the way of a social climb. It is almost routine.

But some girls need it. These come in two classes. Either they are British colonials, or Americans who have wangled diplomatic patronage in Washington. The time for the courts is drawing on, and girls from the antipodes or some tank town in the far west are now learning their curtsies.

If American, the debutantes are presented as a rule by the wife of the ambassador, or else by the doyenne of the diplomatic corps. Colonials, on the other hand, find sponsors among ladies of title. These are often women whose names are bigger than their bank balances, so the girl comes with her mother and stays as a guest.

A Matter of Delicate Adjustment.

The financial arrangement in such cases is a matter of very delicate adjustment. Some girls with rich Uncle Bims in Australia are somewhat robust, in appearance or manners, so there is constant conflict between pride reduced to penury and new riches afraid of using the wrong fork.

That is the situation treated in a play called "Fresh Fields," by Ivor Novello. This playwright, matinée idol and producer is the man who, while a lad sitting with a few cents in his pocket on Brighton pier during the war, made fame and fortune for himself by composing, then and there, the words and music of "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

Novello has a hit in "Fresh Fields," which he wrote for Lilian Braithwaite. She is one of the finest of London's maturer actresses, but nearly loses the big share in the work to Ellis Jeffreys, who plays the peeress sponsoring an Australian debutante through the season. They are broke, have shut up all but a few rooms of the ancestral mansion, and take frugal meals in the living room.

This once elegant chamber is taking on the faint odor of corn beef and cabbage when the wealthy Australians appear. They comprise fat mother with a cockney accent, awkward but beautiful daughter and a bluff uncle who made his by running a saloon

Miss Jeffreys does a fine performance as the lady of title who invites them to remain as her guests at £50 each daily, but balks at presenting the girl in the end and sends her off to talkies and dog races instead of the usual round of Mayfair parties.

Some one else finally does take her to Buckingham palace, after suitable grooming, and the girl becomes a big social success. She marries the handsome but unemployed son in the noble household, and the hearty uncle espouses one of the ladies as the other plans a trip around the world with the girl's mother. The play is a fine piece of comedy, and will outlast the forthcoming season, which it preceded a few weeks ago.

One of the biggest forces of uplift in London theaters is Sir Barry Jackson. He is wealthy and has devoted himself for some years to producing works which count in an intellectual way, without necessarily being mere vulgar box office attractions. His repertory theater in Birmingham is famous and the Malvern Festival, which he dedicated to Bernard Shaw, is well established after four years.

Sir Barry now comes before the British theater-going public with a plaint that most of them are dumbbells, or the rich ones anyway. In a book, "Barry Jackson and the London Theater," G. W. Bishop inserts some lucid correspondence on the subject between Jackson and Shaw. There is a foreword by C. B. Cochran, the biggest producer in Britain, who refutes most of what Sir Barry has to say by pointing out that he has cleaned up a tidy net profit of £716,230 between May, 1927, and October, 1932.

He Counts His Many Troubles.

Jackson counts his many troubles in a letter to G. B. S., and blames them on a variety of things.

"To name a few: The theater is absolutely permeated with purely financial interests," he wrote. "The new rich will not go to intelligent plays [one might include many of the older rich], and, unfortunately, we depend upon them for a part of our income, and when they do come they often are a nuisance to everybody and themselves; the cheaper seats are so uncomfortable I wonder any one sits upon them; then we have the difficulties of advertising [which today appears to be the only method of inducing any one to do anything], and the fact that in London we are living in furnished apartments, so to speak, with no roof of our own."

Jackson's complaint was made before his three biggest successes, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," Shaw's "The Apple Cart," and "Evensong," appeared. Previous to these three plays he had only done well with John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" and another drama called "The Farmer's Wife."

Cochran points out that a revue can be a real art for art's sake production, even though it does make money. A bad revue loses just as much and may be more than a bad play. He advises Sir Barry to increase his stock in trade, and concludes that even with the English theater in a very bad way there is still much gold in London's west end to be had for the digging.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Criticism of "Rasputin."

Dear Miss Tinée: It may seem carping criticism to find fault with such an outstanding film as "Rasputin," but it seems to be that its producers have accomplished a great many difficult things and left some of the easy ones undone. They have assembled a powerful cast [almost too powerful at times!] and filled in the innumerable details that give the picture rare verisimilitude, but they have put an historically wrong interpretation upon the fall of the Romanovs, treating the czarina with entirely unwarranted sympathy, and making the revolutionists seem like madmen bent on defeating their own interests.

In 1914-'17 it was the czarina who steeled Nicholas against making concessions to the people. As often as he felt the crying need of conciliating them and effecting the inevitable governmental reforms, she would entreat him to look back in history to Ivan the Terrible for his political model! Absolute power must be the inheritance of their son. The masses must go down in blood and tyranny to preserve the throne intact for Alexis. To the czarina, Nicholas' willingness to mediate with the people was weakness and folly and she used her every influence to drive it from him.

The czar, on the contrary, had but one interest at heart: The good of Russia. Now in the picture the empress is at one with him, a loving, tender, public minded woman. No indication is given of the cruel lust for unlimited power which actuated the real woman and drove Russia into tragedy. With nothing to recall to mind the terrible traditions of the 300 year old Romanov dynasty and the consequent obsession in the mind of the empress for power, the observer can find no motivation for the cruelty of the insurrectionists in executing the royal family. [Such exposition has not been lacking in film versions of the French revolution.] The tragedy was the greater in real life because of this very conflict between the two and the love which induced Nicholas to forsake his own wise course again and again and do as the empress desired.

The producers were doubtless in full possession of the facts of the case but chose not to portray it historically in this one detail. How would it have marred the film to reveal the czarina in her true rôle? Sincerely,

C. H. M.

Editor's note: Lady, thou seemest wondrous wise!

No Equal for Lillian Gish.

Dear Miss Tinée: You stand alone in your opinion of "The White Sister." Surely no one—not even Helen Hayes—can make of Angela the human and convincing creature that Lillian Gish did. This was Miss Gish's greatest rôle and at the same time the most beautiful picture ever filmed. No one can equal her in this, no matter how many times the play may be revived.

I consider Helen Hayes the greatest actress in Hollywood today, but her art is worlds removed in character from that of Lillian Gish.

Fifty million other critics can't be wrong, so it must be you.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM WATSON.

Editor's Note: It must be.

IF YOU CAN'T BUY IT—TRADE FOR WHAT YOU WANT!

● If you need more things than your income can buy, let old-fashioned barter and exchange help you get many of the things you want!

The icebox you have in storage may get the vacuum cleaner you want. The rugs you don't use may be traded for the Spring clothes you need. The rent of your spare room may be exchanged for the services of a decorator, groceries, or a used car. There's practically no limit to the variety of trades you can make.

Many people would be glad to trade with you if they knew what you wanted and what you had to offer in exchange. The quick way to reach these people is through a want ad in the Tribune Barter & Exchange column.

Now, while you are Spring cleaning, check your closets, attic or storeroom for articles you can offer in trade for things you can use. Then phone Superior 0100. Ask for Miss Miller, Tribune Want Ad-Viser specializing in Barter & Exchange want ads. She'll gladly help you word a want ad that will state your offer attractively to the hundreds of thousands of Tribune readers.

With the new low rates now in effect, a Tribune Barter & Exchange want ad can help you get what you want at surprisingly small cost!

Senior Stars Bring Plays to Chicago Stage

World's Fair Period Is Clearing Drama's Sky; Hampden May Return.

By Charles Collins.

one wonders why the dramatic critics of twenty and thirty years ago were frequently rebellious against the so-called "star system."

Here is Walter Hampden, in transit as he carries the trappings of romantic drama on a rapid tour across the country, according to the old tradition of actor-management. Here is Ethel Barrymore, directing her own affairs for the first time in her long and rich career and wisely arranging for a run during the summer of the new exposition. Their first nights have recently added glamour to Chicago's theatrical news.

Cohan and Miss Cornell in New Plays.

At the city's gates stands George M. Cohan, senior prodigy of the American stage, still with a touch of the boy wonder in his legend although his hair has silvered, bringing the new play of his own authorship with which he has regained his hold on Broadway favor. Early in June Katharine Cornell, younger and of growing brilliance, will arrive with her latest hit, "Alien Corn," which she might have kept running indefinitely in its New York groove but for the fact that she is wise enough to know that the title of First Actress [her's beyond question, since Lynn Fontanne shares honors with her consort] is granted, not by Manhattan alone but by the audiences of the nation.

The stars are coming out. The playgoing sky is clearing rapidly over this city, which for the next five or six months will be the best theatrical market in the world.

Mr. Hampden has already gone, but he hopes to return in September with a new production — Victor Hugo's "Ruy Blas," freshly adapted by Brian Hooker, the able literary craftsman whose translation of "Cyrano de Bergerac" is a plume in his and Hampden's cap. This early specimen of the French romantic drama will be in line with the Hampden revival [new to Chicago until this spring] of "Caponsacchi," a cape and sword piece based on Robert Browning's "The Ring and the Book." It is my guess that an appetite for Shakespeare might be found among the World's Fair crowds, but if Mr. Hampden prefers to try his luck with Victor Hugo, the event will still have the atmosphere of classic literature.

"Caponsacchi" as Romantic Melodrama.

Isolated from its original source, "Caponsacchi" proves to be romantic melodrama [in verse] of the old school, interesting to the stage historians as an example of a theatrical style that flourished during the last half of the nineteenth century and vanished in the twentieth. Oddly enough, I find that the reactions of the younger generation of contemporary playgoers, who know practically nothing about the romantic drama of period costumes, Victorian idealism, and sword fights in defense of woman's honor, were generally favorable. If such plays can avoid recalling the jests and burlesques of the barber shop comic weeklies on the subject—a form of humor that has remained alive with nothing to feed it—the youngsters who have been cradled in the age of cynicism seem to swallow them with enthusiasm.

The defect of "Caponsacchi" resides in the Stygian blackness of its villain. The theme of a gallant priest risking his frock and his life to rescue a married woman, whom he loves with a sublimated religious passion, from an iniquitous husband, is admirable for a drama of this type, and the story, with its courtroom background and its secreted final judge—the pope of Rome himself—is arranged in a way that grips the attention.

Barrymore Acts Opera Siren.

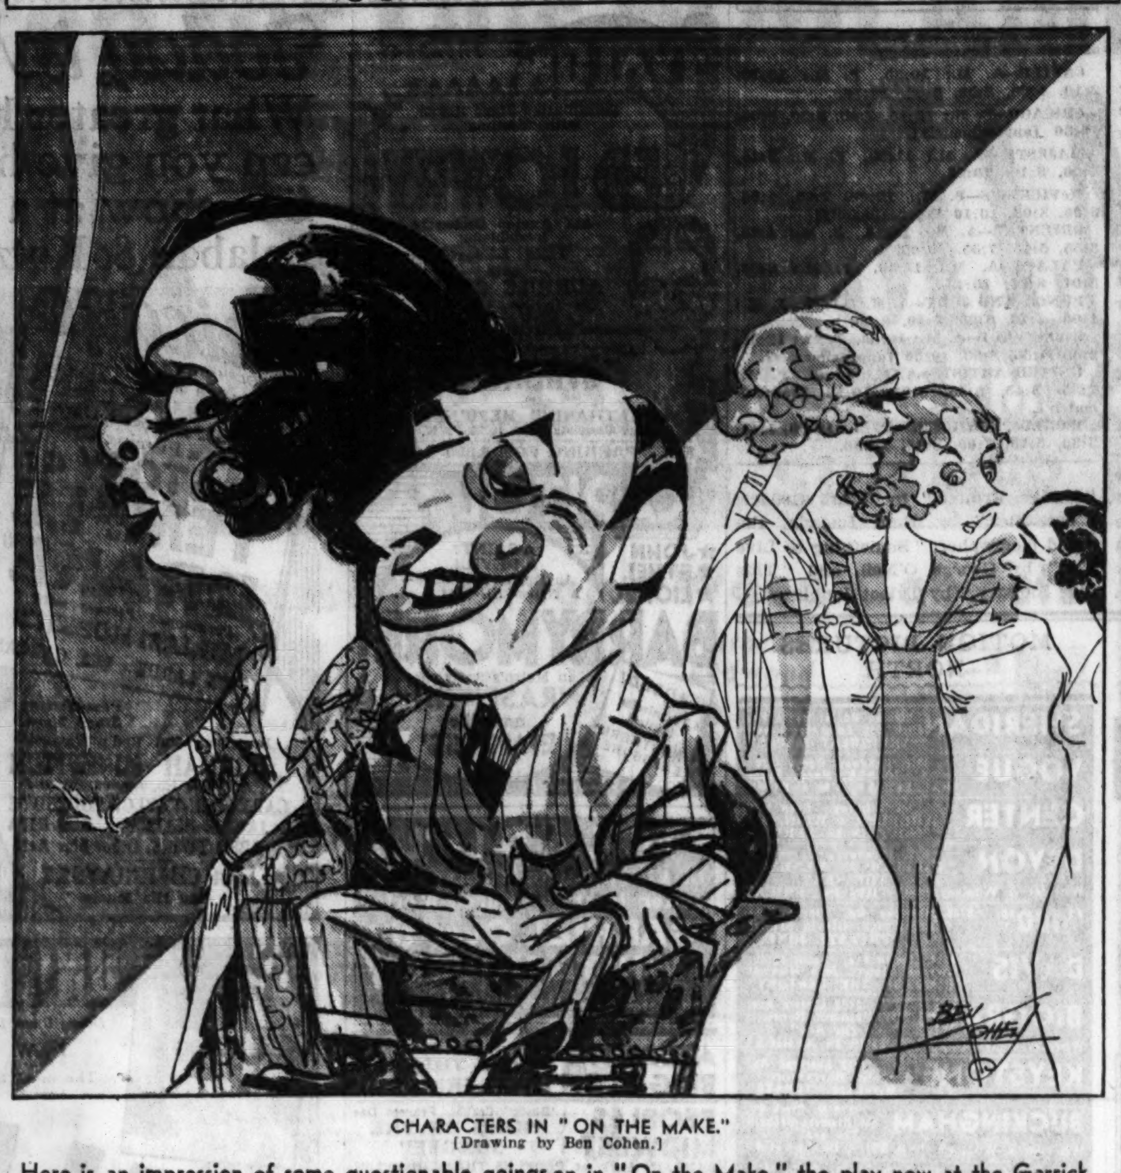
But when the dire power of evil against which the priestly Caponsacchi struggles is such a bogey man, such a Punch and Judy show devil, as the Count Guido of this play, the element of unconscious burlesque creeps into the picture. Without giving myself the toil of referring to "The Ring and the Book," I feel that Browning did better by Guido—that is to say, made his deviltry more subtle and persuasive—than the authors of the dramatization.

They have done everything but give him horns, hoofs, and a forked tail. A character such as this would have had a bounty on his head instead of a civic franchise to raise hell, even in the Italy of 1698. The acting of the rôle emphasized this grotesque quality in the character; to me this Guido seemed not an Italian nobleman but the second murderer in "Macbeth."

Miss Barrymore offers, under the title "An Amazing Career," a comedy with inclinations toward polite farce that deals with an opera singer's twenty years of matrimony as a hobby. Her rôle is that of a graceful siren, coolly and playfully changing marriage beds and acquiring swarms of children.

She glides through the performance in a quizzical vein, wearing lovely clothes and caressing the dialogue with the faraway magic of the voice that has been an enchantment in the American theater for three decades. The staging of the piece, from designs by Robert Edmond Jones, eminent in the theater arts, is admirable.

Gold-Diggers Up to Old Tricks



CHARACTERS IN "ON THE MAKE."
[Drawing by Ben Cohen.]

Here is an impression of some questionable goings-on in "On the Make," the play now at the Garrick theater. Edna Hibbard, as an expert "gimme" girl, is wheedling Roger Gray, as a week-minded tourist to Gotham, out of his bank-roll. Her assistants are Eva Sawyer, Enid Markey, and Loretta Poynton.

Premieres for Cohan's Latest and "Piccoli"

GEORGE M. COHAN, always sure of a cordial welcome in Chicago, comes to the Grand Opera house tonight with his new comedy, "Pigeons and People," after a successful engagement of several months in New York. The play is described as "a comic state of mind in continuous action," and instead of the customary two or three acts it is played in only one. Mr. Cohan is on the stage, excepting for a few minutes, during the entire performance.

The story has to do with a fellow named Parker, who prefers pigeons to people. He is offered shelter by a rich bachelor, and his eccentric reactions to the fads and customs of the day stir up comic excitement. In the cast are Walter Gilbert, Paul McGrath, Olive Reeves-Smith, Edward F. Nannery, Alney Elba, Eleanor Audley, Jane Rathbun, Lucille Sears, Reynolds Denniston, Arvid Paulson and Howard Hull Gibson.

Beginning tomorrow night, S. Hurok will present "The Piccoli" at the Erlanger theater for an engagement of three weeks. He is the impresario responsible for the importation of Mary Wigman, the Isadora Duncan dancers, the Wiener Saengerknaben, and Uday Shan Kar and his Hindu troupe.

"The Piccoli" is a puppet variety show which comes to Chicago after fifteen years of travel through Europe and South America, four successful months in New York and an equal number of months on tour. The marionette repertory includes musical comedy, revue, circus and variety skits, operettas and fairy tales. Vittori Podrecca, director of "The Piccoli," leads the world in this branch of stage amusements.

The opening night program, which begins at 8:45, is divided into three parts: 1. "Music Hall," containing seven acts of a typical variety show; 2, "Light Opera," scenes from "The Geisha," a Japanese operetta; 3, "Musical Comedy," containing a Negro revue and a concert party.

Five matinées [Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday] will be given weekly, and in these "The Sleeping Beauty" will be substituted for "The Geisha."

Eubie Blake as Leading Writer of Negro Songs

IN Harlem they call him "Melody" Blake. On sheet music and at recitals he is the more dignified Eubie Blake. Roundfaced, with the good natured grin of the happy Afro-American, Blake is one of the leading lights in the field of popular Negro music. He composed the score of "Shuffle Along of 1933," the colored musical show at the Illinois theater.

He is 50 years old. For thirty years he has been writing music, earning as much as a hundred dollars a week before he was 21.

"No one in my family," he says, "was at all interested in music. We had a piano and when I was 7 I fell in love with it. I played the piano instead of playing in the street with the boys. At 7 I started to learn how to play the piano. Song writing came easy. I have written dozens of blues; some records of such pieces sold well into the hundreds of thousands."

The high spot of Blake's career as a pianist took place at Carnegie hall, where he was the soloist at a recital. Here he came into contact with white composers and publishers. He discovered that it was easy to sell tunes to white song writers, who would vary them slightly and resell them as their own. The average rate for such a song, he says, was $250.

Among the songs thus disposed of was one which knocked about for three seasons until it was finally inserted in a musical comedy—namely: "I'm Wild About Harry." Featured in the original "Shuffle Along," it became one of the best sellers of the season and netted $17,500 to its "composer," who had paid Blake $500 for it.

Oriental Turns From Cinema to Living Frolics

THE Oriental theater, one of the leading downtown cinema houses, will join the roster of the "legitimate" stage next Friday with an all star William Morris vaudeville revue. The theater will divorce itself completely from its motion picture policy and operate on a regular theatrical basis. Two shows a day will be given and all seats will be reserved.

The opening attraction will offer an array of talent. The stars will be Jack Pearl, better known to his newly acquired radio admirers as "Baron Munchausen"; Paul Whiteman and his orchestra; the Boswell Sisters, radio harmonizers, and George Burns and Gracie Allen, a comedy pair, also of radio popularity.

With these stars will be Jack Fulton, Ramona, Peggy Healy, the Four Rhythm Boys, Sonny O'Dea, Goldie, Cliff ["Sharlie"] Hall, and Al D'Arcy. This production is the second in a series of touring companies prepared by William Morris, the first being the Eddie Cantor-George Jessel show, which has not yet reached Chicago.

Jack Pearl's stage career goes back many years and includes, among other famous musical productions, several "Artists and Models," "Ziegfeld Follies," "Pleasure Bound," and the recent "Pardon My English." Since his query, "Vas You Dere, Sharlie," made him one of radio's most popular stars, he has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for pictures.

Whiteman will include among his numbers George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Tabloid," a futuristic rhapsody by Ferde Grofe. Special skits, blackouts, musical and ballet numbers in the revue style will be on the program.

Barrymore in New Activities; Manages Self

Famous Actress Brings Play to Chicago Under Her Own Management.

WHEN Ethel Barrymore opened her engagement in the Harris theater last week in the comedy called "An Amazing Career" she made her first Chicago appearance as an out-and-out actress-manager; for the venture is her own, and involves her as backer, producer, director, and star.

Theater-goers in general have never been able to regard this distinguished actress as being under anybody's management save her own, so vivid has been the tradition of her self-assertiveness as a star. The legends all tend to invest her with a sort of unbeatable imperiousness in matters of the theater. But the fact is that no actress of celebrity in the history of the theater in the United States has built up within the profession a better record of complete regard for discipline and for the rights of her management.

The late Charles Frohman was her manager from 1896, when she became the ingénue of John Drew's company in "Christopher Jr.," until his death on the Lusitania in 1915. In 1899 he made her a star in "His Excellency the Governor," followed soon by "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines." Mr. Frohman was quoted as having said that, in his experience, players with the most liberal gift of what is called "temperament" were the most attentive to their obligations and duties, and then pointed to Miss Barrymore as an example; she was at the time his star in "Lady Frederick." Clyde Fitch, who wrote "Captain Jinks," said much the same thing, adding: "I get from this interesting young actress the same feeling I had about Richard Mansfield, whose secretary I was before I wrote 'Beau Brummel' for him: that she would be an important person in any calling she might have gone into."

Lee Shubert, who became Miss Barrymore's manager in 1928 and built for her the New York theater bearing her name, tells of her fine regard for a producer's rights in the matter of "The Kingdom of God." It seems that his agreement with her called for the production of a new play not later than Nov. 20, 1929. Her heart was set on the particular play then scheduled for production. He came to Chicago in mid-October of that year for the opening of the Dramatic league in the Princess theater, and took advantage of his having nothing to do to drop into the Harris and watch part of her performance in "The Kingdom of God." The attitude of the audience gave him the feeling that the scheduled two weeks of that play would be too brief, and that Miss Barrymore might do herself a considerable service if she were to continue in the play throughout the season, putting off the new piece until the autumn of 1930. He called on her, stated his belief, and sat back to listen to her argument in opposition. What she said was!

"Mr. Shubert, I've worked day and night since June in preparing for the new play; but you are the manager, and have rights as important as mine. I will do as you suggest."

Miss Barrymore's receipts and profits that season from "The Kingdom of God" [with occasional weeks of "The Love Duel"] were the largest in her career, far exceeding those of her two notable successes of earlier seasons, "Dèclassée" and "The Constant Wife."

Now Miss Barrymore is, as the British say, "on her own." She got her first taste of actor-management last season, when she took over her revival of "The School For Scandal" at the end of her regular tour, and acted it for ten weeks in cities booked under her direction.

Baron and His "Sharley"

JACK PEARL AND CLIFF HALL

The Oriental, downtown cinema house, will be added to the list of Chicago's legitimate theaters Friday night, May 19, when a stage entertainment with Jack Pearl and Paul Whiteman as its stars will appear there. Here is a picture of the popular comedian who has become the "Baron Munchausen" of the radio, with his crony, Cliff ("Sharley") Hall. Other entertainments of this type will follow.

Drama in the Rockies.

The Colorado town called Central City, forty miles west by north of Denver, will have a dramatic festival again this summer, with Robert Edmond Jones in charge. Last summer the play was "Camille," with Lillian Gish; this year it's to be Lehar's "Merry Widow," possibly with Natalie Hall singing the Sonia rôle.

IN VAUDEVILLE

New vaudeville programs opened at the Palace and Chicago theaters to supplement the cinema bills. The Palace's bill includes:

Morton Downey, the well known tenor whose activities on the radio have made him widely popular. This is his first stage appearance in Chicago in two years.

Fanny and Kitty Watson—Stalwarts of vaudeville, promising new songs and jests.

The Chicago theater's bill includes: Borrah Minevitch and his "Harmonica Rascals"; the Gary Leon-Peggy Taylor Foursome, dancers known as the "Kitchen Pirates"; Jackie Heller, Ben Bernie's protégé; Bob Ripa in feats of magic and juggling, and the Aber Twins, dancers lately featured in "Strike Me Pink."

Iowa Farm Set Stirs Hearts of Film People

Simple Story of Simple Drama Is the Type Vidor Directs at His Best.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—There are mighty few native born Californians, and in Hollywood there are fewer than elsewhere in the state. Nearly everybody in films is from "back east," which may mean anything from Nebraska, Texas, or Dakota to New York or Birmingham, Ala. Hence it is not strange that in a visit to the location for "Strangers Return," which King Vidor is directing with Miriam Hopkins, Franchot Tone, Stuart Erwin, and Beulah Bondi, all the cast were sighing for and talking about "back home."

STUART ERWIN.

The location was an old farm near Ontario, Cal., a good two hours' drive from Hollywood, in a quiet valley where tall cottonwood trees stand along a river, cows graze in the tall grass, and the heart of the easterner is rejoiced by the sight of the old fashioned farmhouse with gingerbread woodwork framing its veranda.

A huge barn with a pigeon cote on top, a corn crib, pigs rooting about and greedily champing the red apples tossed them from the actors' box lunches all made the typical Iowa farm setting for the story.

Forty-five men had worked for three weeks getting the old farm in the sort of shape needed for the picture. The lawn all about the house had been sodded with real grass, an almost unknown quantity on the typical California farm. Hundreds of blooming hedge bushes, vines, and shrubs, plants in pots, rose bushes, and begonias had been set in borders and flower beds about the place.

The illusion was perfect. Only a cynic would stop to scratch off the loose dirt that covered the tops of the buried pots and boxes that held the plants so that they could readily be used to dress another set after riding home in the studio trucks.

Country Dance, Moonlight, and White Organdy.

The picture was so beautiful that Miriam Hopkins expressed delight that they were going to do some night shooting. "There's bound to be a grand moon tonight, and we're going to do the scene when I come home from a country dance in a white organdy dress with my beau by moonlight—and I am thrilled already," she said with a snicker at herself.

MIRIAM HOPKINS.

Beulah Bondi, who always seems to have to play meanies in films [you remember her as the minister's wife in "Rain," with Joan Crawford and Walter Huston], was on hand dressed in the typical farm woman's type of gingham house dress and glad to be back in Hollywood to get some real sunshine after a long run in the New York success, "The Late Christopher Bean."

Franchot Tone, much to the disappointment of all feminine visitors, was not on location that day, and Stu Erwin, good naturedly, did his best to help fill the void by being most entertaining in his droll way. He had a convincing argument as to why a comic should draw a bigger salary than an ordinary actor.

"All the time that I was working at Paramount," said Stu, pushing back his battered hat and giving a jerk at his "galluses," "I hardly ever had lines to read in those stories that I was in for so-called comedy relief. The scripts always said 'comic enters, comic business.' I was the business. I had to figure lines and gags myself. I call that being partly an author. Of course, some guys get all the old vaudeville gag books and spring them, but I'm ashamed to. In this picture my lines are written for me and it would spoil the story to change them."

Author and Director Co-Operate on Film.

Phil Stong, the author, who strangely enough for Hollywood is working with Vidor, the director, it being customary to shoot the author before starting work and thus save him suffering and everybody else exasperation, took a bow at this. Then he and Erwin fell to discussing the feasibility of catching a couple of horses and pulling the shoes off them to play a game of horseshoes to pass the time.

King Vidor is happy to have this type story to direct. He hates spectacles and involved sophisticated drama, believing that a simple story of simple people will reach more hearts than any other type.

Phil Stong had enormous success with his "State Fair," both as a novel and in the films. This new novel deals with a similar rural community and the problems that arise at the old farm when relatives watch with apprehension the favor which the granddaughter from the big city gains with grandfather, who owns everything, when she comes home to visit after an unfortunate marriage. The homely theme of jealousy and envy and the triumph of the girl over the scheming of the relatives makes up the tale. Vidor has had his most notable successes with this sort of story.

Peggy's Explanation of Cavalier Oakie.

Somebody kept pestering Peggy Hopkins Joyce the other day as to why she went about so much with Jack Oakie. "If you must know," says Peggy, "it's to prove that I'm not really a gold digger." This is by way of being a nifty, for Jack is one of the Scotchiest guys in Hollywood. Reminiscent of this is the time he sent Peggy a radio, a portable one, for her dressing room. It was received with thanks and then came the bill. "Well, isn't it enough that I went to all the trouble of picking it out for you?" sez Oakie.

JACK OAKIE.

It's a great racket, but the women of the country are going to have to do something, for if the idea ever gets going it will be awful hard on the girls.

Open season for rodeos and barbecues and beach parties seems on, not to mention trout fishing and boating and trips to the desert. Bill Boyd gave a barbecue at his ranch. Richard Dix did likewise. Dorothy Jordan is sun tanning at Playa del Rey, Joan Crawford is stealing time for ditto in her own back yard, Bill Gargan and Dick Arlen are hooting like wild men at the motor boat races, Constance Bennett is getting all the attention at the polo matches—and so spring is here!

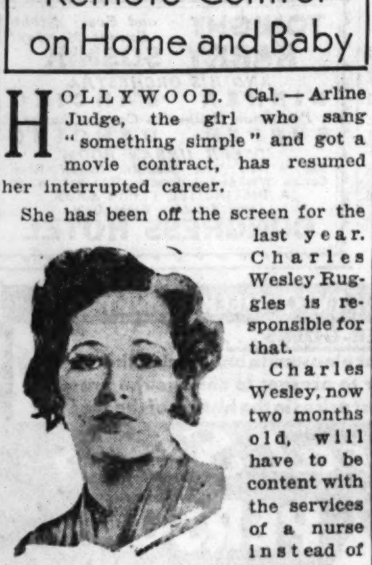
Purring With Contentment

Robert Montgomery and Madge Evans are probably not purring, but they look as if they might be, in this scene from "Hell Below." It's at the Aritsts.

Arline Judge Uses "Remote Control" on Home and Baby

HOLLYWOOD. Cal.—Arline Judge, the girl who sang "something simple" and got a movie contract, has resumed her interrupted career.

She has been off the screen for the last year. Charles Wesley Ruggles is responsible for that.



ARLINE JUDGE.

Charles Wesley, now two months old, will have to be content with the services of a nurse instead of his mother, except when his mother isn't working. Of course, Director Wesley Ruggles, the youngster's father, will be around whenever he can.

"I suppose some mothers would tell me to stay home and take care of my child and my home," says Arline. "But in these modern days, both homes and children can be handled by remote control, as it were.

"I talk to him and play with him before I leave for the studio. And I'm home in the evening before he has his dinner and goes to sleep.

"There is a great deal of time between pictures, when one has nothing to do but stay home, if one cares to. I never used to want to stay home, but now I do."

Right around the corner from the Wesley Ruggleses is the home of the baby's distinguished uncle, Comedian Charlie Ruggles. Most of his spare moments are spent in his nephew's nursery, providing the nephew is awake.

"Charlie holds the baby very awkwardly," tattled Arline. "And if he cries, Charlie is sure the child has appendicitis. Poor baby, he may be only frightened."

Thrilling Tale, Fine Acting in U-Boat Film

"HELL BELOW."

fully crippled in the war! . . . Tragedy stalks. Asea and on land it stalks. And now again are brought home to you the horrors of war—its waste, its desolation, its heartache. You learn, as you did in "Men Without Women," of the dangers confronting submarine sailors and the awfulness of what occurs when an undersea ship is unable to rise to the surface of the ocean. . . .

Scenes aboard the submarine are depicted with terrifying realism—all the more potent because of the persistent foolery of the imperiled men. Not if they can help it will the Grim Reaper stay grim. They'll wangle a laugh out of death, or know why. Some of the persiflage is pretty barn-y, but in life's crowded moments nuances go by the board.

Robert Montgomery has one of the most important parts he has ever played, and he turns out a magnificent job. Walter Huston is great as Toler. Robert Young, gay, fated "Brick"—in an attempt to save whose life Knowlton disobeys orders and is court-martialed—is lovable. Madge Evans handles her small rôle expertly. Jimmy Durante keeps the laughs rippling, and Eugene Palette et al are just fine.

Direction, staging, dialogue are all to the good. [Excepting, as I inferred before, that some of the last gets rather Rabelaisian at times.]

And now we award the medal for bravery! "Hell Below" dares to have an Unhappy Ending!

Bits aBOUTem.

RUBY KEELER'S getting plenty fan mail since she appeared in "42d Street." Her press agent says that it has "grown from nothing to the biggest in Hollywood." . . . THE DIRECTOR of a coming western movie, "Sunset Pass"—Henry Hathaway's his name—declares that love for movies of the plains is hereditary; that they are still in demand, by the children of the children who used to whistle and stamp their feet over the original prairie flickers. Sezze: "Cycles of screen themes may come and go, the silent screen give way to the talkie, gangster vehicles, political exposés, newspaper stories may have their innings, but the western faithfully and surely continues in public favor. . . ." . . . PERCY WESTMORE, one of four brothers who have been for years "making up" Hollywood players, gave out some interesting bits of information in a recent interview. According to him: ". . . We're careful about lipstick. To make a girl look tough we use just a bit too much. That does it. And as for frizzy hair—well, no girl with frizzy or kinky hair ever gets near enough to stardom to come to us.

"We insist, too, that our actresses look sweet and feminine always. You'll notice that about the way we dress their hair and arrange their makeup. We keep them looking like ladies. . . ." Speaking of Edward G. Robinson: "He uses very little make-up and always beats his chest, saying, 'It comes from in here, in here.' But whatever we do to him he plays along with it. He had only a few lines placed on his face for 'Silver Dollar,' but he played with those all the time; used them. . . .

"Ninety-five per cent of our blondes, I should say, are bleached. Brunettes photograph better. So when we photograph most blondes, instead of getting a faded out blonde personality on the screen we really photograph brunette pigment. You'll notice that most of our blondes have dark eyes. Trouble is, audiences know that most blondes are bleached and anything artificial, like bleaching, is apt to be resented. It's odd what little things are subconsciously resented. We try to analyze them all and find why."

See you tomorrow!

Theater Guild

THE Theater Guild announces that it will send to Chicago early next fall the play called "Biography," with Ina Claire in the leading rôle. It now is a hit in New York.

Two other Guild productions will be selected from an imposing list of plays which that organization has announced as available for next season. The Guild has options on the next play of Eugene O'Neill and on new plays by Sidney Howard and Maxwell Anderson.

Also on its list of plays are "Sarah Simple," by A. A. Milne; "Winesburg, Ohio," a dramatization by Sherwood Anderson and Arthur Barton of Mr. Anderson's book of that name; "The Purple Testament," by John Haynes Holmes and Reginald Lawrence; "The School for Husbands," by Molière, in an adaptation in rhyme by Arthur Guiterman and Lawrence Langner; "Native Ground," by Virgil Geddes; "Versailles," by Emil Ludwig, the noted biographer; "Something to Live For," by George O'Neil, and "This Side Idolatry," by Talbot Jennings.

Japanese Commissioners at the Fair Hosts at Dinner Party

First Entertainment by Representatives of Far East at A Century of Progress Held Tonight in the Old Winston Mansion Here.

By COUSIN EVE.

FROM this day forward our social life will be strongly tinctured with World's Fair in ever increasing cycles. Tonight is the dinner of the Japanese commissioners, their first party since renting the grand old Winston house. One looks forward to a charming evening as the guest of Mr. Kusumose, Mr. Sasaki, and Mr. Muto, the handsome and agreeable Japanese consul.

It is the custom in Japan when moving to a new neighborhood to send gifts to all the new neighbors. Before the Japanese commissioners had time to find who these interesting neighbors were, a beautiful Easter lily arrived for them from Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, living vis-a-vis in North State parkway.

Later, on the same day, a box was sent to Mrs. Dewey. In it was a "happiness coat," the same gift, a charming kimono, which the courteous Japanese had already selected for her.

Parties at the Blackstone.

Next Sunday night the Blackstone will be reopened with pomp and circumstance. Stressing this as a part of the Fair, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Dawes are giving a large private dinner there that night and the whole evening will be colored with gay crowds and many whom one knows.

Also World's Fairish, a new night club in the Palmer house opened last Thursday night with invitations broadcast among the smart set. Very exclusive is the idea.

It fairly rained Poles in Chicago last week. First the important ambassadorial visit of Stanislas Patek, newly come to Washington. At the same moment the Polish General Gorecki, president of the International Society of War Veterans, was here; also Count Sokolowski, councilor of the Polish embassy at Washington, and a dozen other aids and attachés. In fact, quite like Old Home week in Poland.

Indeed, one must assume that the recently appointed Hon. Michel Kwapisjewski, head of cultural relations between Poland and the United States, with headquarters in New York, is getting in his work. I met him in Warsaw last summer. And there was charm plus! One hardly hears any country but Poland mentioned in Chicago nowadays, so great are the Polish activities.

A Delightful Dinner for Mr. Patek.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey gave a dinner for twenty in honor of Mr. Patek Saturday night. Mr. Dewey was recently financial adviser to Poland. The hour set was 8 o'clock and at promptly two minutes before 8 o'clock Gen. and Mrs. Dawes arrived from Evanston with diplomatic promptness.

Everybody, indeed, arrived but the guest of honor, and he, alas! was stalled on a railroad track! A train wreck and six freight cars lay between him and the Dewey dinner. So, the hours of wait-

May Showers Herald Many a June Wedding

New York Brides Will Be Married in Small Churches in Country.

By NANCY RANDOLPH.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Once upon a time the adage went that April showers brought May flowers. Society has amended the saying to "May showers herald June weddings." And—we have been having the showers. Yes, indeed.

As to the weddings, the calendar is chock-a-block with them. Lawns are being readied for out-of-doors altars, and the suburban churches are about to come into their own.

On the 26th of this month Christ church at Oyster Bay, L. I., will be the scene of the wedding of Sarita Weekes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Gage Weekes, to William Creighton Peet Jr. As her maid of honor Sarita will have her cousin, Dorothy Weekes, daughter of the Arthur Delano Weekes. Her bridesmaids will include Mrs. Joseph Haskell, the former Julia Benjamin; E. Theresa Townsend, daughter of the Harold Townsends, who will marry Marshall Meade McLeod in Christ church on June 10; Cecily Work, daughter of the Sheldon Works; Rosalie Starr Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Watson, and Sara and Zelia Peet, sisters of the bridegroom.

John Peet to Be Best Man.

John Peet will be Brother Bill's best man, while the ushers are to be Robert M. Peet, Sarita's brother, Bradford J. Weekes, William Jay Iselin, Eric Humphreys, John M. Watson, Morgan Palmer, Edward

'I Gotta Drag' Club Goes Over Big in Washington

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—Col. Robert Guggenheim was on the stand in the Gaston B. Means trial the other day. He was testifying about Means' plan, awhile back, to return the kidnaped Lindbergh baby to Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean in return for a $100,000 ransom. He said Means had complained of the danger of trying to bring the baby back to Washington in an ordinary motor car which might be stopped by police.

"And so Means asked me," Guggenheim said, "if I could get an automobile with a diplomatic license so the kidnapers could have immunity on the road. I said that could be arranged and went to my friend, the Austrian minister, and got the use of his car. Only it never was used."

Nobody in the crowded courtroom thought this was the least bit unusual, although it may sound queer elsewhere. But Washington, the land of privilege and prestige, is reconciled to the "I gotta drag" classes. Congressmen voted themselves special parking privileges anywhere in town.

And all motor cars with the significant yellow oblong with the black letters spelling "Diplomatic" can do just about what they please.

● I went to the state department to find out just why the foreign diplomats have this privilege of unrestricted locomotion. And I found that it is based on the theory that a diplomat may be in terrific haste to get to an appointment with some of our governmental officials. The hypothesis goes so far as to contemplate that possibly this engagement is so important that if the diplomat is late the international affairs of nations may be at stake. Possibly a war might result if the appointment were not kept promptly and precisely.

That is the theory.

The practice is a little different. An ambassador, driving home from the movies or out to the ball game, has the same magic sign on his car that he would were he on his way to important secret treaty negotiations. He gets the same suave service from the cops, the same sullen deference from his less distinguished fellow motorists.

● A prominent doctor here in town was rung up about 2 o'clock in the morning. "White House calling," the voice said, as it went on to summon him to the executive mansion to call on a sick man. The doctor jumped professionally into his clothes. Then a horrible thought struck him. Suppose it were a practical joker trying to make a monkey out of him.

He wakened his wife; told her his dilemma. Sleepily she advised him. Better to go to the White House on a wrong call than to tarry at home on a real call. Still dubious but obedient to

Women's Clubs to Hold Four Day Meeting

Dinner Party Tomorrow Will Open Their 38th Annual Convention.

By Ruth DeYoung.

WITH a dinner party tomorrow evening the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs will open its 38th annual convention in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman. During the four days following Mrs. William Franklin Farrell, president, will preside over meetings devoted to a discussion of the constructive rôle of the federation in the future of the United States.

MRS. JOHN T. MASON.
[Godfrey Photo.]

Preceding the opening dinner for state board members and chairmen and vice chairmen of the local board, there will be a preconvention board meeting at 2 o'clock in the state federation headquarters at 30 West Washington street. The Right Rev. Thomas V. Shannon will open the Tuesday session with an invocation followed by a memorial service.

Topics of Interest to Women in General.

"Building for the future of the United States, the keynote of the convention, will be covered by a wide scope of topics of interest to women in general and in line with the trend in public affairs," Mrs. Farrell explained. "The home . . . its culture, art, music, and reading . . . education, the curriculum, citizenship, motion pictures, law observance, public welfare, public health, and child hygiene, international relations, A Century of Progress, and club institutes, will all come in for discussion."

Among the speakers who are to discuss these subjects are Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president of the Chicago Theological seminary; Grove C. Ramsey of the Men Teachers' union of Chicago; Clifton M. Utley, director of the Council on Foreign Relations; Rufus C. Dawes, president of A Century of Progress; and Charles B. McCabe, central division manager of the United Press associations.

Mrs. Winifred Brainerd of the Presbyterian hospital will speak on "Occupational Therapy," and Mrs. Frank J. Sheehan, chairman of library service for the general federation will tell "How the Wheels Go Round." Another of the highlights of the day meeting will be a lecture titled "Where Women Rule," by Mary Hastings Bradley.

Annual Election to Be Held Thursday Morning.

On Wednesday evening the World's Fair will be epitomized in the skit "A Century of Women's Organizations," written by Mrs. George W. Plummer. At noon on Wednesday the convention will recess for conference luncheons and on Thursday morning the annual election of officers will be held.

Results of this election will be announced at the centennial jubilee dinner Thursday evening, when John Paine Gasser, Audrey Nelson Boman, and Elizabeth Harting Percy will give the program.

Assisting Mrs. Farrell as the presiding officer at the various sessions will be Mrs. A. H. Johnson, Mrs. Ralph W. Pringle, and Mrs. O. A. James, vice presidents of the state federation. Mrs. Henry Hoyt Hilton is chairman of the committee that has arranged the conference program and Mrs. William J. Piggott has planned the musical programs.

Others who have assisted with the arrangements for the five day meeting are Mrs. Albert J. Pohlman, Mrs. Wade W. Reece, Mrs. Karl Plath, Mrs. E. E. Motter, Mrs. J. P. Edwards, Mrs. R. R. Lumsden, Mrs. Willis J. Burgess, Mrs. Leslie Miller, Mrs. William C. Wermuth, Mrs. August S. Portz, Mrs. Harry S. Gradle, Mrs. Adolph G. Hoffmann, Mrs. Albion Headburg, Mrs. William A. Rickets, Mrs. C. H. Schlueter, Mrs. Harry E. Ruby, Mrs. George H. Nipperty, Mrs. William Piggott, Mrs. John Van Wakeman, Mrs. William T. Bruckner, and Mrs. Frank W. Blankley.

Illinois representatives in the general federation who will have a part in the convention include Mrs. Mary A. Wall, director; Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, chairman of the American home; Mrs. J. Marc Fowler, chairman of Indian welfare; Mrs. Richard H. McClure, chairman of motion pictures; and Miss Zoe Lenore Gray, a member of the advisory board of the division of conservation.

Laws Now Pending to Be Discussed.

Proposed laws now pending in the Illinois legislature will be discussed at the 6th biennial Illinois Woman's joint legislative forum, tomorrow at the Chicago Woman's club. The forum is sponsored by the Illinois Woman's joint legislative council with Mrs. John T. Mason as the president. More than 1,000 women from all parts of the state are expected to attend. Among the speakers will be Miss Anderson, director of the women's bureau in Washington. Mrs. R. Maynard Reed is handling the luncheon reservations and Mrs. Laura Lunde is chairman of the program.

MRS. WILLIAM F. FARRELL.

AN ADDITION TO CHICAGO SOCIETY

An attractive newcomer to Chicago is Mrs. Ferre C. Watkins, who is the former Jean Angus of Honolulu. In this picture Mrs. Watkins is wearing a lei of pink carnations, made by herself to wear at a Hawaiian party she and Mr. Watkins gave at their apartment on North State street on May day, which is Lei day in the Hawaiian islands. The lei stayed fresh enough to be worn the next night to the opera at the Auditorium, when this photograph was taken.

Easterners Visit Southern Springs

HOT SPRINGS, Va.—[Special.]—Many visitors arrived this week for the Canada-Cuba cup tournament which began on Thursday. Among them were Garnett H. Meldrum; Michael MacWhite, minister of the Irish Free State; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Graves Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Chapin Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Hungerford.

Colonists Spend Days in Newport

NEWPORT, R. I.—[Special].—Many of the colony are beginning to spend their week-ends here. Commodore Arthur Curtiss James was at Beacon Hill house. Also here were Mr. and Mrs. James Stewart Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Stearns and Harold V. Hollins.

SAUCE for the GOOSE

By D—— D——.

TWELVE books and six victrola records are some of the things the "Mike" Fieldings have arranged to have sent to them monthly to Tahiti, where they are going to spend the next two years. Forty dollars a month is said to be the cost for a couple to live in luxury in that south seas paradise, and so the young Fieldings have decided to forget cities and advertising and "what have you" and enjoy life for two years and hope that the depression will be a thing of the past when they return. Six bathing suits apiece they are including in their luggage, for they plan to spend most of each day on the beach. "Mike" also plans to try his hand at writing.

● The popular "Larry" and Alice Capes are others who have given up metropolitan life in favor of a mode of living that costs much less, but they have chosen a small town on Florida's coast as their abode until "times are better." It's strange, isn't it, that Florida, so recently considered the playground of millionaires, now is the sanctuary of so many who wish to live inexpensively but pleasantly?

● The Enchanted Island at A Century of Progress really is for children, not for "grown-ups," as one of the Junior Leaguers discovered the other day when she got stuck in the circular slide-chute down the Magic Mountain and had to be extricated therefrom with great difficulty.

● Logan Hay, lawyer, senator, philanthropist, has not yet lived down his inattention to personal detail one evening recently. Invited to address a distinguished gathering in Chicago, Mr. Hay arrived late from Springfield, made a quick change from business suit to "tails" in his hotel room, and then hurried to the ballroom of the hotel, where the dinner audience had assembled. Mrs. Hay saw him arrive, took one look, and blushed. He had remembered everything except his wing collar and white tie.

● The young window dresser in a smart shop who was helping the society mannequin dress for a fashion showing, expressed her opinion of society girls in general, perhaps, when she said, "They're all dummies to me," in reply to her boss' admonition that she was being unnecessarily rough with her flesh and blood models.

● We would label this an overdeveloped conscience. A Lake Shore drive matron was eating luncheon alone one day. She was interrupted by a telephone call and, not wishing to leave the table, she told the butler to say she was out. On second thought she said to herself: "What a dreadful example I have set for Ambrose (the butler) and Sarah (the cook) by telling a lie." So up she jumped, rushed to the front door, opened it, and stepped outside, waited a minute, and then returned. Ambrose watched with wide eyed amazement. "There," the mistress said, "I was out."

● They got in the right church if not in the correct pew! The Chicago Business Men's orchestra listed Mrs. Americus F. Callahan, that charming ex-Kentuckian and great patroness of everything musical, as Mrs. Columbus Callahan.

● Had you heard that one of the country's best known maestros is considering seriously offering spot cash for that handsome gray stone residence number 1000 Lake Shore drive, the home of the late Edith Rockefeller McCormick? This is fact, not fiction. His idea is to convert it into A Century of Progress night club. There are those in society, however, who shudder at the idea.

● The chauffeur of a man who gives talks over the radio every night never is a moment late in picking up his employer when he finishes his talks and leaves the Merchandise Mart. The reason is that the chauffeur has a radio in the car and, as soon as he hears his employer finish his broadcast around he goes from the west side of the building, where he is parked, to the east side, where the entrance is. The chauffeur has discovered that he cannot pick up the broadcast except in one certain place at the west of the building, so there he parks nightly.

SHE MODELS FOR CHARITIES' SAKE

Miss Alice May Dickinson may look like this at informal dinner parties this summer, although when this picture was taken she was modeling the dress and it wasn't yet part of her wardrobe. It was vastly becoming, however, the brown of the crepe skirt and the brown and white of the mousseline de soie bodice blending perfectly with her ash blonde hair. Miss Dickinson is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Reynolds Dickinson of Astor street. Miss Dickinson, along with other Junior leaguers and members of the Sunbeam league, the Lighthouse Volunteer Aids, and the Kenwood Social Service club, has been busy this spring acting as mannequin at a North Michigan avenue shop. What they earned went to charity.

"Sistie," "Buzzy" Go Adventuring in White House

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(AP)—Just about the time President Roosevelt's morning coffee is served to him in his upstairs study in the White House two pairs of bright blue eyes peek into the room.

The door flies open and there is a mad scramble as "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, his grandchildren, race to his side.

For 10 merry minutes—just to start the day off right—the trio plays "whiffenpoof." All the Roosevelts have played it in their childhood—one of your hands becomes a mysterious bug that travels and travels and finally pounces.

Sistie is six years old and Buzzie almost three.

Sistie thinks there is nothing quite so much fun as hide-and-seek—slipping into a big, dark clothes closet and just staying there, "still as a mouse," until her elders find her.

Shortly the elders are flying in and out of rooms, pulling doors open, sticking exploring hands into rows of hanging clothes. Finally there is a muffled giggle and little yellow haired Sistie and Buzzie, who perforce accompanies his sister when she goes adventuring, are pulled from their hiding place.

"There's no way out of it," says their mother, Mrs. Curtis Dall, with a humorous little smile.

Sistie is just learning to write and read. She sees a pencil and announces, "I'll write my name for you." Paper is furnished and she whisks off "Sistie."

"That's splendid," she is told. The large letters sprawl all over the page in childish fashion.

"That's terrible," she says quite solemnly and takes another try at making the letters more orthodox in size.

"Would you like to go for a walk?" she is asked. But that isn't active enough for her. Buzzie says "Yes." Sistie says "No."

Even in Washington the children are held to their strict schedule—up at 7:15, breakfast half an hour later, lunch at 12:30, an hour and a half's nap, out of door play until tea time. Dinner and to bed at seven.

PAGEANTRY OF EXTRA COURT IS BOON TO SHOPS

LONDON.—Curtsying classes and a quickened tempo in the luxury trades foreshadowed the ceremony and pageantry of the 1933 royal courts.

The royal family is holding five of these receptions this year, one more than in any year since 1930.

And while that extra court spells for would be presentees less likelihood of being disappointed in their hopes to appear before the rulers, it means for London business an added harvest.

Court dresses of special design, jewels, perfumes, hair dressing, cosmetics, limousines, parties, fans, photographs, training in curtsying and walking and sitting—these essentials in the great social extravaganza mean an estimated turnover of $3,000,000.

Unique Show of Ribbons, Medals Is Planned for London in June

Decoration of the Famous French Order of St. Hubert Goes Back to 1417; Germans to Have More than Four Hundred on Display.

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON.—[Special.]—We are to have at Spink's galleries at the end of June a unique exhibition, a complete collection of the ribbons of the orders, decorations and medals associated with some 67 different countries.

The United States will be represented by the congressional medal and its ribbon, but Europe, South America, and Asia naturally will have the biggest collections. In all there will be 3,500 examples of that "ribbon to stick i' his coat" which has played so great a part in stimulating deeds of valor and of national or dynastic service. The great orders go back at least to the middle ages—that of the famous French Order of St Hubert goes back to 1417—while I suppose the latest [and most surprising] must be the coveted "Order of Lenin" and "Order of the Red Banner," established by soviet Russia to encourage communist zeal.

Germany has more than 400 ribbons on display. The man responsible for this curious collection has spent about five years in corresponding with the various countries for the loan of specimen ribbons.

He is preparing, as a labor of love, four heavy tomes, fully illustrated, covering the part played in history by these ribbons of merit. It will be, I believe, the only work on that subject in existence.

Our [[republican simplicity" turned us in another direction. I doubt if any country in the world has been more generous—not to say extravagant—in distributing pensions to the many, but of honors to the few we seem always to have been chary.

New Riding Stables in the Home Counties.

Few Americans, I confess, see much to admire in English horsemanship as exhibited on "Rotten Row," in Hyde park. The English saddle, the high stirrups, the bouncing seat, and the bowler hat seem, as one friend said to me, "unreal, like one of those pictures in 'Punch'."

That is understandable, but it is a mistake to regard the riding in "Rotten Row" as merely swank. No doubt some fashionables like to be seen there, but its main attraction is its great convenience to men and women in London who love to ride. That the love is genuine is clearly established this year by the riding stables which have sprung up all over the home counties to which Londoners motor on Saturdays and Sundays for a good cross-country gallop. There must be at least thirty of these stables, all of them doing an excellent business.

But the place to see English riding is not in Rotten Row, but in the hunting field, even if you prefer to follow the hunt in a motor car.

Max Reinhardt is being offered almost as many chairs as his fellow exile, Dr. Einstein. The Italian government has invited him to produce an open air performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" on May 31, and now Oxford has invited him to produce an open air performance of the same play with the Oxford University Dramatic society on June 15. Undergraduates will take the male parts and actresses, down from London, the female rôles. He has accepted both invitations.

The O. U. D. S. gets more and more ambitious every year.

Minister's Sympathy with Reds Stirs British.

Dr. Julius F. Hecker, formerly an American Methodist clergyman and now officially connected with the soviet government's educational department, has stirred up British religious circles by a book just published called: "Moscow Dialogues: Discussions in Red Philosophy," in which he explains sympathetically the anti-religious bias of the soviet government. They feel, he explains in effect, that they now have a vastly better religion than the ones they discarded.

The Quakers, though behind nobody in devoutness, have long been interested in Russia, and they have been passing Dr. Hecker on from one "meeting" to another. But the Church of England clergy seem distinctly alarmed; there have been several important sermons preached on the subject, and the influential Church Times which describes the American Methodist's book as "very intelligent" and an "important challenge to the orthodox thinker," promises its readers three heavy articles blasting away the soviet creed. But the Church Times confesses itself mystified as to how Dr. Hecker still retains, as apparently he does, his formal connection with American Methodism.

Regard Rabbi Wise as Too Formidable.

English Jews, I hear, are not a little perturbed at the announcement that Rabbi Stephen S. Wise is coming over here to "stir them up" on the subject of the German situation. They are already deeply stirred, though their official body, the Jewish Board of Deputies, is widely criticized for "not doing something."

But to have the "stormy petrel of American Judaism" landed in their midst to organize a worldwide protest against Hitlerism is, apparently, a formidable prospect. English Jewry has plenty of representatives in the peerage. In Dr. Chaim Weizmann it has a scholar of the highest ability, and it has plenty of scholars, both in and out of the universities.

But it has no platform orator of Rabbi Wise's caliber, and perhaps only a few leaders who compare with him in intensity.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE SOCIAL SET

ing were passed at the table of hors d'œuvres and apertifs, I forget the Polish name for it, around a table set in the hall. With these delicious edibles and everybody gathered merrily round, nobody could get cross and hungry. Even the chef, who was afraid his dinner would "diminuer," was able to save the situation. So when Mr. Patek came in at 10 o'clock a warm welcome and excellent Polish dishes awaited him.

The ambassador speaks excellent English and Gen. Gorecki has a merry twinkle in his eye and much gayety of manner.

Hardly had this excitement faded when a telegram arrived from Count Alfred Potocki, great sportsman and landowner of Lancut, Poland, saying he would arrive Monday. Miss Louise Dewey, this year's young bud, in the absence of her parents, who were out of town for the day, took Count Potocki the rounds of the Fair. He showed himself more au courant than most of us, calling for a sight of the glass house, the Belgian Village, Enchanted Island, and lots of tricky things of which we as yet know nothing.

That night Count Potocki dined en famille with the Deweys and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate of Washington, en route to meet Viscount Ishii as he enters this country from Japan. Another prime minister to visit Mr. Roosevelt.

Count Potocki, a mighty hunter of lions, wild boars, and other matters, is quite American in looks—splendid, perfect teeth, fine ruddy skin, perfect manners, easy withal, and English with no foreign accent whatever.

A Splendid Show, but Hardly Opera.

"Emperor Jones" was a splendid show, but its greatest fans can hardly call it opera. One heard Tibbett whistle and one heard Tibbett croon. Fortunately, it was prefaced by "Pagliacci," and Tonio is the great baritone's greatest rôle.

It was the finest looking audience at the Auditorium one has seen in years. And the enthusiasm was enormous. All the white fur coats and chinchillas and near jewels were trotted out, and everybody swished up into the lobby during intermission to talk it over. Down in front Mrs. Tibbett was seated with Mrs. Joseph Coleman and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham, and Mr. and Mrs. John Carpenter had two boxes of guests at the back who had dined with them beforehand.

Costumes were, for the better part, restrained and lots of little jackets and capes worn concealing the décolletage. Also many false eyelashes. Some long, some curly. They give rather a silly look, I think.

The main subject of conversation was this—that Miss Grace Denton, tall, slim young lady in a dark print evening frock, had brought opera back to Chicago. Arriving here two years ago from New York an absolute stranger, Miss Denton had projected the popular Town Hall lectures, presenting the Hon. Winston Churchill, Baroness von Hindenburg, and other celebrities. And this season Tito Schipa, Lucrezia Bori, Chaliapin, Onegin in concert, two performances of "Tosca" with Jeritza and John Charles Thomas, and two rounds of "Emperor Jones" with Lawrence Tibbett.

Proof That Chicago Can Have Opera.

In the two years Miss Denton has made many friends. She is rather quiet, retiring (except in music), and handsome, with gray-blue eyes and black hair. She is the living proof that opera can be given in Chicago without Mr. Insull, without a $500,000 guarantee fund, and without a board of directors and trustees. More power to her!

Returning to "Emperor Jones," it is the great gift of God to society, something new to talk about. And interesting beyond anything seen in opera since Strauss' "Salome." Not that an opera founded upon and written about that terrible subject "fear" is likely to be a popular favorite. The story by Eugene O'Neill with modernissimo orchestral accompaniment by Gruenberg is the tale of an island throne stolen by a shipwrecked Pullman porter. Fearing penal servitude, he flees with loot,

Lost in the jungle and haunted by perpetual fear, strange fantasies and the distant boom of the talking drums, he is tortured by hunger, thirst, and terror. A disordered mind shows him menacing figures behind every tree. He strips. Finally, shot by the remaining silver bullet in his gun, he dies a victim of fear. A great thing for people to see in these times, when fear is eating people up! It is, nevertheless, not a subject for répertoire. I doubt if many would go twice, even if seats were given away. But a distinguished architect told me that it was the most inspiring thing he had ever seen in opera.

Women Given Close-Up of Great Singer.

A day or so later Miss Emily Larned, president of the American Opera society, assembled a few friends at the Arts club for a close-up of Lawrence Tibbett. The great baritone sauntered in at noon in the most engaging manner. Absolutely unaffected and rather boyish, he stood for an hour, the center of a group of women—the only man—although Chauncey McCormick did look in for a moment to tell him that "Emperor Jones" was glorious.

Tibbett said that playing this rôle was about equal to 100 miles on horseback and that twice a week was about his limit. He thinks that Gruenberg's piece will kill much of the old Italian répertoire deader than door nails. And one inferred that he may sing Boris Godunoff in English next season.

It was lunch time, but as Tibbett refused to eat Miss Larned ordered a round of tea for her guests, which was original and rather cozy. Mrs. [illegible] was of this group, and [illegible] Hinde, Mrs. H. C. [illegible] Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. A. C. Callahan, Miss Carpenter, and perhaps a dozen others.

ON THE ARM OF A BRIDEGROOM—BUT NOT HER BRIDEGROOM

Mrs. William Robert Tobey on the arm of a bridegroom—not her bridegroom, however, for she and Peter Lambros were only modeling the smartest attire for a bride and groom at an afternoon wedding when this picture was taken. The fashion show was staged at the Evanston Golf club at a dinner dance given by the North Shore auxiliary of the Chicago Maternity center. The lovely bridal gown Mrs. Tobey wore was of ivory satin, with alencon lace in the shoulders and in the upper sleeves. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Claire Dux Sings at the Fortnightly.

That afternoon the annual meeting of the Fortnightly took a great number to the Fortnightly club in Bellevue place, the lovely old Bryan Lathrop house. Decorated in a vivid and charming manner, its gray and flame ballroom bright with multi-colored stocks, it was the mise en scene for a program sung by Claire Dux, distinguished concert singer and member. Absolutely to the taste of the audience was this concert, as was also the reëlection of Mrs. Wilhelm Ludwig Baum as president of the Fortnightly. It would seem that Mrs. Baum has been a most flawless executive, conducting her high office with such tact and wit while in the chair as to charm the most captious.

The day following, in the same beautiful surroundings, the annual meeting of the Friday club. After the election of officers, when Mrs. William A. Nitze (off for Europe) was reëlected as president and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick as first vice president, there was a musical program which filled every seat. A charming looking audience, too, with hats of spring, and print frocks and nosegays and things, in spite of floods of rain. It was Mrs. John Alden Carpenter's day and she was presenting her husband, the eminent composer, in a program of his songs, sung by Mina Hager to his own accompaniment.

The piano was on a platform. Before beginning Mr. Carpenter said that he had given the same songs before the Friday club many years ago. And that the present audience must be daughters of those others. Divine tact and much laughter.

It was an old world group at the piano. The composer, slender and rapt, facing his audience, playing grandly; Janet Fairbank Jr., page-turner extraordinary, and Miss Hager in the curve of the piano, a tall figure draped in black, with long, white classic throat. Hers is the face of a muse, an expression, wonderful, that dramatizes her song. She slips off her close hat and sings and sings.

A Program Displaying Great Variety.

It was a program of great variety, covering many moods, many minds: war, peace, fragments of France, English moments, songs for children, some bits of elegant jazz, and four American spirituals with words by Tagore. As a fitting climax the "Song of Freedom," a song so lovely that it should live forever.

Miss Harriet Monroe was introduced by Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, who presided with finished ease. She had something to say of the $100 offered by the Friday club for the best verse on the subject of the Century of Progress. The names of prize winners will be announced in the June number of Poetry.

There was the usual tea; two long tables, a central nosegay of every kind of spring flower: blue flags, red tulips, pink stock—Mrs. George Ranney and Mrs. George Langhorne at one side; Mrs. Arthur Farwell and a vis-à-vis I didn't know, on the other.

Contemporary Club Meets at University.

The Contemporary club's annual meeting was a large luncheon at International house given by Miss Naomi Donnelley and her niece, the lovely Teddy, now Mrs. Charles C. Haffner Jr. Smart motors became buses for the day and 170 members arrived in full cars. It was a very animated party. Sunshine was flooding the Midway as the guests arrived and there was much amaze over this palace of white stone which the Rockefellers have given for the culture of internationalism.

The assembly room looked superb. The Fortuny curtains of henna and blue were drawn over the stage and masses of yellow callas were banked there. Twenty tables held the guests. At each place was a pile of post cards of the World's Fair, marvelously colored and startling. Mrs. David Cooke Jr. has mailed scores abroad and in this country as effective propaganda.

Annual meetings of clubs are not especially interesting except to the members. On this occasion, however, the day of meeting was changed from Monday to alternate Fridays with the Friday club, and the hour from an afternoon meeting to 11:30 in the morning. Miss Mary Walsh succeeds Miss Martha Sarver of Lake Forest, a popular and witty president, who has kept the members in shrieks of joy throughout the entire depression.

Mrs. Chester Tripp and Mrs. Frederic Upham are the new vice presidents. After luncheon members who had not seen the arrangements at International house were taken through by very attractive young lady guides, students. One, Miss Lord, speaking of the national dances rehearsed by different groups, was laughing about a young Chinaman. After seeing the Bulgarians stamping and whirling and leaping into the air with smashing heels, the Chinese youth said he "was glad he was not a Bulgarian—it was such hard work."

Renaissance Society Holds Election.

That evening, in company with the members of the Renaissance society, also set to have their annual elections, again one entered International house and the assembly room filled with a big dinner party. Not a dull moment. Between courses, Mickey Mouse movies, with flowers and trees doing daily dozens, and scenes under the ocean with one's favorite lobsters, crabs, oysters, and clams.

The program promised that the reports and election would be brief and it was reminding one of a wedding before a justice of the peace. The chairman said to the secretary, "Do you cast the entire vote?"

"I do."

Another "I do," and an immense board was reëlected without bloodshed or boredom. I was delighted to know that Mrs. Martin Schutze continues to be president, and that Mrs. Phemister, Mrs. Charles Hutchinson, Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. Martin Ryerson, Robert Allerton, Thornton Wilder, and a dozen others, including Mrs. John A. Carpenter, were in office.

There was a "lichtspiel," which was moving pictures of machinery, gyrating in strange ways and no more exciting than looking at the engine room of an ocean liner.

Many bouquets were thrown at Donald Bean for his moving picture season just past, when many good foreign and American films were shown at low prices. It seems that money has been appropriated by the Renaissance society for other shows during the summer, beginning in July.

Charles R. Buckley played the violin, with piano by Dean Remick, a sonata by Cesar Franck, and one by John A. Carpenter, who was there with Mrs. Carpenter to hear it.

"Inflation" Luncheon Draws Interested Guests.

From this charming society of elegance and aspiration one must skip rapidly to one of the most important events of the week, the inflation luncheon of the Foreign Relations.

The fact that Jacob Viner was to speak on inflation filled the Palmer house ballroom. There was a round table of young marrieds: Mrs. William Mitchell, Mrs. Wolcott Blair, Mrs. Valentine Bartlett, Mrs. Rodman, and others, who passed petitions for repeal signatures; at least, Mrs. Blair did.

These were avidly signed. When "Inflation" began there was tense silence. Mr. Viner spoke rapidly for an hour and many took copious notes. Later, however, they read like glittering generalities. I frankly confessed to myself that I didn't know what it was all about. At first Prof. Viner showed his doubts as to the "brain trust in Washington." But that was, perhaps, professorial jealousy. He opined that the present government had no plan, or policy, but awaited emergencies to shape its course. It made no claim to monetary experience and, except for the staff of the federal reserve board, had no qualifications.

The situation is not brilliant, for business men, while willing to speculate on the stock market, will not speculate with business. Bankers are the expert hoarders. The banking system does not yet expand loans; when loans turn upward then is the real upturn. Government cannot offset the hoarding of the banks unless government takes over business.

Many Inflations Recorded by World History.

Inflations have been many, a hundred or so in history. Of ruinous inflations, merely seven or eight. Inflation can be carried on to restore margin of profit and property. High wages do not mean high purchasing power; otherwise the depression could be ended by employers raising wages.

Continued high wages would increase unemployment universally. The world can starve on a high price level alone. Banks make a lot out of inflation, but they are afraid of the animal, because of danger to the economic structure.

Germany was on the point of success with inflation, when the allies interfered and insisted on payment which caused the débacle. For success, government should fix heights beyond which prices shall not rise.

Then there was a lot about the content of the dollar, and as a finale the idea that dangers of action are much less than those of inaction. We must follow on, even if it isn't an angel who leads us.

Later that day, riding home with Harriet Borland, I was set right by her as to our present status. We are reflating, not having yet reached the point of inflating. Takes a college girl, after all.

Italian Prince Tells of Motor Accident.

Prince Spada Potenziani, Italian commissioner to the World's Fair, arrived in town Tuesday, alive after a terrific motor mishap. Just prior to sailing from Genoa the prince was driving from Rome to Ostia over the glorious new road to the sea on a divine day.

In his car were Countess Ruggero Visconti, a man, and the chauffeur; they were going fast. But Italy has no traffic laws and the sky is the limit as to speed in the country. Suddenly a car full of people barged on to the right of way, and not a second to spare. Then was a hideous smash. Everybody in this car was killed; also Potenziani's guest. Lovely Edith Visconti had a scraped nose, and the prince himself was whole except from the shock of such a catastrophe.

May Showers Herald Many a June Wedding

New York Brides Will Be Married in Small Churches in Country.

Melcher, Marshall McLeod, and Wilson Lloyd. The reception will follow at the Weekes home at Oyster Bay and after their honeymoon the young couple will live at Mount Kisco, N. Y.

Sarita, we should have told you, graduated from Miss Chapin's school and made her debut during the season of '27-'28 at the home of her great-aunt, Alice Delano Weekes, at 10 Washington square north.

Bill Peet is Harvard '28; prepped at St. Mark's, and is a member of Hasty Pudding, Varsity, and Fly.

Evelyn Dows a June Bride.

A June bride of importance will be Evelyn Byrd Dows, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Dows, who will become Mrs. Cornelius N. Bliss Jr. on the 24th. The notable St. John's of Lattingtown, near Locust Valley, L. I., will be the scene of the nuptials and, since the church is frightfully small, the list of invited guests is being greatly blue-penciled.

At present the plans for the marriage are still being made. Both the Dows and the Blisses are among our most important Gotham families and the list of bridesmaids and ushers will be a long and imposing one.

Long Island Scene of Another Ceremony.

An earlier June wedding in the Long Island setting will be that of Mary Pat Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Kelley, who will become the bride of G. Chester Doubleday in St. Mary's, Manhasset, on June 10, with the reception to follow at Sunny Skies, the Kelley estate at Manhasset, which is incidentally the site of the almost feudal manor of the Payne Whitney clan.

Mrs. George Hepburn, the former Cornelia Kelley, will be her sister's matron of honor, and Alice Doubleday will be maid of honor for her sister-in-law-to-be. The bridesmaids are to include Mary Schmacher, Beatrice Ter Meulen, Janet Stone, Mary J. Willets, Barbara Truesdale, and Elizabeth Evans, who is to come from Butte, Mont., to attend her friend, Mary. The flower girls will be Cornelia Keressey and Patricia Ripley, respectively nieces of the bride and the bridegroom.

Bridegroom Son of George Doubleday.

The bridegroom, a son of George Doubleday of town and Ridgefield, Conn., will have his brother, James M. Doubleday, as his best man, and the ushers are to include James H. Ripley, Thomas M. Keresey, Herman A. Heydt Jr., John H. Lynch, Calvin W. Dall, Henry P. Andrews, and Lawrence Driggs Jr., Percy J. Bentley, and Franklin Gary.

Mary Pat Kelley attended the Spence school and made her bow at the Ritz on Thanksgiving day of '30. She is a sister of Mrs. Nils Florman, Mrs. Thomas Keresey, and of Mrs. George Hepburn.

"Chet" Doubleday is Princeton and Hotchkiss and a member of the Sons of the Revolution and of the University and Princeton clubs.

Lady Furness Sails for England.

Other notes about town include the departure of Lady Furness for London, where she will arrange her annual benefit in aid of the pet charity of H. R. H. the prince of Wales. One hears that the ubiquitous Beth Leary is to be Thelma's house guest for the London season.

Chicago folk who have been in New York include Mrs. Jefferson Jackson at the Barclay and Mrs. James Simpson, who sailed on the Conte Di Savoia for Italy this last week. Also Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Carton and Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, who were at the St. Regis.

Chicagoans Seen at White Sulphur

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va.—[Special.]—Among the visitors here are Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wampler of Chicago, who arrived for the meeting of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers' association which takes place today.

Also here have been Senator and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys of Indiana, Mrs. Dodge Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. Alan L. Corey, Dr. and Mrs. Henry D. Chickering, Mr. and Mrs. George Albee, Mrs. Howard F. Chappell and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Bowen.

Spain's Population Grows.

MADRID.—(AP)—There were 388,895 deaths in Spain in 1932, or 19,176 fewer than in 1931. Births totaled 670,525, an increase of 21,459. This made the net increase in population from natural causes 282,630, a gain of 41,175 as compared with 1931.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Mary Louise Willard, sister of Frank H. Willard, the cartoonist, to Dr. William H. MacLean of Tampa, Fla. The bride, who was born in Anna, Ill., has lived most of her life in Chicago, where she attended the St. Xavier academy, of which she is a graduate. Dr. MacLean was born in Ontario, Canada, and was graduated from the University of Toronto. He saw active service in the royal air force during the world war.

"I Gotta Drag" Club Goes Over in Washington

spouse's reasoning, he got into his car, drove to the White House.

There he was pleased to find a bona fide patient, with a very bad sore throat.

● When she sailed away for Denmark the other day Madame Minister Ruth Bryan Owen left one very sad young man here in Washington. He is the Frenchman, at one of the better beauty parlors, who used to cut her hair; wave her locks. He liked her; thought it was grand to trim the hair of a diplomat.

But just as soon as he lost one famous customer in walked another. Mrs. Garner came to have a permanent wave.

Life is once more bright for Rene.

● In this democracy of ours an invitation to the White House has long been regarded as something of a royal mandate. Only two excuses were permissible for a refusal. If you were really ill or if you had had a recent death in your family, you could decline.

All the rule books put out by the social secretaries say that even if you have already invited people to your home for dinner and at the eleventh hour receive a bid to the White House table you must ask a friend to be hostess for your own dinner party and trot obediently off to the executive mansion.

That's all changed now. If you're invited to a meal at the White House and can't go, you just say so. And you get invited again when you can go.

● Hostesses, watching their entertainment budgets more carefully than before, are getting quite hard boiled about the self-invited guest. It used to be sort of an unwritten rule here in Washington that you could always tote along as many house guests as you pleased to an embassy tea, a diplomatic garden party, a cabinet member's reception. You didn't ask for an elastic invitation to a luncheon or a dinner. But for any other party you blithely called up the hostess and said you were bringing guests. Often you didn't even telephone.

These last few weeks, with the town jammed with visiting celebrities, the embassies and legations have had a round of entertaining, gay, but expensive.

And more than one local dowager has had her feelings hurt when she asked to bring along guests to a garden party or tea and was politely but resolutely refused.

Edward Tinker Passes Exams at Sorbonne

Lengthy Oral Quiz is Part of the Ordeal.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—It is not often that an American presents himself or herself for the exacting oral defense of a thesis at the Sorbonne. A group of professors identified with the candidate's specialty sit in a row on the platform and take turns in directing a set of searching questions at the aspirant, who is supposed to have such a command of his subject and of the French language as to support this examination during about three hours.

A brilliant success of this kind was won some years ago by the Comtesse Clara Longworth de Chambrun, who was made doctor of letters for defending her thesis on Shakespeare. This week Edward Larocque Tinker, an American who has specialized in the study of French literature in Louisiana during the last 150 years, is undergoing the oral examination and his work is to be published by the house of Champion under the auspices of the Library of Comparative Literature. His researches revealed, among many other curious things, that the game of craps, so far from being indigenous to the Louisiana Negroes, was brought to New Orleans by the French about 1800.

Paris Season Takes in Spring Stride.

With the first days of May the Paris season begins to get its stride. This year no particular flavor of exoticism seems to have the call. But on the race course, in the theater, at the opera, in the concert hall, at the salons, and the charity fêtes, wherever, in short, the mundane crowds gather to see and to be seen and to give that touch which makes the Paris season what it is, talent from many other countries will join forces with the thoroughly Parisian stars from now until the Grand Prix two months hence.

One Iberian vedette, who has become a marked Parisian favorite within the last few years and who has also had great success in America for the last two winters, is to be seen and heard this week in a new production. Conchita Supervia, whose now famous interpretation of Carmen has been drawing brilliant audiences to the Opera Comique, will appear in the new operetta "Frasquita," by the Viennese Franz Lehar of "Merry Widow" fame.

Mrs. Henry Shelton Gives Tea for Friends.

Mrs. Henry Shelton gave a luncheon the other day at her apartment in the Avenue des Champs Elysées, the guests including several fellow Chicagoans. The party happened to be given for Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sloan of New York, and some of the other guests were Mrs. Dorr Bradley, who is sailing soon for America; Mrs. Hugh McBirney, who sailed May 10; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gade, Mrs. Pitts Duffield, and Mme. d'Arsimovitch.

Taxpayer Runs Afoul of French Bureaucracy

Five Cents Involved in Comedy of Errors and Poor Arithmetic.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—This is a sad story of a taxpayer caught in the intricate net of the French bureaucracy. Besides the taxpayer it involves the sum of 5 cents and a tax collector poor at arithmetic.

M. Lesueur is a Paris dealer in hides and leather. On May 8, 1932, he paid his taxes, including a tax of 79 francs, about $3, which the government imposes for each apprentice hired by business houses. Having duly paid all asked of him, M. Lesueur thought he was through for 1932, but he was soon to learn that he had only begun.

Imposed in Error, Tax Is Refunded.

In January of this year M. Lesueur's firm was notified that the 79 franc tax had been imposed in error and would be refunded, and the refund was made at once. Then another official got hold of M. Lesueur's tax bill and decided that the 79 francs should have been paid after all, so he invited M. Lesueur to pay it again, which he did.

But early this month tax official number three entered the scene. Discovering that 79 francs imposed in May, 1932, had been paid this year, he fined M. Lesueur for being late with his taxes. Having suffered a dozen annoyances because of his good intentions, M. Lesueur decided to undergo one more, and he resignedly agreed to pay the fine.

Still Another Mistake Recorded.

For reasons best known to the tax collector, the fine was calculated at 10 per cent of 14 francs 40 centimes, but at this point the arithmetic entered. Instead of demanding 1 franc 41 centimes, the tax collector asked for 15 centimes, or 1 per cent, and that was paid.

Then the error was discovered, and the tax officials have informed M. Lesueur that he owes 1 franc 29 centimes more. Now the latter feels that he has had more than enough, and he refuses to pay. Seizure of his establishment has been ordered as a consequence, though the sum is 5 cents. He says he will let the bailiff put all the padlocks he wishes on his property, and let them take it to court.

Huge Pipe Lines Boom to Cities in the Near East

HAIFA, Palestine.—U. P.]—A new Phoenicia is rising in the near east.

Jerusalem, Jaffa with Tel Aviv, and Haifa all have shown recent increases in population and the boundaries of the cities are pushing out further and further.

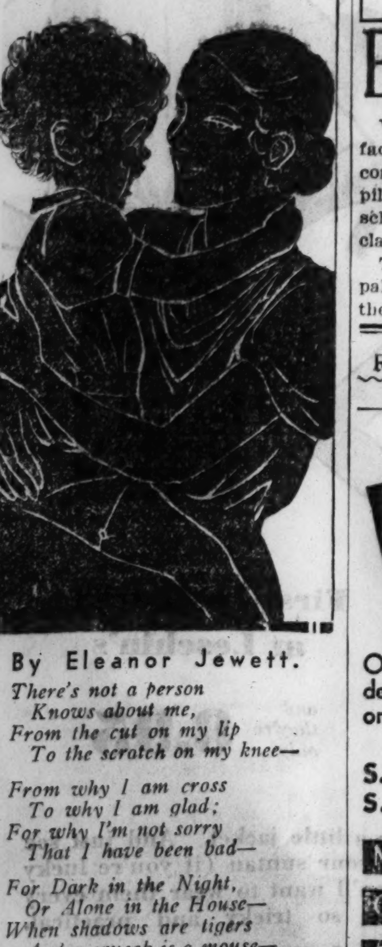
Jerusalem is the center of institutions, while Jaffa and Haifa are the centers of trade and industry. Haifa is the most favored and is fitting itself to be an international port.

The new harbor is nearly complete, while the pipe line that is to run from the great Mosul oil field across the Syrian desert, Transjordan, and the Plain of Esdraelon is nearing the port.

Some 200 British and American officers of the Iraq Petroleum company now are established here. Parties of them are dotted along the line, which at present is being laid westward and eastward from Mafrak. The vast enterprise already has given great stimulus to industry, and it promises a future for industrial Palestine which is making land values soar.

Despite Haifa's advance, Jaffa and Tel Aviv remain the principal center of the local trade and industry. The census shows that the twin towns already had a population of nearly 100,000, and Tel Aviv alone is estimated to have grown in the last 12 months to 60,000 persons.

The Constant Friend



By Eleanor Jewett.

There's not a person
Knows about me,
From the cut on my lip
To the scratch on my knee—

From why I am cross
To why I am glad;
For why I'm not sorry
That I have been bad—

For Dark in the Night,
Or Alone in the House—
When shadows are tigers
And a squeak is a mouse—

For all that I think
And for all that I do,
Except just my mother—
And I love her, too!

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

FOR SALE—An island, with a seat in parliament thrown in for good measure. Apply at Guernsey, Channel islands, English channel.

Word reaches Chicago that Brechou, smallest of those isles, has been placed on the market, and that the buyer will be entitled to membership in the parliament of Sark, together with a British feudal estate and a domain three-fourths of a mile long and half a mile wide.

Victor Hugo called the Channel islands "bits of France fallen into the sea and picked up by England." They lie only a few miles off the coast of Normandy, but not since 1204 have they been under French rule.

Once Trajan forum resounded to the cries of merchant princes and the perorations of Roman orators. This year it will resound to the cock's crow and the hen's cackle.

By order of Il Duce, the great forum, dating back to around 135 B. C., has been freed of the ugly medieval reconstruction which hid it from view, and is being put in shape for the Fifth World Poultry congress, to be held in September.

Built by Emperor Trajan as headquarters for the commercial outfits that were then the big shots of Rome, the forum was the board of trade of its day. Now all its glory, and pomp, and splendor are being restored—for the aristocracy of the barnyard.

● It is announced that the Holy Coat—the one for which the Roman soldiers cast lots under the Cross—will be displayed this summer in the Cathedral of Trier, in Germany. This will be the first showing in forty-two years.

Chronicles preserved from the fourth century set forth that the coat, together with a nail from the Cross, was sent by St. Helena, mother of the Roman emperor, Constantine the Great, as a gift to St. Agritius in Trier about the year 330. Its first public exhibition was held in 1512, when 100,000 persons viewed it within a fortnight. In 1891, the last time it was on view, nearly 2,000,000 pilgrims gathered to see it and to pray before it.

Is it really the original? Every one is entitled to an opinion.

Our Weekly Horror:

When the natives of the Lake Tanganyika region, in Africa, take to inflation they stay inflated. They snuff a hot stuff solution up the nostrils and then fasten a pair of wooden tweezers on the nose, so that none of the stuff escapes. As long as they wear the tweezers, blinding tears stream from their eyes.

● Startling Statistics:

Argentina has more cattle per capita than any other country in the world; its mark of three cows to a person exceeds that of the United States. . . . Greater Shanghai is spread out over an area of 700 square miles, its population is estimated at 3,000,000, and it's the fifth largest city in the world. . . . In Tokio you can rent a six room house for $12.50 a month; in Kyoto the cost is less. . . . A good room and a swell breakfast at 85 cents and a full course dinner at less than 35 cents may be had in Berlin. . . . The dude ranches in the Wyoming and Montana Rockies have grown into a $6,000,000 infant industry. . . . There are 700 islands in the Bahama group; it was on one of these that Columbus landed and the natives once had to drive off the pirates because the pirates were interfering with the natives' monopoly in salt.

Add March of Progress:

One of the quaintest of the hide-and-seek glen towns in Mallorca, where the peace and old world charm of Spain have always lingered, has gone modern. Alcudia has taken up golf. So now the whiz of the hook and the slice drowns out the whine of the windmill and the weather vane.

Thus the primitive succumbs to civilization.

● Did You Know department:

That the island of Tobago, in the West Indies, claims it's the place where Robinson Crusoe did his stuff; that the natives lead visitors to the cave where Defoe's hero lived with his man Friday, and that they even point out the very beach where the immortal footprints were found? . . . That the sultan of Zanzibar sent his secretary to New York to get the latest jazz orchestrations so that a group of globe girdlers could be properly welcomed there last month? . . . That the Cango caves, not far from the Cape of Good Hope, are so vast they haven't yet been explored; that the oldest guide on duty there claims to have gone inward for miles without finding an exit, and that the air within is always fresh and warm, but nobody knows where it comes from? . . . That the German weather service wil insure you against running into bad weather; that for a groschen—about 2½ cents—you can get from a weather automat in Frankfurt a chart and prognosis for the following day?

Prince Michael's School Pal Son of Mail Carrier

BUCHAREST.—(AP)—The son of a mail carrier has become the particular pal of Prince Michael, heir to the crown of Roumania.

What made this possible was the fact that in order to give the prince competition in his studies, bright pupils were picked from the public schools and formed into a special class.

These youngsters go daily to the palace to study under the tutors of their future ruler.

Warnings of Air Raids Are Heard in Italian Senate

ROME.—(AP)—Rather than trust others to respect peace pacts, Italy should prepare for the worst kind of air raids, Gen. Giuseppi Cattaneo warned in a senate speech on the war budget.

Bomb refuges should be provided in the major cities, he declared, distribution of gas masks should be speeded up, and all new buildings should be bombproof.

Gen. Pietro Gazzera, minister of war, opined that the best defense for civilization against air raids is to move away from large cities in time of war.

Kalgoorlie Roars as Gold Demand Revives Old Camp

PERTH, Australia.—(AP)—Kalgoorlie, chief city of western Australia's famous gold mine, is again the rip-roaring mining town of 20 years ago.

The high price of gold awakened it from its long somnolence and it is today the most prosperous city in Australia.

The huge dumps of old tailings have been bought by a chemical syndicate which is getting sufficient of the precious metal to make the venture pay.

Saloons, cafés, and dancing dens keep open all night and the gold fever has seized every one.

Many miners work only long enough to save a "stake," then go into the desert in an effort to locate a field for themselves.

Even schoolboys "prospect" on their way to and from school and most of them pick up 40 to 50 cents worth of gold a week.

Public Trustee Handles Trusts for Englishmen

Administrator Faced with Many Problems, Some of Them Quite Difficult.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Fearful property owners in Britain may, if they like, leave everything they have to the management of a public trustee who administers their estates just as any private individual or group would, with the additional factor that there is no danger whatever of dishonesty.

The office of public trustee came into existence after a solicitor designated as the administrator of a large estate decamped with most of the money. The incumbent is Sir Oswald Simpkin, whose office deals with wills and bequests left in his care at a fixed fee designed to cover all expenses of the department. So far the office of public trustee has not called for a cent of the taxpayers' money.

Some Problems Hard to Solve.

Some of the problems Sir Oswald is called upon to solve are extremely difficult to deal with.

"Here are a few instances taken at random out of the problems which have recently come before me personally as being of special difficulty," Sir Oswald said. "Is a boy under my care to go to a university or go straight into business after leaving his public school? A family in Italy wants to be moved to Kenya—shall I move them?

"A sum of $500,000 is needed to save an old family business. Can the family trust find the money, or shall we wind up the business?

"What is to be done with a drug-taking woman who has just escaped from the home in which we placed her?

"A lady cannot afford the rent of the house she is living in. Can we provide some capital to enable her to make terms with the landlord? A man in high position is deeply in debt. Can we rescue him?

"My officers approach all these questions with a serious endeavor to deal with other people's affairs just as they would wish other people to deal with theirs, and they bring to these problems the accumulated experience of many years and of many hundreds, perhaps thousands, of cases.

Administrator Has Staff of 850.

"The office is now administering close upon 18,500 wills and trusts. The nominal capital value of the funds under its control is approximately $1,075,000,000, in addition to landed property, of which much has never been properly valued, but which may be taken roughly at $250,000,000.

"It has a staff of nearly 850. It has, at a guess, something like 200,000 beneficiaries and is distributing somewhere around $50,000,000 in income a year.

"In addition to the cases now under administration the office has administered and completely wound up a further 11,500 cases, making a total of approximately 30,000 wills and trusts with an aggregate value close on $1,700,000,000.

"The office has not cost the taxpayer one single penny."

New Lookout Is Opened at Grand Canyon

A NEW view of the Grand Cañon of Arizona is obtainable from a high watch tower that was opened yesterday.

This lofty lookout enables visitors to see down the chasm 5,000 feet to the river and to get a view of the painted desert.

Built of native stones collected from the surrounding country, many of them from Indian ruins found along the cañon's rim, the watch tower is a faithful replica of its predecessors, blending into the brink of the chasm and appearing to have stood there for centuries.

Buffalo Meat Is Given to Wyoming Indians for Food

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo.—[U. P.]—From near extinction to such numbers that Indians and relief agencies have been donated surplus animals for their meat supply, is the history of the Yellowstone park buffalo herd, now totaling more than 1,000 animals.

In 1902 official figures listed but 1,676 buffalo in the world. Emerson Hough, after a winter inspection trip, said there were but 22 of the animals in the park. That year funds were obtained for establishment of a protected herd, and by 1926 there were 764 buffalo in the park.

Careful feeding, strict enforcement of protective rules, and even vaccinations were required to develop the herd. In 1912, 1919, and 1922 a blood poisoning disease threatened to wipe out the herd, but vaccinations counteracted the epidemic, and since that time no serious outbreaks have taken place.

The herd now has reached such security that park authorities each year cull out the infirm, weak, and undersized animals, slaughter them, and give the meat to Indians, or relief agencies.

FRANCE HOLDS THIRD PLACE IN AVIATION FIELD

PARIS.—[U. P.]—France occupies third place in the world's mercantile aviation, according to figures compiled by the ministry of air.

Since organization of the first regular mail and passenger service in 1919, French civil aviation has grown steadily along two general lines: The network linking Paris with the other European capitals and the colonial service.

Two Projects Under Discussion.

France has the distinction of having a greater number of airplanes per inhabitant than any other nation, and although world-wide conditions have slowed down air traffic, both national and colonial, work is in progress for further development of long distance air lines during 1933.

Two projects are being advanced by aviation circles: Perfection of the trans-Atlantic line to South America and realization of the Paris-Madagascar route through central Africa, with refueling stations in the Sahara.

Becomes Most Air Minded Nation.

Notable progress has been made in the diminution of accidents. France now is perhaps the most air minded nation, and the competition for pilots' licenses has the result that only aces of commercial aviation are entrusted with passengers' lives.

There were only four accidents on French lines in 1932. In these crashes nine persons, of whom only two were passengers, were killed.

The number of passengers taken aloft during 1932 was 36,892. The weight of freight and mail carried was 11,621,295 kilograms and 172,966 kilograms respectively.

England Roused by Pacifistic Talk at Oxford

Anti-War Resolution Outrages and Disgraces Traditions, Leaders Say.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—The whole of Oxford, both the town and the university, and thousands of alumni and a wide section of the British public were in an uproar recently over a violently pacifistic resolution passed by the Oxford union, the most prominent of all organizations in this ancient seat of learning.

"This house will in no circumstances fight for its king and country," read the resolution. It was carried after a debate before the student organization by 275 votes to 153.

Reaction was instantaneous throughout the country. Oxford, where the prince of Wales was a student, where the great of the kingdom have been trained before taking up military or political careers, had disgraced and outraged its traditions.

Union's Claim Challenged by Others.

The union's claim to represent student opinion has been challenged and the motion put down to the influence of parlor bolsheviks among the student body, some of whom provided food, shelter, and transportation for deputations of hunger marchers on their way to London last fall.

Greatest offense was taken at the phrase, "king and country," faintly suggestive of the famous war time recruiting poster on which Kitchener pointed a finger straight at the civilian with the words beneath, "Your king and country need you."

"I am speaking for the people of Oxford," said Mayor C. H. Brown, "when I say that it was a sad day on which those words were spoken and voted for in our university.

"I sincerely believe that if all the great men, the lovers of England, the great soldiers and fighters who have studied in past years in the university, were alive to know what these young men are doing to the noble traditions which they passed down, then they would call these young men of today traitors.

Called Beginning of Communism.

"Even last November, while I was marching to the war memorial, a crowd of these young men walked alongside, waving red flags and shouting and displaying nothing but sheer hooliganism and irreverence. I saw then the beginning of communism at Oxford.

"I say that, as mayor of the city that fathers a university of such foreign communistic sentiments, I am ashamed."

An old Oxford alumnus writing in the Daily Telegraph declares, "The Oxford union in its time may well have passed many motions which have surprised and sometimes pained those who are jealous of its credits. But this motion is unique in this respect, that it must have been read with feelings of shame and disgust by thousands of Oxford men.

"The committee, which selected this motion in a form obviously intended as a gibe on loyalty and patriotism, deserves to be ostracized for perpetrating an outrage on the traditions of the union and of Oxford. It is no less an outrage upon the memory of those who gave their lives in the great war.

"But I fear that it was not only a foul joke but a serious declaration of foul opinion. Older generations of Oxford men have heard with increasing dismay of the Red tendencies at work there and of the gathering strength of the communist 'cells' in the colleges.

"They have evidently captured the union, owing, I suppose, to the usual apathy of the conservatively minded or to their reluctance to mix in that company."

President Defends Vote as Representative.

The vote was defended as representative of the largest body of opinion by F. M. Hardie, president of the union.

"The union is definitely not representative of undergraduate opinion as a whole," Hardie said. "Probably it is more representative than any other single body, and it is quite fairly representative of those undergraduates who are interested in politics. It is the main body of thought in the university. What the union thinks is the same as all those who are politically minded. It represents the political thought of the majority of the university."

Dr. Lindsay, master of Balliol college, said: "I think one reason why the motion was carried is that there are many people who feel that politics is so hopeless that the only thing to do is to say we refuse to fight. There is one thing which should be borne in mind—the union is more swayed by argument than any other body I know.

"I am sure that no disrespect was intended to those who fought in the war. The more one feels about one's king and country, and the more one feels about pacifism, the more one objects to having one's king and country identified with war."

Victims of Indian Jungle.

NAGPUR, India.—(AP)—People killed by wild animals in India in 1932 included 48 victims of tigers, 36 of wolves and bears, and 17 of leopards. In addition, 1,199 died of snake bites.

Scotch Decide They'd Like to Govern Selves

GLASGOW, Scotland.—(AP)—Scotland is the latest fragment of the British empire to want to run its own affairs.

For years the northern tip of the British Isles has had nationalist movements—probably ever since the Romans built the wall—but the demand for self-government was given its most important backing by a recent meeting of prominent Scotsmen under the chairmanship of the duke of Montrose.

Maintain Loyalty to the Crown.

This group passed a resolution saying:

"In view of the ever increasing burdens upon parliament at Westminster with the consequent congestion of business the welfare of Scotland demands the setting up of a responsible parliament in Scotland with full control of all purely Scottish affairs."

The resolution also asserted that the conferees desired to maintain an unimpaired loyalty to the crown and empire and agreed that "separation from England could not fail to be otherwise than prejudicial to national interests and commerce."

Very few, if any, of the factors which governed Ireland's demand for freedom enter into the Scottish picture.

Could Outdo Westminster.

"We do not," the duke of Montrose said, "suffer from tyranny, religious persecution, slavery, or chains of bondage, and our claim is boiled down to the fact that we believe, with a parliament of our own, we could manage our affairs better than they are being run from Westminster."

Not all Scotsmen favor the scheme. The Glasgow Herald, for example, commenting editorially, says:

"From a business point of view Scotland would tend to lose heavily by it, not merely because a parliament in Edinburgh would tend to be composed of men with a parochial outlook, but because any new changes which created differences between English and Scottish practice would inevitably increase the difficulties under which firms north of the border already operate."

English Amused at Suggestion.

Special laws or operating clauses are now framed for Scotland by the English parliament and there are special ministers to deal with Scottish affairs.

Englishmen, as a rule, are not perturbed and sometimes ask, "Why do the Scots want home rule—don't they rule England now?" a sally at the expense of the many prominent Scots in the government.

TRAVELERS' GUIDE

What's your travel problem? Queries regarding costs, accommodations, etc., of travel by land, air, and sea, and places to go and how to get there, both in this country and aboard, will be answered by this department. Answers of public interest will be published. Address your questions to Travelers' Guide, The Chicago Tribune, enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Are passports required to visit Europe? E. V. McK.

Passports with proper visas are required of all passengers going to Europe.

1. What is the difference between a tourist sleeping car and a standard Pullman?

2. May a passenger in a tourist sleeping car go into other cars on the train? J. S.

1. Tourist sleeping cars, though equipped with comfortable beds and other facilities, are not as expensively or luxuriously fitted up as standard sleeping cars. The charges for accommodations are approximately one-half the standard car rate.

2. Passengers buying accommodations in tourist sleeping cars may obtain meals in the dining cars or make use of the seats in the railroad coaches. Railroad regulations confine the use of lounge and club cars to the occupants of standard sleeping cars.

I have bought passage for a Mediterranean cruise this summer. What kind of weather am I likely to meet, and what variety of clothing should I take along? L. L. M.

Europe in general corresponds to our climate, and the Mediterranean is especially pleasant in the late spring and summer, although it is generally supposed the weather there is quite warm. Evening dress is optional with travelers, and usually obtains for those going first class or cabin class on board steamers, as well as at the more pretentious hotels abroad. You would do well to include in your wardrobe stout walking shoes, a loose, comfortable sports outfit, and suitable protection from rainy weather. Those who wear glasses should be sure to take either an extra pair or an eye prescription.

I am planning on taking a trip to the Ozarks in a month or so and would like to know what sort of recreation one finds down there. Is there boating, horseback riding, or fishing? G. V. W.

The playgrounds of the Ozarks include fourteen counties in the extreme corners of northwest Arkansas and southwest Missouri. Among the varied recreations to be found there are fishing, water sports, golf, horseback riding, tennis, dancing, exploring, and hiking. No matter what your demands—the ultra-modern hotel or resort with every social activity, or a modest cottage, or even a well equipped cottage camp—you will find the realization of your plans somewhere in the wooded hills.

Undermine Italian Church

Rival Parties Vie for Control Over Austria

Both Fascism; One Leans Germanward, the Other Follows Italian Brand.

VIENNA.—(AP)—Two brands of Fascism are struggling for supremacy in Austria.

One, the "heimwehr," or "home guard" movement, led by Prince Ernst Ruediger Starhemberg, resembles Italian fascism in its lack of violent emphasis on the Jewish problem.

The other, led by Alfred E. Frauenfeld, is the Hitler movement, militantly anti-Jewish and nationalistic.

Starhemberg's movement aims at an independent Fascist Austria.

Frauenfeld's organization regards Austria as part of "the new Germany" and aims at consummation of "anschlus" or union with Germany.

The Austrian Nazis wear the same uniform as their comrades in the north, and refer to Adolf Hitler as "our chancellor."

Prince Starhemberg's men, on the other hand, are not "blackshirts," nor do they acknowledge allegiance to Mussolini. The feature of their uniform is a soft felt hat with a feather in it.

Aimed at Overthrow of Socialists in Vienna.

Both movements aim at the overthrow of Socialist domination in Vienna.

For years the heimwehr leaders have talked of a great "march on Vienna," and in 1931 the Styrian heimwehr mobilized and started toward the capital. The "putsch" collapsed when the heimwehr in other parts of the country failed to move.

The Hitler movement, unimportant in Austria until recently, has no such failures chalked up against it. Its kinship to the triumphant Nazi cause in Germany has given it an emotional momentum and important sections of the heimwehr lately have swung over to it.

On the other hand, Austria's Nazis are not represented in the government, while the heimwehr has a cabinet minister and the secretary of state for public security. So long as they can work harmoniously with the Christian-social and agrarian parties to maintain the present extra-parliamentary régime of Chancellor Dollfuss this is an advantage.

Adopt an Attitude of Watchful Waiting.

Hitlerism's Austrian leader, Frauenfeld, is confident the political combination soon will break down. The Nazis in Austria therefore have adopted an attitude of watchful waiting, ready to leap into more aggressive action should the Dollfuss régime crack.

What complicates the Austrian situation is that Italy is no friend of "anschluss" and would much rather have an independent Austria between herself and Germany. The Italian attitude toward Starhemberg therefore has been one of friendly helpfulness.

It even is alleged that three new heimwehr newspapers recently started in Vienna owe their existence to Italian money.

The Nazi movement, however, also can count on the support of a foreign power—Germany—with the additional advantage that this power is not regarded as "foreign" by many Austrians.

Turkey to Quit Isolation; Will Test Golden Rule

ANGORA.—(AP)—The Turkish government intends to inaugurate a "golden rule" era in foreign trade.

Turkey is about to scrap her present isolationist system which severely limits foreign imports, says an authoritative report. In its place she will make trade agreements with all countries, like those already made with Spain and the United States, putting trade on a reciprocity basis.

Each foreign country will be allowed to sell to Turkey goods to the value equivalent to the amount the said country buys from Turkey.

Emerald Ring of Peter the Great Sold at Auction

LONDON.—(AP)—There's still money in England for treasures.

An emerald signet ring which belonged to Peter the Great brought $1,250 at an auction which ran only four minutes.

The ring bears the full figure of the czar, taken in early youth. It was formerly in the Royal Academy of Science, and later in the Hermitage, Russia's storehouse of treasures.

The purchaser was Edward Good, a London collector.

Bride Decides Costume Worn by Attendant

Other Queries on Social Amenities Answered by the Etiquette Editor.

By Helen Bartlett.

"I AM going to be a bridesmaid at an early June wedding. Will you please suggest a suitable costume? The bride will wear white and a veil and there will be several other bridesmaids. K. C."

Every detail of the costumes worn by the attendants at a wedding is decided by the bride. You should talk the matter over with her, giving suggestions if you like, but bowing to her wishes in all particulars. Organza seems the most popular choice of materials in either white or pastel shades, sometimes with vividly contrasting accessories. At this season you will find the shops showing gowns to suit all types of weddings.

"If a woman on a business trip is invited to stay overnight at the home of one of the members of her firm and accepts the invitation, is she obliged to write his wife later, thanking her for her hospitality? Is it necessary for her to send a gift? "V. B. N."

The gift is unnecessary, but a "bread and butter" letter should be written to the wife at the earliest opportunity.

"Are silk slippers ever correct for street wear? S. A."

Generally they are not. Occasionally they are worn for street with simple afternoon clothes if they are not at all elaborate.

"Is crystal jewelry correct with sports clothes? J. N."

No. Sports jewelry should be worn, and that in moderation. Real gems are not worn nor any elaborate necklaces, earrings, or bracelets.

Correct Way for Woman to Register at Hotel.

"How does a woman register at a hotel? F. D."

On a public register she signs merely "Mrs. James Howard, Chicago, Ill." If she is unmarried she uses the title "Miss." On the cards that some hotels use instead of the sheet which is in public view, she places her street address.

"If a long engagement is broken is the girl obliged to return engagement or shower gifts? How is this done? "I. L."

Yes, all gifts must be returned with a note that explains nothing more than the fact that the engagement has been broken. No reason need be given. And, of course, the donor should be thanked.

"On a social letter is the street address placed in the upper right hand corner or at its close, beneath the signature and to the left? I have seen it both ways and wondered which was correct. A. L."

It doesn't matter at all; either is correct. It seems to be the fashion now to place it at the close of the letter, but there is no rule about it.

"Will you please suggest a suitable graduation gift for a girl friend? "D. C."

Stationery, a compact, an inexpensive pair of slipper buckles, books, a magazine subscription or perfume would be welcome and suitable gifts.

Entertainment of Wedding Party Is Optional.

"Is the best man obliged to entertain for the wedding party? "J. M. D."

He is under no obligation to entertain, but may do so if he wishes. He is obliged to send a wedding gift.

"Is it still considered absolutely necessary to make a 'party call' after being entertained in a friend's home for dinner? It seems to me a rather foolish procedure with close friends, but I have been informed that convention demands it. E. M. R."

The "party call" is considered necessary nowadays only after one's first invitation to a house to a meal. Making a friendly telephone call after being entertained by old friends is a nice present day custom. The personal call is no longer a tremendously important part of social life.

"Is it correct to use the fancy guest towels in a house where one is visiting? I have heard much discussion about this. I. L."

The answer is yes. That is what they are placed in the bathroom for. Fancy guest towels in a modest establishment are absurd, just as a gold dinner service would be in a kitchenette apartment. But in any case guests should have no hesitation about using what is set out for them.

Hats Worn at Hotel Bridge or Tea Party.

"Do women wear hats at an afternoon tea and bridge party in a hotel? "A. L."

Yes.

"Can a woman have her two daughters by a previous marriage attend her when she marries for a second time? R. E."

At a second marriage a woman has only one attendant, if any. It was formerly considered in questionable taste to have a daughter attend her, but it is so frequently done nowadays that it is no longer criticized. This is just another of the modern practices that custom has made quite conventional.

R. E.: If you will send a stamped, self-addressed envelope I will be glad to send you my booklets on table setting and service, which will answer all your questions.

Picture Called by Sargent Best in World's Fair of 1893 Now Hangs in Deering Memorial Library

"Poet of Montmartre," by Ramon Casas, Given to Northwestern U.

By Eleanor Jewett.

CURIOUSLY interesting stories occasionally filter through from the glamorous 1893 Chicago World's Fair. One of the best of these is told by Chauncey McCormick, vice president of the Art institute and chairman of the fine arts committee of A Century of Progress. John Singer Sargent was visiting James Deering during the World's Fair of forty years ago and as they walked through the exhibit of paintings on display in that fair, Mr. Sargent gave it as his opinion that the "Poet of Montmartre," by Ramon Casas, was the best painted canvas in the show. Acting on this suggestion, Mr. Deering bought the picture, which now hangs in the Deering Memorial library at Northwestern university. It is interesting to compare the painting, in the light with which it was regarded then, with the modern work which now is of such importance.

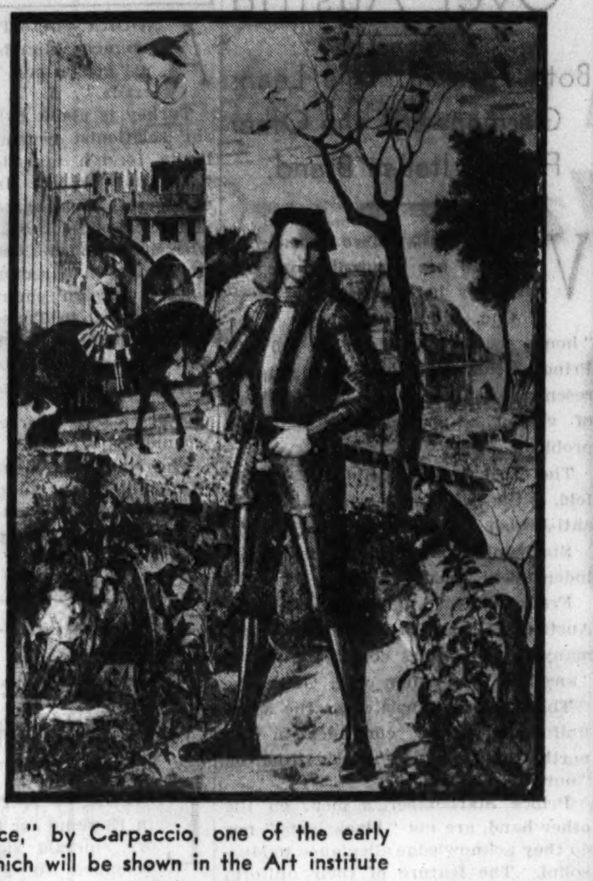
Another painting in the Deering library is the "Portrait of James Deering," by Paul Trebilcock after Zorn. Anders Zorn, the famous Swedish painter, painted the original portrait when he also was a house guest of Mr. Deering during the 1893 fair, and that portrait was one of the great pictures in the fair. From it sprang Zorn's commissions to paint Mrs. Potter Palmer, the striking portrait now in the permanent collection of the Art institute, and the portrait of Arthur Caton, which hangs in the Chicago club.

Whether similarly fine pieces of painting will come from A Century of Progress is still on the knees of the gods.

Walter Sherwood Writes Radio Skits on Painters.

Walter J. Sherwood of the Art institute staff has written four extremely clever and interesting little radio skits about Whistler, Titian, Rembrandt, and El Greco. They present in the form of the dialogue those great painters as living, normal human beings, engaged in their careers but not too wrapped in the glory of their craft to forbid of them being essentially flesh and blood. The little dramas are to be broadcast through A Century of Progress programs and one may expect to be delighted with them now at any time.

Three unique paintings are being received by the Art institute for the summer exhibition from the Joseph W. Widener collection of Lynnewood hall, Elkins Park, Philadelphia. So careful is Mr. Widener of them that they traveled here in a special car. One of them is said to be the finest Vermeer in America. It is the famous "Lady Weighing Gold." Another of the paintings is by Lorenzo di Credi, a self-portrait of the artist at the age of 33. The last picture is a "Portrait Bust of a Lady," by Neroccio di Bartolomemmeo Landi, a Sienese painter and sculptor, who was born in 1447 and died in 1500.



"St. Eustace," by Carpaccio, one of the early masters, which will be shown in the Art institute Century of Progress exhibit opening May 27. It is loaned by the Mogmar Art Foundations, Inc.

Commencement exercises for the school of the Art institute will take place in the Goodman theater on June 6 this year, nearly two weeks earlier than usual. This is due to the preparations for A Century of Progress art exhibit which is to be held in the Art Institute building. Alfred E. Hamill, a trustee of the Art institute, will deliver the graduating address.

Students of Institute Plan Great Mural.

The Art institute news letter prints this: "The students of the school of the Art institute are busily engaged in a great mural project for the Hall of Science, in the geological division, on the fair grounds. The space to be filled is practically 60 feet in width by 12 feet in height. The students of the school have a double incentive to urge them to do their best, for the yearly traveling scholarships depend upon the excellence of their work. If a suitable design results it will be executed at full scale to decorate the ramp in the biological wing of the Science building, the entire class of students taking part in the execution and the finished work marked as student work.

"The traveling scholarships to be awarded are the James Nelson Raymond, $2,000; the Anna Louise Raymond, $1,500; the Edward L. Ryerson, $1,500; the Bryan Lathrop traveling scholarship, $1,500, and the William M. R. French traveling scholarship, $1,000. The students of the art school who have qualified to enter the competition are: Lester Bentley, Thomas Daly, Herbert Longnecker, Constance Maxwell, Catherine O'Brien, Jon Olsen, Stuart Purser, Ann Radville, Howard Reesman, Paul Stoddard, and Mildred Waltrip."

Charlotte Millis and Marion Tufts, two modeling students, are engaged in a sculptural design to be placed in the center court of the Chrysler building on the fair grounds.

News of Interest to Art and Artists.

Miss Betty Fisher, assistant in the photograph and slide department of the Art institute and a former student in the school, has been appointed official cartoonist of the World's Fair Weekly, a magazine which will be published throughout the duration of the fair. Miss Fisher's series of cartoons will be based upon the amusing adventures of two children, and the series will be entitled, "Jean and Bill at the Fair." Miss Fisher won the commission in a competition in which many other ideas were submitted.

The Increase Robinson gallery, Michigan Square building, opened last Thursday an exhibit of work by Lord Hastings. There are paintings, drawings and mural designs by which to gauge his work.

The Anderson galleries have just hung a stunning new exhibit, including a fine group of early English landscapes.

The Cordon club opened last week its annual summer members' show, this year rather a slim one. Chief among the paintings is Anna Lee Stacey's "Moonlight in Cagnes."

Charles Turzak is enjoying a return exhibit in the Allerton gallery. It is one of the most charming exhibitions in town this month. The water colors are delightful; the wood blocks very effective. Among the water colors that are the most fascinating are "The Sale," "The Market," "Peasant Values," "Waiting for Customers," "Girl with Goose," and "Diana Court." Composition is as important to Mr. Turzak as color, and his sensitive feeling for the important motif with a quick discard of the unessential adds immeasurably to the fineness of his work.

Thomas Jefferson League has recently completed his murals for the walls of the nursery in the Ravenswood hospital. The report runs that the decorations are excellently handled and most charming.

The Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, are opening this week-end a magnificent exhibit of flower paintings, a number of which will later go to A Century of Progress for some building. Be sure not to miss seeing the remarkable painting by Jessie Arms Botke, one of the several beautiful paintings the Chicago galleries have brought us this year. It is gorgeous.

PARIS IS DIVIDED ON MEN'S CLOTHING FOR ITS WOMEN

PARIS.—[U. P.]—Despite the fashion armistice signed at the spring style openings here war has broken out again between the camps of those who advocate masculine attire for women and those who are willing to shed blood to keep femininity free from freakishness.

Full fledged masculine modes on women have heretofore been seen only in the movies, but within the last few days a representative group of daring feminists have sallied forth in the full regalia of their husbands, brothers, and sweethearts.

The French say "That may be all right in America, but in France—never!" French women have long been famous for their feminine charm and appeal. Since they have no legal rights they have learned to wheedle their men, flattering them into an agreement that a less tactful approach would have made impossible.

But what man could be mollycoddled into an agreement of any kind by a creature clad in his own clothes, with her hair cut off and slicked down?

The answer is that no Frenchman would permit such a disgusting exposé, and, besides, there is a French law that prohibits it.

The fashionable couturiers, however, have found the one loophole which keeps them on the right side of the law but gives them a chance to avoid the actual evil, while preserving all the appearance of the evil. The mode that is causing all the trouble is a masculine cut dinner jacket worn with a regulation feminine skirt. A sort of Middlesex regiment uniform is what some people call it, for when the woman is seated at a table—if she chooses the boyish bob with a little brilliantine applied—one's first glance is often misleading.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd, of New York.

Chicago, May 31, 1882.

DEAR JULIA: Yesterday was Decoration day and I went to Graceland to put flowers on the graves of our dear ones—the "green tents whose curtains never outward swing." It was a mournful satisfaction to kneel in the little plot where father and mother lie sleeping and thank God for their good lives.

Will, Martha, and Sandy went with me for this office of memory and then I accompanied them to Michigan avenue to see the parade of the League of American Wheelmen, a novel sight as they cycled down our beautiful street. Will joked a good deal about the young sportsmen, who, he said, looked all legs and arms and ears.

They were amusing, to be sure, in their uniforms . . . low shoes, parti colored stockings, knee breeches, and skull cap. Their coats were short to avoid being caught in the wheel.

The bicyclers were all young, their moustaches, to use a Scriptural phrase, being as yet the substance of things hoped for. Very nice fellows, I should say. Some people complain of the two wheeled nuisance, for there are accidents with frightened horses. But the boys might be up to much worse things, I think, than enthusiastically tiring themselves out by wheeling along dusty or sandy roads.

Angus S. Hibbard, mentioned in today's chapter of "When Chicago Was Young," showed his musical proclivities early in life. Here he is at the age of three.

Will says if their parents should ask them to work half as hard in any line not labeled sport they couldn't stand it for a minute.

We entertained one of the visiting wheelmen at lunch, a fine young man named Angus Hibbard from Milwaukee, son of William B. Hibbard, a friend and client of Will's. Angus took part in what was called the "slow race," in which the contestants tried to see who could stick on to the end, reaching the goal last. Quite a difficult feat. A Chicago boy named Edwin Brown won this.

In another race—the quarter-mile dash—was Arthur Meeker, son of friends of ours. We saw a number of riders tumble off, which gave Will a chance to tell his stock bicycle story about a friend of his who, being stout, was advised to ride a wheel in order to reduce. He was successful, according to the tale, for almost at once, he "fell off" a great deal.

Angus Hibbard has written some songs which the bicyclers sing, and we think they are quite clever. One, dedicated to the league, is sung to the college air of "The Bold Gambolier," and makes the welkin ring. It begins:

"Now I am a bold bicycler
And I ride a great big wheel,
I'm a member of the brotherhood
That binds us firm as steel;
Whichever way you call it
'Tis a band of brothers true,
It's the League of American Wheelmen,
Or the L. A. W."

Angus is very musical and has done some successful things in the way of operettas. I have heard one called "Chic." Harry B. Smith is interested in that. I believe Angus would be a good director of an orchestra, but he will probably not follow that as a calling since he has a fine position with the Wisconsin telephone company.

He hopes to go this summer with a group of bicyclers to Canada, where they are promised excellent roads and good entertainment. Interest in bicycling seems to be growing, he says. The boys who go in for the sport are for the most part those who have leisure and a little money, as well, for the Columbia and the Premier bicycles cost, they tell me, about $125 to $150.

Now, with much love, I am
Yours as ever,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

Angus S. Hibbard, consulting engineer for the American Telephone and Telegraph company, has grown up with the telephone and has patented many devices in connection with its use. He designed the familiar blue "Bell" sign, known around the world, wherever the telephone is used.

Next to his profession, song has been his chief interest. Martha tells of his bicycle songs, but he has celebrated golf in the same way, while his "Hail Chicago" is widely known as the city's civic song.

The Hibbard home is at 2440 Lake View avenue. Mrs. Hibbard's chief interest is the Red Cross, and she has knitted 1,200 sweaters for this organization, using reclaimed wool for the purpose.

Send old songs and country sayings to Herma Clark, CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

LEIPZIG FAIR IS SUCCESS DESPITE WORLD'S SLUMP

LEIPZIG.—[U. P.]—The Leipzig fair, long the barometer of business conditions, has given an excellent account of itself this year. In the face of the world-wide depression the attendance and volume of business transacted compares very favorably with other years.

According to the official report the fair included 6,292 exhibitors, representing every phase of modern industrial life. The foreign participation was especially gratifying since 23 countries outside of Germany sent 662 exhibits. More than 115,000 business men attended. The volume of business transacted in all divisions of the fair proved highly satisfactory in view of the industrial unrest.

A great many of these foreign buyers have remained in Germany following up business contracts made during the fair, entailing visits to factories throughout Germany.

Choir Boys in St. Paul's Soon to Hear Sermon

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—After all these years the choir boys at St. Paul's cathedral will be able to hear the sermon, if they want to.

When Sir Christopher Wren started his long task of erecting the great dome in 1675, harried by objections and harassed by money problems, he had little time for acoustics. Nor did any one else during the 35 years the church was building. The result is that there are few structures in the world so hard to hear in.

Recent experiments with loud speakers, however, have proved entirely successful, so far as the choir is concerned. The sermon can be heard perfectly, without the slightly trace of echo.
